Favorite Wins St. Leger Stakes At Doncaster

Doncaster, England, Sept. 11 — (CP) — Airborne today won the St. Leger, with Murren second and Fast and Fair third.

The favored Airborne, big gray winner of the Derby, captured the £6,500 ($26,000) added classic before an estimated 250,000 fans.

Ridden by T. Lowrey, the 3-1 favorite bounded home 1 1/2 lengths in front of the 40-1 shot Murren in the classic race at one mile, six furlongs and 132 yards which last was run in 1938. Murren had three lengths on Fast and Fair, a 100-9 shot performing in the interests of Lord Astor.

J. E. Ferguson, owner of Airborne, refused a mid-summer invitation from New York and Chicago racing interests to bring his gray galloper to the United States for an international match race against Assault, winner of the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont.

Airborne is the first Epsom Derby winner to triumph in the St. Leger since Bahram, later a successful sire in the United States, won both events in 1935.

With Airborne's victory, a theatre in Barnet, Hertfordshire, can take credit for a subtle sixth sense in prognostication. Three days before the race, the movie house flashed on its screen the words: "Airborne wins the St. Leger." Later officials explained it was an advance reel, released in error, which should have been held for Wednesday's result.

The St. Leger, first staged in 1776, is Britain's oldest classic race and the last big event of the flat-racing season.

TORONT OSTOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 11 —(CP)— The industrial and the mining stocks rallied moderately in the early session of the Toronto stock exchange today and in the early afternoon some of the industrials lost part of the gains and a few gold issues extended their gains. Only 664,000 shares changed hands in the first three hours.

Industrials recovered nearly two points and the golds about a point. Alminium firmed 7 points, Hiram Walker 3 and several paper issues including the Abitibis, Minnesota and Ontario, Consolidated, Great Lakes and International came up for point gains. Steel of Canada issues were heavy, dropping 3 to 5 points.

Among stronger golds were Lake Shore, Kerr-Addison, Teck Hughes, Pickle Crow, O'Brien, Sullivan, Buffalo-Ankerite and Chesterville. Heavy trading in East Sullivan developed and the price jumped 40 cents to 3.95.

Labrador, Mining Corporation, Waite-Amulet, Sherritt, Hudson Bay, Smelters and Nickel wree all stronger base metals.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Sept. 11 — (AP) — The sickest stock market in a number of years exhibited signs of convalescence today as leaders retrieved one to six points on their recent sharp declines.

Some brokers were none too impressed by the rally, these attributing it to short covering and bargain-hunter buying. Steels motors, rails, rubbers, oils, coppers, mail orders and utilities were in the forefront of the advance. Extreme gains were reduced in the majority of cases by mid-day.

Conspicuous on the comeback were Eastman Kodak — up six on a single sale — Schenley, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Goodrich, Montgomery Ward, International Harvester, Anaconda, Kennecott, American Smelting, General Electric, Allied Chemical, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, and Standard Oil (NJ).

HOGS

Toronto, Sept. 11 —(CP)— Grade A, dressed, bacon-hogs, were down 75 cents cwt. at Stratford, to farmers $20.65, to truckers $20.80, delivered; down 25 cents at Barrie $21.23 delivered; unchanged at Hull $20.75 delivered, in markets reporting early today.

N. Y. Stock Market Bounces Back From Low

New York, Sept. 11 — (AP) — The stock market today bounced back from its lowest point in nearly a year and a half on a burst of buying that advanced leaders from fractions to more than $6 a share in the opening hour.

The trading was so fast the tape fell behind soon after the opening gong. Steels, motors, rails, oils and rubbers were prominent in the early recovery.

TENDERS

Sealed bulk tenders will be received at the office of Mr. Ross Miller, Ross-Miller Biscuit Company, Napanee, Ontario, until 5 p.m. (D.S.T.) September 16th., 1946, for the construction of alterations and additions to plant of the Ross-Miller Biscuit Company, Napanee, Ontario.

Pinch of Strike By Alta. Farmers Felt in Province

Edmonton, Sept. 11 — (CP) — The pinch of a 30-day strike by 30,000 members of the Alberta Farmers' Union was felt in Alberta today as the union's embargo on milk delivery went into effect at midnight last night — latest farmer move to force federal recognition of demands for establishment of a fact - finding board to set parity prices.

As hundreds of pickets turned out in force to prevent movement of all farm produce, including grain, dairy goods and livestock, to the market, Royal Canadian Mounted Police took stern measures to quell outbreaks of violence at widely-separated points in the province.

As hundreds of pickets turned out in force to prevent movement of all farm produce, including grain, dairy goods and livestock, to the market, Royal Canadian Mounted Police took stern measures to quell outbreaks of violence at widely - separated points in the province.

Meanwhile reports from Saskatchewan, where officials of the United Farmers of Canada, called on their estimated 30,000 members to support the Alberta farmers, said farm deliveries continued normally yesterday with pickets only appearing at scattered points.

Seven Pickets Arrested

While A.F.U. executive member A. D. Olsen was making a radio appeal to farmer-pickets last night to avoid violence and outlining milk embargo instructions, R.C.M.P. reported that seven pickets had been arrested and convicted in Alberta police courts on assault, intimidation and damage charges.

Mr. Olsen instructed pickets to allow milk deliveries to reach children, hospitals and needy cases. He told pickets to try and prevent delivery of all other farm products, including cream, but urged the strikers to avoid violence.

Tightening picket lines caused farmer goods shortages in many Alberta localities yesterday. Southern Alberta, where A. F. U. strength was earlier reported "weak," reported the most critical shortages. All four restaurants at Pincher Creek, 107 miles south of Calgary, closed for want of supplies and tension increased as residents said they would not allow their children to go without milk.

Drastic Decline

Officials of the Calgary stockyards reported a "drastic" decline in livestock receipts. Only 400 head of cattle reached the yards during the first two days this week compared with a normal 1,500 to 2,000 for this time of year.

Striking farmers erected a large blackboard on the main street at Magrath, 20 miles south of Lethbridge, yesterday and said they would print in yellow on it the names of all farmers who delivered commodities.

Alberta dairy farmers were assured of police aid last night to continue milk deliveries through picket lines by R. H. M. Bailey, managing director of the Alberta Provincial Milk and Table Cream Producers Association which supplies the cities of Edmonton, Calgary, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat.

Following a conference with Attorney-General Maynard, he said "the right of any producer to deliver his milk will be upheld" and "the law will be maintained."

RADAR GUARDS MODERN LINERS AGAINST BERGS IN NORTH ATLANTIC

The iceberg season in the North Atlantic lasts roughly from February to October. The bergs are of glacial origin and are known to be part of the great Greenland icecap. The majority of "bergs" are born on the west coast of Greenland and carried by a north-moving current up to Baffin Bay. Here they come under the influence of a south-moving stream known as the Labrador current. This eventually carries some of the bergs down as far as the Banks of Newfoundland. Fortunately, however, only a small portion get so far, because the current has a tendency to set inshore, causing large numbers to run aground on the Labrador coast. Hundreds of others drift into the Straits of Belle Isle. Those that escape, numbering between 300 and 400 in a normal season, drift down the eastern edge of the banks until they reach the gulf stream. Here the warm water soon finishes them off. ABOVE drawing is an artist's impression of the awesome sight of two towering bergs which dwarf an Atlantic liner. The bergs are now plotted by radar and no longer menace the ocean traveller as they did in the days of the Titanic.

100 Tons of Food Destroyed by Fire In Guelph Building

Fire Chief, Police Sergeant Escape Injury in Explosion

Guelph, Sept. 12 (CP)—About 200,000 pounds of food, including 40,000 pounds of butter, was destroyed last night by fire which gutted the General Equipment Building and caused damage estimated unofficially at $150,000. No one was injured.

Furs valued at $100,000 were saved by firemen under Chief Charles Vince. The furs were in a storage annex adjoining the main building.

Chief Vince and Police Sgt. Gordon Whetstone escaped injury when an explosion sent flames roaring through the main floor a few seconds after they entered a side door.

It was an earlier explosion which sounded the alarm. Harry McLeod, owner of the building, said the fire apparently started near a cold storage compressor.

Within a few minutes the flames ate into the 40,000 pounds of butter and 18,000 pounds of hops. The flaming butter created intense heat which hampered firemen as they sought to approach the fire with hose.

Adding to the heat were flames from a large stock of furniture, merchant marine life preservers and other articles stored by Guelph companies.

Included in the destroyed food were about 30 tons of canned soup and a variety of food in the lockers of individual persons. In one end of the basement was a cold storage vault containing 3,000 pounds of poultry.

At the height of the fire the city was without electrical power for about 10 minutes. At the request of firemen the power was cut until high tension lines at a substation near the fire were considered safe from the heat.

The building was originally Halliday's Brewery, erected before 1900. It had a thick concrete wall but firemen said the interior was all of frame construction.

Crown Rebuttal Is Continuing

Toronto, Sept. 12. (CP)—Crown rebuttal to an appeal by Edward Wilfred Mazerall against conviction on charges of espionage will continue today as hearing of the Mazerall appeal enters its fourth day. J. R. Cartwright is acting on behalf of the Crown.

Making lengthy references to precedent and legal maxims yesterday, Mr. Cartwright touched on the accused 's background and said he felt it was inconceivable to believe that Mazerall did not know "he was being false to his duties" when he agreed to supply information to the Soviet though the documents supplied were not important.

"If there ever was a case prejudicial to the safety of the state, it is this case," counsel told the court.

Dealing with the appellant's contention that his deposition to the Royal Commission was given under inducement, Mr. Cartwright said that were there any inducement its only effect would be to make Mazerall tell the truth rather than to shield himself.

RAIL LINE CLEARED OF WRECKAGE

Toronto, Sept. 12 — (CP) — Normal service was resumed today on the Canadian National Railways lines in West Toronto Following the head-on crash yesterday of two locomotives which resulted in the death of Carl White, 22, fireman, of Toronto, and serious injuries to three others.

Hospital authorities today said that condition of three others injured was improved. Investigation of the cause of the accident was continuing.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, September 12 (CP)—Synopsis at 7:30 a.m.: A cold air mass which swept rapidly southward from the Arctic Ocean now covers all of Eastern Canada. Skies were clear Wednesday night over Northern, Eastern, and Central Ontario and temperatures dropped to new lows for the season. In southwestern Ontario a steady breeze tended to prevent a drastic fall in temperature. An additional moderating effect was produced by decks of low cloud which formed over Lake Ontario and Georgian Bay and drifted southwestward blanketing many sections. Southerly winds are bringing generally clear and progressively warmer weather to the Prairie Provinces.

Common People Suffering Through Industrial Disputes

By DAVID McINTOSH
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Halifax, Sept. 12 (CP)—Canada is being "crippled by industrial disputes while the common people suffer," Hugh Templin of the Fergus (Ont.) News-Record said today in his annual report as President of the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association.

"We now have had 13 months of peace but definitely not of plenty," he told the 300 delegates to the 27th annual C.W.N.A. convention here today.

"Things haven't turned out as we expected. Instead of war overseas we have civil war in our own industrial cities. No longer is there any censorship by government or military authorities but the daily papers are afraid to tell the whole truth because of union pressure in their own offices. They are afraid even to supply mat services to certain other daily papers.

"One weekly newspaper office in Ontario was invaded by union members because it was suspected the office was setting type for a Hamilton paper."

Mr. Templin called upon editors to "first know your Canada —and I do not mean simply its geography and its beauty spots. Study its history and know the achievements of our people, particularly in the last 10 years...

"Sectional differences," he said, "are due to ignorance of the other man's point of view. They are not serious as we have been told. With wide knowledge they will disappear. We are being held back now by internal strife. In times like this, editors need knowledge, courage and conviction and the tongues of men and of angels."

General Crerar Releases Letter

Ottawa, Sept. 12 — (CP)—Gen. Crerar, retired commander of the Canadian 1st Division Army, last night released the text of a cordial VE-Day letter he had received from Field Marshal, Viscount Montgomery.

He had been asked to comment on a magazine article by Brig. R. S. (Dick) Malone, former Canadian liaison officer attached to Montgomery's field staff, which spoke of verbal brushes between Monty and the Canadian field commander.

The general said he did not wish to enter into any controversy but thought production of the letter he had received from the Field Marshal at the end of the war would place the relationship between himself and Viscount Montgomery in its true perspective.

The letter offered the Field Marshal's thanks "for all you have done" and added:—

"No commander has ever had a more loyal supporter than I had in you. And under your command the Canadian Army has covered itself with glory. I want you to know that I am deeply grateful . . ."

No comment was forthcoming from McNaughton on Brigadier Malone's reference to "frequent brushes of varying intensity" between the two army leaders and Field Marshal Montgomery.

HOSPITAL BOARD MEETS DEMAND OF STAFF NURSES

Gives $20 Month Raise And Other Matters In Dispute to Be Settled Within One Month

Conditions are gradually returning to normal at the Belleville General Hospital today following the return of 31 staff nurses to duty after a wage settlement.

A committee of the Board of Governors, Mrs. J. Marshall, vice-president of the W.C.A., and Mrs. W. C. Mikel, met with the nurses' committee Wednesday noon when an increase of $20 was offered. The nurses had asked for $25 increase. The committee (nurses) in turn after consulting with their group, finally accepted the offer and a one-month contract was signed later in the evening.

The terms of the contract, besides the wage increase, call for consideration of a straight eight-hour day and other privileges and this will be one of the first duties of the new administrator, Mr. Friesen, when he comes here next Monday.

Prior to the resignation of the nurses, who said it was not a strike, staff nurses were paid a basic rate of $105 less maintenance up to $30 depending on whether they lived in residence, number of meals plus laundry. The new rate will therefore bring the basic rate to $125.

Seven obstetrical cases on Tuesday night taxed the facilities of the hospital to the utmost. An appeal for help was most gratifying and a large number of volunteers of the Women's Auxiliary of the hospital, St. John Ambulance Brigade, Red Cross and others eased the work of the nurses who remained on duty along with the student nurses. Admittances to the hospital were kept to a minimum.

Wednesday there were about 186 patients, including babies, in the hospital, and these were being cared for by 35 of the staff, plus volunteers.

The medical staff at a meeting on Tuesday night expressed themselves as unanimously supporting the nurses in their demand for more money.

Refer Proposal To Committee On Marriage, Divorce

By SHANE MacKAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg. Sept. 12 —(CP)—The Lower House of the Anglican General Synod last night rejected a motion asking it to "regard with sympathy" a proposal by R. V. Harris, Halifax, that the church remarry innocent parties in divorce cases.

Defeat of the motion came after a debate which began Tuesday night and had to be postponed until yesterday's late session.

A third resolution referring the proposal without comment to the Synod's committee on marriage and divorce was passed.

The Synod also recorded its "deep concern" at what it alleged to be the failure of labor and management to interpret and act under present legislation for the settlement of disputes.

Scheduled for discussion today are reports of committees on basic salaries, broadcasting, primatial see, restoration of Canterbury Cathedral and revision of the prayer book.

The Synod will close its 16th session tomorrow night when formal prorogation of the House of Bishops and the Lower House in joint session will take place. The meetings opened here Sept. 4th.

Great Britain's Decision in 1940 Marked Turning Point in War

—Lord Dowding

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 12 (CP Cable)—The British cabinet's 1940 decision not to send further fighter reinforcements to France except for evacuation purposes marked a turning point in the Second Great War, the former Air Chief Marshal Sir Hugh (Stuffy) Dowding said in a dispatch published in the London Gazette.

The dispatch, unfolding some previously unpublished details of the Battle of Britain, was submitted to the air ministry Aug. 10, 1941, when Air Chief Marshal Dowding, now Lord Dowding, was air officer commanding R.A.F. fighter command.

With resources for the impending Battle of Britain "slipping away like sand in an hour glass" and under pressure from France for help, Lord Dowding made a personal appeal in May, 1940, to the British war cabinet against sending additional fighter strength to France. He won his argument.

"If fighter defence had failed in the Autumn of 1940, England would have been invaded," Lord Dowding wrote.

Albania Reported Concentrating Large Forces on Greek Border

New York, Sept. 12. (CP)—The Times said today in a Rome dispatch that Albania during the last few weeks has been concentrating "large forces" on the Greek border, "including two Russian infantry regiments".

The dispatch, by Camille M. Cianfarra, said Albanian troops were being aided by Russian military advisers and "strengthened with Russian materiel, including fighter planes, a small number of medium tanks, mortars, machine-guns and ammunition".

"A wealth of details concerning the troop movements and their location, gun emplacements and the building of fortifications leads to the conclusion that Albania is intensifying her military preparations, especially in the proximity of the Greek frontier."

Question of Arbitration Appears Only Obstacle in Steel Settlement

Ottawa, Sept. 12. (CP)—Developments in steel strike settlement efforts appeared at a standstill today as the work stoppage reached its 60th day.

Comment by Prime Minister Mackenzie King yesterday that he believed the strike was nearing an end lent support to belief that an early settlement was within reach. The main difficulty appeared to be acceptance of the principle of arbitration on remaining issues.

C. H. Millard, National Director of the United Steel-workers of America, (C.I.O.) yesterday wired Labor Minister Mitchell asking for advice on whether the companies, or the government controller acting for the companies, was prepared to accept arbitration on Union security and other matters still in dispute.

There was no comment from the Labor Department on Mr. Millard's wire.

The question of wage increases appeared to no longer be a serious issue. Latest statements from Mr. Millard have made it clear that he is prepared to recommend acceptance of the 11 to 12 1-2 cent increase proposed by the government if the other issues—union security, payment for statutory holidays and the differential which places the rates of Sydney workers below those in Hamilton and Sault Ste. Marie—were settled.

This stand by the union led to belief that if assurance could be given that there would be general agreement to arbitration the union would be agreeable to a ballot vote supported by union officers.

Strikers at the three companies—Dominion Steel and Coal Corp., Sydney, N.S.; Steel Company of Canada, Hamilton, and Algoma Steel Corp., Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.—turned the government's proposals down in weekend meetings by a show-of-hands vote. There was no recommendation for their acceptance by the union.

CALLS WHEAT PACT BREACH OF FAITH WITH U.N. AIMS

Retiring Head of Winnipeg Grain Exchange Calls Agreement "Monopoly"

Winnipeg, Sept. 12 (CP)—George S. Mathieson, retiring President of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, said here yesterday that the Canada-United Kingdom wheat agreement was "a distinct breach of faith, contrary to the terms of the Atlantic Charter and to the avowed aims of the United Nations, to all of which the Canadian government subscribed."

In his address to the annual meeting, Mr. Mathieson said there were not lacking those who "suspect political expediency was the prime motive behind this deal." It "puts the stamp of approval on governments in business and is bound to suggest to other nations that they should consider whether or not self-interest should not require them to adopt a similar line of action in wheat or any other commodity or product."

Terms of Agreement

(Under terms of the agreement, announced in the House of Commons last July 25 by Trade Minister MacKinnon, Canada contracted to sell and the United Kingdom to buy in the crop year 1946-47 a minimum of 160,000,000 bushels of wheat at $1.55 a bushel No. 1 Northern, Fort William-Port Arthur, Vancouver or Churchill; for the crop year 1947-48 another 160,000,000 bushels minimum at the same price; for the crop year 1948-49 another 140,000,000 bushels minimum at a minimum price of $1.25 a bushel, the actual price to be negotiated by Dec. 31, 1947; and for the crop year 1949-50 another 140,000,000 bushels at a minimum of $1 a bushel, the actual price to be negotiated by Dec. 31, 1948.)

$1,000 Reward For Recovery Of Ration Books

Toronto, Sept. 12 — (CP) — Police today announced an increase to $1,000 in the reward offered for the recovery of almost 20,000 ration books stolen Tuesday night from churches and schools in Toronto.

The increase in the reward, previously set at $500, followed a conference between police and Prices Board officials today as efforts of detectives to uncover the hiding place of the stolen ration books failed to bring results.

ATTY.-GENERAL SPEAKS PLAINLY TO C.I.O. COUNCIL

Tells Brantford Stewards Government Will Not be Intimidated

Toronto, Sept. 12 — (CP)—Ontario Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell in a telegram last night to Brantford United Automobile Workers Union officials declared that the province "has no intention of submitting to intimidation in any form," and added that "in particular it will not disregard its obligation to enforce the criminal laws of Canada as a result of such intimidation as you threaten to employ in this case."

It was a reply to a telegram from Robert S. Stacey, representing the Brantford area Stewards Council of the C.I.O. Union, in which Stacey told the Attorney-General that representatives of employees in 12 Brantford factories "emphatically protest the charging of U.A.W. regional director George Burt and others with conspiring to commit illegal acts as a deliberate attempt to undermine the union." Stacey's telegram added that if the charges are pressed the union would consider advising its locals "to take strike action in all plants in which U.A.W.-C.I.O. has membership."

Attorney-General Blackwell's reply said he had been advised of the laying of conspiracy charges against Burt and others, now pending in Windsor courts, and that "it is untrue to suggest that the laying of these charges is for the purpose of undermining the union."

The government has not taken any action, nor will it take any action, to interfere with trade unions legally striking or legally carrying on a strike, Mr. Blackwell's telegram added.

Tobacco in Simcoe Wiped Out by Frost

Toronto, Sept. 12 — (CP) — The temperature in Toronto Wednesday night dropped to 41 degrees, the coldest night since June 1, according to the Meteorological Bureau's report today. At nearby Holland Landing the temperature dropped to 31 and lettuce leaves were reported covered with ice.

The early frost almost wiped out the latest tobacco crops in Simcoe county, where 21 experimental tobacco growers suffered a loss of more than $300,000. Hardest hit by the frost were growers in the Alliston district where practically all the tobacco crops in the immediate area around the town were destroyed.

Temperatures at other Ontario centres included Malton, 37; Muskoka, 32; Pembroke, 27, Sterling, 35.

STRIKE THREATENS ENTIRE LABOR POLICY OF U.S.

Stabilization Board Says Seamen Must Be Content With Wage Raises

By MAX HALL

Washington, Sept. 12 —(AP)—The Wage Stabilization Board's unyielding stand on sailors' pay and threatened spread of the United States maritime strike brought the Truman administration to the crossroads today on its entire labor policy.

Despite moves by union men to tighten the strangling strike which already has crippled every United States ocean port, the board declared again that A.F.L. seamen must be content with wage raises in the "pattern" set earlier for their C.I.O. colleagues.

Thus the White House found itself squarely on the spot where it must make decision that may write labor-management history.

W. Willard Wirtz, 34-year-old chairman of the reconversion-born Wage Stabilization Board, spelled out the issue last night when he asserted that while idle ships are involved — "so is the future of economic stability, not only in the shipping industry but in American industry generally. . . . Every person in this country has a stake in avoiding wage spirals today which can only mean higher prices tomorrow."

Fight to End.

The A.F.L. sailors, who quit work a week ago today in angry protest against the board's shaving $10 and $5 off pay boosts won respectively by east and west coast seamen, replied by pledging a fight "to the bitter end."

C.I.O. maritime workers, already idle because of the A.F.L. tie-up, prepared to go out on strike officially themselves. The C.I.O.-dominated committee for maritime unity moved to New York for another strike-planning conference after meeting here yesterday.

All eyes now turn to President Truman and his right-hand man on labor matters, Reconversion Director John R. Steelman.

Apparently they could:

1. Stand behind the stabilization board and "get tough" with the strikers.

2. Override the board and approve the requested wage increases.

3. Think up some compromise that might settle the strike without repudiating the board (but most government officials professed to have no idea what form such a compromise could take.)

"Getting tough" might mean an all-out effort to run the ships with the aid of the armed forces, as the President threatened to do in the C.I.O. maritime dispute three months ago.

Overriding the board might mean important changes in the present wage-price policy adopted last February 14 during the steel strike.

From any point of view the maritime situation shapes up as one of the toughest problems ever to confront the American labor-management - government triangle.

SUPERGIRL ONE YEAR OLD

Montrose, Pa., Sept. 12 —(AP)—Jean Marie (Supergirl) Strohl, who tipped the scales at 18 pounds at birth, celebrated her first birthday today. The youngster's present weight — it was 33 pounds last April — will be disclosed later today at a weighing-in ceremony highlighting Jean Marie's birthday party.

Will Petition King To Allow Squatters To Retain Holdings

All Vacant Homes Closely Guarded by London Police

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 12 —(CP Cable)—The King will be petitioned to allow squatters to keep their pre-empted dwellings, it was decided today as developments in London's latest "squat swoop" unfolded.

Intervention of Buckingham Palace will be asked by 50 families occupying Fountain Court in Southwest London.

As the Cabinet met to discuss the spreading, illegal movement, which started spontaneously last month with the occupation of abandoned military camps and hutments, Scotland Yard officers instructed all policemen to prevent further invasion of empty homes and apartment buildings.

The government has described the Communist-directed movement as a violation both of civil and criminal law.

Police Take Over.

Morning and evening newspapers splashed the story across their front pages. Police were posted outside all apartments and Hotels taken over by the homeless, "imprisoning" those inside and barring entry to other would-be squatters.

Police reserves with radio cars stood by at strategic points throughout the Metropolitan area in readiness to carry out the government order to "take appropriate action to prevent further forcible entry."

During the night, as police besieged squatter dwellings, men and women sat five-deep in the road outside Abbey Lodge, luxury block apartments in Regent Park in Northwest London.

There was a terrific jam nearly a quarter of a mile long as the squatters ignored police urging to move on. They jeered, sang and shouted: "Bring out blankets, give them food, turn on the water." The gathering delayed traffic nearly two hours.

Police, acting on orders straight from No. 10 Downing Street to end the "forcible entry" of vacant private dwellings, refused to let sympathizers pass food into three of the largest squatter-occupied buildings, despite pleas that "the children are hungry."

In retaliation, the squatters said they planned an appeal direct to the King for help and declared they would seek thousands of signatures on a petition to be circulated at a Trafalgar Square mass meeting tonight. Communist backers of the squatters called another open-air mass meeting near Leicester Square.

Yesterday, the government denounced the whole squatter technique as an unlawful incitement to anarchy and threatened prosecution of the squatter leaders for criminal conspiracy.

"Such action from a labor government against the people who brought it to power would be monstrous," said the Communist Daily Worker. "The government is making a fool of itself with its pompous statement about the danger of anarchy."

Plans to Get Past Barriers

Richard Harding, Communist organizer of last night's swoop by more than a dozen families into the Ivanhoe Hotel in Bloomsbury, said "secret" plans were being made to get 200 more families past police barriers into the 620-room hotel, which has been vacant for six weeks.

Leaders of the five-day-old "luxury squatting" movement, which has installed working class families in a number of apartments normally renting for about £500 ($2,000) a year, also talked of forcing beachheads in the empty mansions of picturesque Hampstead.

Fifty men and women, chanting "give the squatters water," marched to Marlebone town hall from Abbey Lodge, one of London's most expensive apartment buildings, which was seized by squatters yesterday. But no water was turned on and police outside said "No one is going in here today."

From a window of the recently decorated building, a woman shouted:

$18,000 of Loot Is Recovered

Montreal, Sept. 12 (CP) —The secret of $18,000 in loot, part of that stolen in the New Richmond, Que., bank robbery ten days ago lay hidden today in a small key now in possession of Quebec Provincial Police.

Detective Captain J. A. Quenneville said Tuesday night that the key had been found after questioning of eight suspects who have been taken to New Carlisle, Que., for arraignment on robbery charges.

It could not be immediately determined by police whether the key was for a safety deposit box —among those rifled in the bank —or a private strong box. There also remained the possibility that the missing loot may be in Montreal or elsewhere.

So far, Capt. Quenneville revealed, about $86,000 in bonds and money has been accounted for in the theft from the Bank of Nova Scotia branch at New Richmond. An estimated $38,150 in non-bearer and registered bonds was burned by the thieves before any arrests were made. More than $10,000 has been recovered by police and further recoveries are expected.

Two men are still sought by police as ringleaders of the robbery.

Head of Union Takes a Hand

New York, Sept. 12. (AP)—The volume of truck traffic entering New York City rose today following the intervention of Daniel J. Tobin, head of the teamsters Union (A.F.L.) into the city's transportation crisis.

Police reported that the early flow of trucks going to and coming from New Jersey was 10 to 15 per cent above yesterday's volume.

The first break in the 12-day old strike occurred yesterday when Tobin ordered 10,000 sympathizing strikers in New York and New Jersey to abide by their contracts with motor carriers and return to work.

Mayor William O'Dwyer, who had appealed to Tobin to step in and negotiate an end to the paralyzing walkout, ordered police protection for the returning men.

The Commerce and Industry Association of New York said yesterday that the number of workers unemployed in the city because of the trucking and maritime strikes was "creeping toward the 2,000,000 mark."

POLICE HUNT ASSAILANT

Montreal, Sept. 12 —(CP)—Municipal police today were searching for a man who, they reported, criminally attacked a six-year-old girl in a north-end city park yesterday. Hospital authorities where the child was taken, said her condition was "fair."

Full Airing of Danubian Shipping Expected Despite Russian Opposition

Lake Success, N.Y., Sept. 12—(AP)—The whole controversial question of internationalizing Danube River traffic controls, as advocated by the United States, seemed assured today of an early hearing in the United Nations Economical and Social Council.

The intention of the United States to seek a full hearing on the issue was indicated yesterday during preliminary debate as to whether the council should place on its agenda a Yugoslav request for release of some 167 Danube River craft immobilized in the American Occupation zone.

Despite Russian opposition to widening the scope of the question it appeared likely that all aspects of Danubian shipping would receive a thorough airing before the 18 economic and social conferees report back to the Security Council.

Czechoslovakia yesterday presented a last-minute memorandun pointing out that it is a land locked state and asking for similar restoration of an unspecified number of Czech vessels also taken away by the Germans.

F. H. La Guardia, Director-General of U.N.RR.R.A., appealed to the council yesterday afternoon to facilitate the transfer of the refugee problem from U.N.R.R.A. which is due to expire not later than next June, to the proposed International Refugee Organization.

Mr. La Guardia, recently returned from Europe, blamed the "highest level of military authority" for what he called "disturbing and alarming views" on the handling of nearly 1,000,000 displaced persons in occupied territory camps. He charged that Allied military officials had tolerated propaganda in the D.P. camps against the Yugoslav and Polish governments.

DOMINION BANK BUILDING REPAIRED

A repair and alteration job estimated to cost in the neighborhood of $7,000 is now underway at the Dominion Bank building at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets and when finished will see the bank offices slightly enlarged and Schryver's Drug Store correspondingly reduced in area.

New steel will go into the building to strengthen weakened floors. E. F. Rutherford, local contractor, is doing the job.

MANUAL CONTROL PLACED ON LIGHT

Modern ingenuity is gradually dispensing with hand labor and a further demonstration to this effect was seen in the city early this week when local police started directing rush hour traffic at Front and Bridge streets from the curbside instead of the centre of the intersection.

To speed traffic at rush hours police have been turning off the automatic light system and have been directing traffic by the time honored "hand and whistle" method. This week hydro technicians installed a new gadget at the traffic light switchbox control through which the traffic officer can stand on the corner and change lights at will.

CHLORINE SUPPLY QUITE ADEQUATE SAYS COMMISSION

Although Brockville has only a three-weeks' supply of chlorine on hand to purify its drinking water, local Public Utilities officials told the Ontario Intelligencer today that there is no shortage here thus far.

Some centres are worried about the chlorine supply as the strikes at the salt plants in Windsor and Wallaceburg have caused a shortage of the purifier.

Public Utilities here gets its supply from a Montreal plant, O. H. Scott said, and thus far there has been no difficulty in getting orders filled.

15,000 RATION BOOKS ALREADY DISTRIBUTED

Upwards of fifteen thousand new ration books have been distributed to residents of the city up to Wednesday night, Ration Board chairman Harold Bateman said today. The City Hall will be open today and Friday from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. and will definitely close on the latter date and time.

Residents have been orderly throughout and have conducted themselves in a co-operative manner, Mr. Bateman said. He paid tribute to the fine co-operation of the Kiwanis Club ladies who have assisted some 75 strong each day. "Without their help and co-operation given voluntarily," the books could not have been issued with the precision and despatch that have marked the work thus far."

10,000 New Cases Of Amoebic Dysentery

Toronto, Sept. 12—(CP) — At least 10,000 new cases of amoebic dysentry, an ailment common in tropical countries, are scattered across Canada, Dr. Murray Baird of Vancouver estimates in the current issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal.

Medical men said they believe the disease has been transmitted by former servicemen stationed in tropical countries during the war. Six members of the staff of Chorley Park Military Hospital here were presumed to have contracted it from patients — soldiers taken prisoner at Hong Kong in 1941.

Research scientists said that in temperate climates symptoms of amoebic dysentry may be chronic ill-health, vague abdominal pains or lassitude rather than the diarrhoea symptom.

Sale of Radio Licences Still Slow Despite Check-Up

Despite the fact that legal action will be taken against delinquent radio owners, the sale of licences has not been very encouraging since he made his first check-up a couple of weeks ago, Mr. A. G. E. Argue of the radio division, Department of Transport said today.

Mr. Argue stated that action will be brought against twenty city residents in the immediate future, with the possibility of that number being increased. Sale here today is approximately sixty per cent.

"People here are not hostile to the idea of buying the licenses," he said, "they apparently just don't bother about them."

The government representative will be in the city for the next two days on an official check-up of licences.

Industrial Commission Praised On Booklet Recently Released

Members of the Belleville Industrial Committee met this week to discuss the distribution of the recently published booklet "Industrially Yours" which is intended for distribution among industrial heads who might be interested in locating branches in Belleville.

Letters from the C.N.R. commissioner of development for New York City and also from the chief of development in Montreal were read congratulating the local Industrial Committee on their booklet. Enclosed with the two letters were lists of prospects to whom it was suggested that the booklet might be distributed.

Members of the Chamber of Commerce and manufacturers in the city will be contacted to discuss the possible distribution of the booklet to various firms with which they might have contacts and who may be interested in locating in Belleville. It was also suggested that the members of the Junior Board of Trade may be interested in assisting to distribute the booklet.

Chairman of Industry, Mr. Lorne McDougall, reported on a number of industrial inquiries which he had received and stated that negotiations were being carried on with these firms.

Industries which had within recent months located in the city included the Avon Jewellery which now employs 18 persons and expects to double its capacity; the Shirley-Dietrich Company saw making firm which employs between 25 and 30; The Bata Shoe Company which has taken space in the Graham building and would employ from 30 to 50 hands, and the Clearite Co. soya bean plastic manufacturers have also acquired space in the Graham building.

Many Observe Circus Unloading At C.N.R. Station

Those abroad in the city early today were greeted with an unaccustomed yet familiar sight as the Clyde Beatty Circus detrained at the railway station and began its trek to the circus grounds where shows will be presented this afternoon and tonight.

Fine horses, cages of animals, the famous colored wagons and all the circus "trimmin's" of years ago were present. The circus arrived from Kingston on a long train of double-length steel cars.

Immediately following the "spotting" of the long train of sleepers, flat cars and stock cars, the haul to the circus grounds began. Harnessed elephants and tractors hauled the heavy wagons containing baggage and cages. Men milled everywhere and wide-eyed spectators including many small boys took in the strange but welcome sight.

Before the last car had been unloaded the Circus Grounds had already taken on the general appearance of "Circus Day."

Said to be one of the most modern shows of its kind, the circus will feature Clyde Beatty, famous animal trainer, in person who battles lions and tigers single-handed in a huge steel cage. Mrs. Harriet Beatty, wife of the famous trainer shares honors with her husband in another animal act in which a Royal Bengal tiger is made to ride atop a giant Asiatic elephant and later to jump through a blazing hoop.

Pipe Shortage Has Reached Serious Stage

Shortage of cast iron pipe in Canada has reached one of the most serious stages in history, according to O. H. Scott, Public Utilities manager here.

Mr. Scott quoted a letter received from a well-known Toronto foundry which stated, "We regret to advise there it not a length of 4" cast iron pipe in the country, and delivery of this size is absolutely indefinite. Due to lack of raw materials and the present steel strikes, we believe our plant will be forced to close within the next few days, and the earliest possible shipment of 6" pipe would be the early part of 1947, which would, of course, depend on the length of the present strikes."

Mr. Scott also pointed out that his office has been awaiting delivery of transformers since January 8 of this year, but not much hope is held out by manufacturing companies to the effect that the transformers will be delivered in the immediate future.

1523 New Ration Books Are Stolen In Montreal

Montreal, Sept. 12 — (CP) — Theft of 1,523 ration books from the Souart school on Northeast-end Papineau Avenue was announced today by Montreal police who said entry was gained by smashing a door at the rear of the school.

Discovery of the theft, which happened early yesterday, was made by a guardian at the school but was only made public today.

(By The Canadian Press)

Somewhere in secret caches, what appeared to be an organized black market underworld held as loot today thousands of stolen ration books, a potential threat to orderly distribution of food in Canada as police sought to guard against further such thefts.

The thefts — in Toronto, Vancouver and Winnipeg — were estimated by some sources as potentially worth upwards of $125,000 to black market operators.

They represented millions of pounds of rationed food—butter, meat, sugar.

O. W. Rodomar, administrator of consumer rationing at Montreal said the thefts looked like the work of an organized gang. He said the gang must be "desperate for genuine coupons and apparently willing to go to considerable lengths to get them."

These actions sent police and detectives into one of the greatest of Toronto police hunts, a chase still hot when similar but smaller thefts were reported yesterday from Vancouver and Winnipeg.

At Vancouver, more than 6,000 of the new, un-issued books were stolen from three schools, at Winnipeg, one school was entered and 416 books stolen.

Rev. Dr. T. Jones New Moderator Of United Church

Montreal, Sept. 12—(CP)—The 12th General Council of the United Church of Canada entered its second day of sessions at the Erskine-American Church today under the chairmanship of its new Moderator, Rev. Thomas W. Jones of Montreal, whose election last night was unanimous.

Items on today's agenda include the reports of the General Council executive and of the judicial committee and the treasurer's statement and a discussion of the revision of the United Church manual.

Dr. Jones, who succeeds Rt. Rev. Jesse H. Arnup of Toronto, has been pastor of Calvary United Church here for 28 years and has held several official posts in the United Church of Canada, including the presidency of the Montreal and Ottawa conference.

He went overseas during both World Wars with the Y.M.C.A. and held the rank of Honorary Captain.

A native of Oxfordshire, England, the 59-year-old clergyman came to Canada in 1910 to enter the Congregational College, in Montreal.

Two other nominations—those of Rev. F. R. Hendershot of Brantford and Dr. Walter Brown, vice-chancellor of Victoria University, Toronto — were proposed but each asked that his nomination be withdrawn.

Dr. Arnup, in his farewell address, said that in harmony with the spirit and ultimate objectives of the worldwide movement, the United Church of Canada should press forward into full organic union with such communions as may be ready to unite.

The necessary cleansing of the world of conditions and attitudes which lead inevitably to war "cannot be achieved by a politically-minded Roman Catholicism acting independently and a nationalistic Protestantism uttering fragmentary judgments in accord with the national policy of the country to which each section chances to belong," he said.

On the issue of war and peace, "Christendom will never be heard effectively until it speaks in one voice, representing the whole Christian world."

OLD BREWERY GUTTED

Guelph, Sept. 12 — (CP) — Fire which broke out shortly after 11 p.m. last night and raged throughout the night gutted the old Holliday Brewery building on Fleet Street, one of Guelph's landmarks.

Used in recent years as a cold storage plant, the three-storey stone building was destroyed by the flames. Firemen still poured water on the ruins this morning.

Furs valued at $100,000 contained in a cold storage vault were reported undamaged.

Further Addition To Rickarton Staff

Already famous for its foods the Rickarton Castel Hotel, Picton, is not curtailing its efforts to vie with the best when it comes to the culinary art, as is evidenced by the fact they have retained the services of yet another world famous chef:

PETER J. BRANCATIE known by Royalty as Peter Pan has served in the capacity of chef to English and Holland Royalty.

Signor Brancatie was chef on the Royal train that carried our present King and Queen and entourage through Canada in 1939, he was also chosen as chef to Princess Juliana of Holland, during her sojourn in Ottawa after the fall of Holland and Belgium.

As chef at the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa, and the Chateau Louise, Banff, Peter Brancatie has proven his arts to more Royalty served in Canada than any other chef on this continent.

Rickarton Castle, Picton, is mighty proud that it has obtained this addition to their staff which is always ready, willing and able to serve their guests three times a day, every day in the year, with food par excellence and having that European touch.

Squads from Wardsville, Thamesville and Rodney fire departments joined the fight to prevent spread of the flames to the company's big storehouse and lumber sheds. The furniture factory, upholstery shed and pattern factory were destroyed.

Skeleton Staffs Have to Serve Overcrowded Hospital Wards

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Two out of three hospitals in Canada have been hit by shortage of nurses. Many have been forced to close wards, and even entire wings. In others, skeleton staffs, working long hours, are endeavouring to handle the increasing number of patients.

At the same time a survey by The Canadian Press shows there are more nurses in Canada than before the war.

Hospital officials claim that whereas the ideal ratio is one graduate nurse to attend to four patients, nowadays a hospital considers itself lucky if it has one to 15 or 20.

A new world which sees men and women taking advantage of health insurance schemes, receiving medical attention they otherwise couldn't afford, is partly responsible for the hospital's growth in popularity.

In Welland, Ontario, there are approximately 150 per cent more patients at the Welland County General than there were eight years ago.

Other Demands.

A shortage of domestic help and an increased demand for special duty nurses also has increased the burden of hard-pressed hospital staffs.

The nursing profession still attracts more girls than can be trained in most of the 170 civilian hospitals operating schools throughout the country, but a large percentage of them upon graduation, turn to industrial nursing where the pay is higher and the hours more regular than in hospitals. Others find employment in military hospitals and Department of Veterans Affairs Institutions.

The nursing schools graduate approximately 3,500 nurses annually, but they cannot continue preparing nurses in the numbers required for the variety of services in which they now find employment.

The result has been an impasse which can only be overcome by re-organizing the entire profession. Plans of the Canadian Nurses Association and the Canadian Hospital Council are being made with this end in view.

"The association and the council now are embarking on an exhaustive study of the various angles presented by this problem and will work out recommendations for a satisfactory solution," said Dr. Harvey Agnew, of Toronto, council secretary.

"A number of other organizations including the federal government are being invited to participate in this study and it may prove necessary .. that a considerable revamping of the duties of the nurse in the hospital and of her educational preparations may have to be done.

"Much thought is being given to the development of schools for the training of nurses' aides, or assistants, as major contributors to a permanent solution.

Meanwhile, provincial governments and even the communities themselves have taken steps to encourage girls to go into the nursing profession, and to make the hospital jobs more attractive.

Boost Nurses' Salaries.

In Halifax, increased salary scales for nurses in the city-controlled tuberculosis and infectious diseases hospital have been approved by Halifax City Council which has established an annual salary scale of $1,080, plus living-out allowance for registered nurses.

Wages in N.S. hospitals have averaged $60-$90 monthly with room and board for general duty nurses. The Association itself sets private nurses rates at $5 for an eight-hour day and $7.50 for a 12-hour day.

During the last four years the Quebec government has given between $30,000 and $40,000 a year in $100 training bursaries as well as other bursaries to help would-be nurses obtain the necessary qualifications of passing fourth year high school.

Montreal hospitals are managing to fill quotas for nurses-in-training, but a scarcity of applications is more noticeable in outlying districts and in the smaller towns.

Quebec province urgently needs at least 612 hospital nurses. In Montreal's St. Justine Hospital, which this August had 145 cases of infantile paralysis, there was a shortage of 55 general duty nurses.

At Galt, Ontario, the Public Utilities Commission has authorized a grant of $3,500 toward the opening of a nursing school at the city hospital.

In Peterborough, Ont., in order to stimulate enrolment for fall classes, ten local manufacturers sponsored an advertisement which attracted a large number of student nurses into the fall classes.

The city council of Owen Sound, Ont., has arranged for a vote of taxpayers on a $300,000 grant toward the building of a $500,000 addition to the hospital, to include a new nurses' training school and residence. A total of $100,000 has been obtained already by public subscription.

Applications Numerous

Applications from girls anxious to go into nursing generally have been plentiful, although in some cases outlying centres have found them scarce.

At Windsor, Ont., officials at Grace Hospital report their fall class has been filled and already half of the applications for the February class have been received.

Toronto General Hospital nursing school reports the fall class totals 72, twelve more than last term, and all the school can possibly handle.

At the University of Manitoba, Winnipeg, applications have had to be turned down this year for the nursing course. The class this term totals 35, double the number in 1943, the first year the course opened.

Today is Circus Day in Belleville

Long before Belleville residents had enjoyed their toast and coffee this morning, the big Clyde Beatty Trained Wild Animal Circus, aboard its own mile-long train of double-length steel railroad cars, steamed into town coming from Kingston over the C.N.R. line.

The big show, here for a one day visit, is exhibiting at the Station and Cemetery street grounds at 2:30 and 8 p.m. with doors opening at 1 and 7 o'clock.

The hundreds of people with the circus as well as the elephants, prize blooded horses, and the congress of rare animals in the show's menagerie were greeted by youngsters of all ages at the railroad sidings this morning.

No sooner had the gay string of sleepers, stock and flat cars been spotted at the street crossing for unloading, than the haul to the circus grounds began. Teams of harnessed elephants as well as tractors immediately started towing cages and baggage wagons along the ramps and into the clear, and before the last railroad car was emptied of its fascinating freight, canvas crews were erecting a magic city of gleaming white tents at the show grounds.

Featuring the world - famous Clyde Beatty who shakes dice with death twice daily in battling 40 ferocious, savage, bloodthirsty lions and tigers in the big steel cage, the 1946 performance is ultra modern, yet "circusy" to the core.

Sharing honors with her famous husband, Mrs. Harriett Beatty presents another wild animal act of her own conception in which a ferocious Royal Bengal tiger is made to ride atop a giant Asiatic elephant and later jump through a blazing hoop.

Adhering to every big top tradition, Clyde Beatty and his staff have skillfully blended an avalanche of circusdom's foremost features into a refreshingly new sequence of up-to-the-minute entertainment, highlighted by exciting music, frolicsome merriment, and flamboyant coloring.

An impressive array of top-flight attractions make up the gigantic 1946 program in which scores upon scores of world-renowned circus stars participate.

Prominent among the multitude of allurements in the arena and in the air, are the Flying Concellos whose breath-taking exploits on the flying trapeze have been the toast of two continents; the Sensational De Waynes, whirlwind acrobats, formerly featured by Rudy Vallee in his U. S. Coast Guard revue; Don Francisco, unrivaled and amazingly versatile genius of the slackwire; and the Great Olveras, high perch artists of exceptional daring.

Additional thrills are provided by the Seigrist, Escalante, and Sleeter troupes of aerial marvels; Jack Joyce, America's foremost master of equitation, and his superb troupes of high school and liberty horses; Senor Phil Escalante, Latin American daredevil of the silver strand; a fantastically beautiful new all-girl Cloud Ballet exemplifying grace and precision at lofty heights; Morales' educated canines and military ponies; tons of peerless performing elephants in new routines and manoeuvres; and a host of other circus champions together with Kenneth Waite's convulsing convention of clowns.

LAST RATION BOOK

Ottawa, Sept. 12 (CP) — The new ration book No. 6 now being issued to Canadian consumers is expected to be the last ration book to be issued, Prices Board officials said.

They confirmed that the absence of the usual application blank in the new books means that it is expected to see the consumer through to the time when rationing will be discontinued.

"The No. 5 book lasted approximately two years," a spokesman said. "It is thought the book now being issued will end rationing. That is as far as we can go at the moment."

Trenton Pigeon Club Concludes Good Year

(Contributed.)

The young bird racing season ende dwith the 300 mile Les Farrell trophy being won by the loft of Percy Robertson of Trenton. The race program has been an extremely hard one and the winning loft deserves a lot of credit. Three hundred miles for a young bird, five months old, flying the lake shore course with its many high winds and cross currents made it a difficult task for the birds flying this route. To the knowledge of the writer the Trenton and District Club was the only one in Ontario flying this distance. It may have been too tough a grind for young birds, however as the Club progresses errors made will be eliminated in due course. It has already been decided that the 1947 young bird races be limited to 150 miles with a special derby race to be flown from the Windsor Station a distance of 300 miles with a few birds being nominated early in the season for this event. This would mean that 75 per cent of the young birds raised in 1947 would not go beyond the 150 mile mark thereby leaving a number of experienced birds to compete in the yearling races the following season. This is a complete reverse to the past racing season and another step in experience for the Club.

Here is a list of the young bird race points with the winners of the first three positions giving the yards per minute flown by each bird.

Oakville, 116 miles: Wardaugh, Belleville, 1666.61; Simpson, Brighton, 1653.11; Simpson, Brighton, 1646.45.

Whitehall Notebook

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 12—(By mail)—(CP)—Prime Minister Attlee one of these days will invite his closest intimates in the government to a pipe and a chat and will tell them about proposed cabinet changes.

It will be an informal meeting.

Mr. Attlee — "Clem" at such conferences — has the ultimate responsibility of seeing that the best men and women are in the places where they best can serve the national interest.

But he is a good listener, and he gives due weight to all that Foreign Secretary Bevin; Herbert Morrison, Lord President of the Council; Hugh Dalton, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Arthur Greenwood, Lord Privy Seal, have to say.

Mr. Attlee will listen but not necessarily accept these opinions or even yield to their wishes. If he were the type that yields, Mr. Dalton would be at the Foreign Office and Mr. Bevin would be Chancellor of the Exchequer, for they had their ambitions when labor took power.

This is the kind of meeting that Whitehall speaks about with a note of awe in its rusty voice.

Messrs. Bevin, Morrison, Dalton and Greenwood, tough and confident in their appearances in the Commons and at party caucuses, take heed of public opinion and criticism of the government. When a minister has failed, they faced the fact. By the same token, they accept that younger men like stormy Aneurin Bevan, Minister of Health, have come near the top in labor esteem and must be taken into closer consultation.

These senior ministers, with experience in the coalition administration during the Second Great War, must contrast their sessions with those when Winston Churchill presided. Genial Mr. Churchill still never let his ministers forget that he was in the chair and was their leader. Mr. Attlee, here as at every other gathering, is almost unobtrusive, a slender, thoughtful figure almost hidden behind the large pipes he favors.

Yet he is the man who must swing the axe—perhaps tell some lifelong friend and supporter that the pace has been too hot for him and he must yield his portfolio.

Empey Hill

Empey Hill — Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Richmond, of Tamworth, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kimmerly on Friday.

Miss Jean Tucker arrived home from Gull Lake on Sunday after spending the summer there.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Winter and Bert, Mr. Wilbert Winter and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hutchinson were in Kingston on Friday evening and called on Mrs. S. E. Winter, who is a patient in the General Hospital.

Mrs. George Somers has returned home after visiting her aunt, Mrs. T. Miller, Collins Bay.

The families of this community, who are members of St. Mark's Anglican Church, Deseronto, learned with regret of the death of their rector, Canon Radcliffe in the Kingston General Hospital on Friday evening.

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

Mary had a little lamb!
You do not seem surprised?
Of course you don't, for Mary has Been widely advertised.

There's something you may learn from this,
If you are not a clam;
You can be just as widely known
As Mary and her lamb.

Your name can be a household word
And you be known so well,
That folks will confidently buy
The things you have to sell.

And when you once have got yourself
Into the cheering rays
Of the sunlight of Good publicity
You'll bet your life it pays.

Kinsmen Make Gift

The $2,650 cheque which the Kinsmen Club has presented to the City of Belleville as a contribution towards the proposed installation of an ice plant in the Arena is a gift which shows the measure of the spirit of the club and which will assist very materially in equipping the rink for the sake of sports competitions. and entertainment and recreation. The club placed the seal of its interest and approval on the city's undertaking in securing the rink for the public and it is not to be wondered at that Mayor Follwell referred to the presentation as one of the happiest experiences he has had as chief magistrate. The gift itself besides the benefit it brings in the improvement of the value and use of the rink will serve to enlist the public interest in assisting other public efforts and enterprizes.

The various clubs have been doing a noble service to the community and to the larger sphere beyond the city boundaries because such services as they render cannot be bounded within a community area and stop there. All these services are proof of the vitalizing spirit that lies in these clubs with their stress upon the co-operative spirit in the life of city and country.

Grain Crops

With characteristic spirit the farmers of the Old Country went to work with all their energy at dawn Tuesday as the sun shone out in all its glory after a long siege of rain which had deluged the fields and left the grain standing in water in many parts. That the rainy season had caused a loss of perhaps twenty-five to forty per cent of the crop has not daunted the spirit of the harvesters of Britain. They were up with the dawn to do their work of salvaging the stooked grain, so that it might dry and be gathered.

Canada has been favored by nature, though having in parts less rain than has been expected and desired. The Briton though nature worked against the usual size of grain harvests can be depended upon to make the best of what he gathers in.

Canadians admire the spirit such a people as the British show in spite of all the trials through which they have gone including the recent rationing of bread which came unexpectedly in that country that she might do her share to help the hungry millions of many parts of the Continent of Europe. Fortunately Canada has good harvests of grain under way and this will make possible aid in helping the world situation.

It may be mentioned that it has been suggested that for a world pool of grain Canada may be asked to set aside one hundred millions of grain for world emergency and that certain other depots be set up so that there would be food for distribution which would remove possibility of famine anywhere in the world. Such indicates a trend of sympathy of outlook and undertaking to remove any threat of peoples in certain parts of the world having to run the threat of lack of food, especially wheat and its products. The community of interest in food should and can be a tie linking nations more closely together.

Canadian Ideals

Nine Provincial Ministers of Education meeting at Edmonton have decided on a government-sponsored course of training for new Canadians.

A course of training in citizenship should give the newcomer to Canada the opportunity of making himself or herself quickly and accurately familiar with what Canada means or should mean to those who dwell within her borders. Many persons of foreign origin have in the past neglected to understand what citizenship means in the benefits it provides those who live in this country. The course in citizenship should correct this situation.

After two wars in which the people have seen the clash of ideologies and the misunderstandings of the true meanings of citizenship, people will no doubt welcome such a step to help the new citizen to understand his opportunities and his responsibilities as a Canadian.

Such a course can make clear the ideals of democracy and of loyalty to Canada as qualities absolutely necessary for good citizenship. Something must be known of the Canadian form of government that all her citizens may see in it the hand of a democratic people. Another great tie of any people is that of language and the literature, history, geography and press of the nation. Of late geography has come into its own importance as a subject of study. The nation's history cannot fail to show the origin and the growth of national ideals and their value.

To obtain most benefit in a country it is necessary to appreciate and understand the spirit that dominates the whole people.

Some newcomers catch the inspiration and become in a short time strong supporters of the Canadian way of life because they are sympathetic.

Such a course as proposed can remove misunderstandings, or prejudices which newcomers might bring from other more ancient lands where the way of life and the ideals are so different from those of the Canadian people.

With an adequate knowledge of Canadian ideals of citizenship, the best interests of the new citizens and all citizens will be served. Every citizen should be in accord and harmony with our national ideals. Knowledge and training will help to fit new citizens to take their full part in the life of the nation and will give them pride in the country in which they have cast their lot.

Learning to Survive

Young birds acquire their essential knowledge already made. Though bird youth may learn a bit through experience, by trial and error, their equipment for successful living largely comes via their ancestors, through hand-me-dawn inheritance. Most of their habits and behavior are prompted by instinct. If we could do algebra instinctively, school days surely would be brighter.

Many young mammals, however, go through a kind of schooling. Some, born in late winter, or in spring, have finished a training period by September, and are ready to graduate. They cannot "repeat their year;" if they fail, they die — by the swift pounce of the predator, the gun of the hunter, from hunger or accident. Some of the teaching is by the parent, some comes in play, and some by the rough school of experience. Young wolves may stay in the family pack "under instruction" for a year or more. Black bear seldom has more than two young, and can spend a good deal of time slapping her cubs into good behavior.

Some young mammals are bright, some are dull, some profit by their training, some do not.

LETTER XII

Beloved, the children are happy, and browned to the waist by the sun.
I remember that often you told them: "We come here to laugh and have fun."
Well, they've laughed and had merriment, truly, as always you wished them to do,
And the baby will shortly be walking; she's taken that first step or two.

I went to the beach just to watch them, and Ellen is swimming at five.
And can you believe it, already young Edgar has learned how to dive,
The baby is fond of the water, she laughs as the waves sweep the sand.
She chuckles with glee while out wading, if someone has hold of her hand.

Such meals as those youngsters are eating! We don't have to coax them out here,
They are drinking their milk, as they ought to, with never a whimper or tear.
'Twould do your heart good to behold them, and often I'm sure that you do—
For whenever, I turn in the octtage there's something that whispers of you.

The dog was in an upstairs window over Harger and Pearson's grocery store, corner of Campbell and Front Streets, when the fire alarm was sounded. As the hose reel came up the street at a fast rate the dog bounded out of the window and fell upon the awning below, through which he fell to the walk. The awning was badly torn and several pedestrians standing beneath it were greatly startled.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What causes some twins to be identical?

Two distinct types of twins, triplets and other products of multiple births are recognized—fraternal and identical.

Between 20 and 25 per cent of twins and triplets born in the United States are of the identical type.

Fraternal twins may be the same or different in sex and they are not more alike in body and mind than children in the same family usually are.

Identical twins are always of the same sex and blood type and they bear a close physical and mental resemblance to each other even when not brought up together in the same environment.

Each fraternal twin is produced by a separate germ cell, while identical twins are both produced by the splitting of a single egg cell after fertilization.

In biology "monozygotic" means developed from a single sygote or fertilized egg and "dizygotic" means developed from two sygotes or fertilized eggs.

An interesting parallel occurs in the animal kingdom. In most mammals that bear more than one young at a time each offspring is derived from a separate egg cell. But the female of the nine-banded armadillo and related species bears its young in litters of four and the members of any given litter are invariably of the same sex. This characteristic is peculiar to the armadillo and scientists believe it is due to the fact that in this animal all the members of a litter are developed by the cleavage of a single germ cell after fertilization. Apparently a single embryo at a certain stage divides and subdivides into four parts and each part delevops into a separate offspring.

Identical twins, triplets, quadruplets, etc., in the human race are believed to be produced in the same way and that is supposed to be the reason that they are always of the same sex and blood type.

Human beings are the only mammals known to deliver both fraternal and identical offspring.

Both fraternal and identical types may occur in the same multiple birth. For instance, four children born of the same mother at the same time might be fraternal quadruplets, identical quadruplets, identical triplets and a fourth member fraternal in respect to the other three, two separate sets of identical twins, or one set of identical twins and two children fraternal in respect to the identical twins and to each other.

See Larger Market For Books By Canadian Writers

By JOHN WALKER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Canadian publishers say a big field for the Canadian writer is developing right here at home—for the reading public is demanding more and better books by native authors about the Dominion.

Publishers say increased demand came with the war and has not slackened since. A more mature outlook, the information of the reading habit during dreary war years and more spending money are among reasons they give for the present boom. They still have a backlog of unpublished manuscripts which they are gradually releasing as the exigencies of the publishing field permit.

Chief difficulty is scarcity of materials and labor. Though controls over paper are ended, most firms say they find it hard to obtain all they require now that the market is open to all-comers on an unrationed basis. Inability to obtain parts for worn-out machinery is another factor.

Labor shortage began with the loss of men for war service. Now they are taking advantage of rehabilitation schemes or entering new lines of work. Binders are also scarce and many book firms now have their books bound by an outside firm.

Publishers say one of the encouraging signs of the times is the great number of Canadian authors whose works are selling well against the stiff competition of highly-publicized American writers. Themes emphasizing various aspects of Canadian life in fiction and history are popular.

Another hopeful omen is seen in increasing interest in translation of French-Canadain novels into English. Critics of Canadian literature have been drawing the attention of publishers and public to this little -developed field.

Interest in political and economic subjects, developed during the war, has not dwindled. Servicemen had the use of camp library facilities, giving them an appreciation of much good literature which they are apparently retaining, as is shown by the steady sale of reprints of the classics.

Though a drop is reported in the sale of war books, almost all types of literature are in demand. Despite paper shortages and the increasing call for educational texts due to war veterans returning to schools, publishers say they expect to be able to meet the need. In Ontario, texts generally have not been revised since the war though a Royal Commission is at present going into the matter, while text revision in the western provinces has begun to bring educational books up to date.

Cornwall, Sept. 12 — (CP) — Elsey Wood, 57-year-old farmer of nearby Longue Sault, was killed almost instantly last night when he was accidentally kicked by a horse. EVERY ONE PREFERS HIS OWN THEORY.

Time and again, a doughty reader tells me, Butcher's "My Three Years with Eisenhower" records that "Ike" after exposure to wet and cold was apt to "catch cold", in fact did just that, and of course, my able critic adds, before I can open my big mouth to say Yahbut, of course everybody knows that Eisenhower is an old softy and his "colds" were purely imaginary.

This shrewd critic is obviously aware that he must keep a kind of little filibuster going long enough at this point to choke back my Yahbut, but this time I'm going to leave him droning away there to himself while I move into this column beyond his range to depose, to wit and as follows:

(a) The notion of Capt. Butcher or that of his chief about "cold" has fully as much weight, as evidence, as has the notion of any soldier who has had experience in exposure to cold and wet. In my files are scores of statments volunteered by soldiers and sailors who had plenty of experience, in World War I and in World War II, and these men all express astonishment that they never suffered any illness after such exposure except when they happened to be back in rest camp or in comparatively comfortable billets.

(b) My teaching about the harmlessness of everyday exposure to cold, dampness, wet feet, drafts, change of weather, insufficient clothing, insufficient heat and the like, is no theory. At least it is backed by the everyday experience of the great majority of people.

(c) On the other hand, the notion that illness of some kind (other than frostbite or freezing) is likely to occur as a direct or indirect result of such everyday "exposure" is a feebly bolstered theory built upon the ignorance and fear of an earlier period—when everybody believed malaria (bad air) was due to noxious miasms arising from swamp, freshly turned or damp ground particularly at night, and if fever and ague was so caused it was easy for the benighted people to believe most everyday illness was due to similar causes. Respiratory tract troubles were the most common illnesses then as now.

(d) This quaint notion is backed by the everyday experience of only a few — well, I'll just call 'em almanac-educated people.

(e) I'm not sure that the general public is cri-conscious as yet, but I know that more and more people are getting that way day by day, and I am equally confident that young folks today bother their heads less about drafts, change of weather, insufficient clothing and the like than ever before.

So, old timers, don't fash yourselves about this. I don't expect to change your mind about anything — I talk only to the youngsters here.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Head Noises

May I have your advice about head noises, please? My deafness is not so bad, but I can't seem to get used to constant ringing or buzzing. (O.W.J.)

Answer — Certainly — send a stamped self addressed envelope and ask in writing for pamphlet on Deafness and Tinnitus. The exercises described in the pamphlet, if meticulously followed out, may not only improve the hearing but relieve head noises, and in some instances the exercises have corrected snoring.

All Right, All Right

In the argument about drafts, exposure, etc., I believe the truth is in between. (R.W.)

Although there is plenty in your fine column that I agree with I can't say I agree with everything — your dictum about drafts, dampness and exposure particularly. (Mrs. A. G.)

Mother is 73, a faithful reader of your column and a great believer in your teachings, except your theory on "catching cold." (M. H.)

Answer—All right. I know I'll never convince you old ones — and certainly you'll never convert me to your theory or belief. So let's call it a draw. But I'll keep pounding away on the same old line for the sake of the young ones who read this column.

Corn on the Cob

—The annual skirmish has started—the battle between the etiquette authorities and newspaper columnists over the most efficacious method of consuming sweet corn.

One supposes this is necessary. Each year there is a new crop of five-year olds to learn the technique. The adherents of decorous dignity stand pat. They want a man to break an ear in two, butter a row of kernels, hold the half ear in the left hand and delicately nibble at the corn. It's a ridiculous sort of pose—holding the lips far apart as if one smelled over-ripe lobster bait.

In this realistic world there's only one way to eat the western world's best gift to the larder. Butter an ear of corn all over, keeping it turning so the butter won't drip. Shake on the right degree of salt. Put both elbows on the table; grab an end in each hand and go to it.

Most men prefer to eat three rows of kernels at a mouthful; a few maintain four gives the most satisfactory chewing. The point is; when you eat sweet corn concentrate on the job. Forget man made rules. You can't enjoy sweet corn if you keep thinking of what it says on page 192 of the Rule Book For Grub.

Kitchener Car Strike Settled

Kitchener, Sept. 12 —(CP)— Streetcar and motorbus operators who went on strike two days ago were returning to their jobs this morning and service was expected to be restored to normal by early afternoon.

There was no announcement however of an official settlement of the dispute which arose when the 80 streetcar and bus operators protested continued employment of a man they said testified against Union President Frank Fluvian at meetings of the Public Utilities Commission which dismissed Fluvian for alleged insubordination.

The operators are members of Loc. 1259 of the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employers of America (A.F.L.).

The decision of the operators to return to work came some hours after the P.U.C. had announced that if the men were not back at work this morning the commission would try to resume normal services as best it could. For the past two days taxis, private cars and bicycles had carried the thousands of workers in Kitchener and the neighboring towns of Waterloo and Bridgeport.

Alberta Feeling Effects of Strike By the Farmers

Edmonton, Sept. 12 —(CP)— Alberta was feeling the effect of the six-day-old delivery strike by 20,000 members of the Alberta Farmers Union from the American border north into the rich Peace River district today as picket lines throughout the province tightened around stockyards, creameries and grain elevators.

Reports reaching Edmonton last night and early today said shortages of dairy products and livestock were the most marked. Full effect of the strike for higher produce prices on grain deliveries is not expected to be known until the weekend or early next week when the harvest rush would normally get underway.

Pickets were reported "particularly strong" along the provost line running southeast from Edmonton through Camrose towards the Saskatchewan border.

Tempers flared at Camrose, about 45 miles southeast of Edmonton, yesterday when some 50 pickets attempted to close the creamery there. Pickets turned back a number of farmers attempting to deliver cream to the plant, then entered the building and ordered Manager W. Liesen to "close down." The manager called in Royal Canadian Mounted Police aid to disperse the strikers.

Drastic Drop.

Livestock deliveries showed a drastic drop. The Alberta livestock co-operative at Edmonton failed to give livestock quotations yesterday because deliveries dwindled to practically nil. Receipts were also "light" at Calgary and other parts of Alberta.

Police protection has been promised farmers wishing to run milk through A.F.U. picket lines. Six strikers have been arrested and convicted on illegal picketing charges.

The union placed an embargo on milk deliveries at midnight Tuesday to complete the full list of agricultural products being withheld from the market. Eight central Alberta creameries closed yesterday as receipts dwindled.

In the southwest corner of the province, Pincher Creek reported all its four restaurants closed for want of supplies. A cattle salo at MacLeod, Alta., set for tomorrow was cancelled at the request of union pickets, but sponsors of a sale at Cardston said it would "go ahead."

Calgary reported an egg shortage last night. One large firm said its receipts were "down 50 per cent," another 25 per cent.

CALLS WHEAT PACT

"The quantity involved is approximately 50 per cent above the pre-war sales of Canadian wheat to the United Kingdom and it permits the United Kingdom to resell any part of its purchase at any price even in competition with offerings of Canadian wheat to other customers nations," Mr. Mathieson said. "It also gives the United Kingdom the right to call for additional quantities of the same terms and all this at a price at least 56 cents per bushel below the present world values.

Other Customer Nations

"It is monopoly of the worst type...In order to make sure of being able to deliver the goods the government is forced to compel the farmer to deliver his wheat to the government Wheat Board and it denies the farmer the right to sell it to anyone else which after all is that National Socialism against which we have been fighting so hard for six years.

"It generates suspicions among about 60 other customer nations that this "dumping" of a large portion of Canada's exportable surplus to one customer will affect the price they will be asked to pay, assuming that there is a further surplus...

"One wonders at what prices and on what terms our other national resources would be dumped if the government did branch out in lumber, pulp, fisheries, minerals or other sources of national wealth.

ATTY.-GENERAL

"These charges were laid and others will be laid if occasion warrants to plainly indicate that no person or persons may set aside or defy the laws of Canada as made by the representatives of the people of Canada in parliament."

Concerning the threat of strike action his telegram said: "It should be plainly indicated to the shop stewards in question that the reason for which they are considering going on strike has nothing to do with a dispute concerning working conditions or wages. It would be a strike against the government of the Province of Ontario because it carried out its obligation to administer the criminal law of Canada.

"In considering this question your shop stewards should appreciate that as Attorney-General of the Province of Ontario it would be my duty to take immediate action to deal with any such challenge to the established laws of our country."

Empey Hill

Churchill is Greeted By Swiss Crowds

Lausanne, Switzerland, Sept. 12 (Reuters) — Winston Churchill, Britain's wartime leader, was mobbed by crowds as he drove from his holiday haunt on Lake Geneva into this lakeside resort yesterday. In every village the whole population seemed to turn out to greet him. A throng broke through the police cordon, and besieged his automobile. Mr. Churchill accompanied by his youngest daughter, Mary, was deeply moved.

Says Women Can Raise Families And Enter Politics

Copenhagen, Sept. 12. (CP)—Mme. Germaine Degrond, resting for a moment from her duties as a French delegate to the United Nations Food and Agricultural organization, smiled and said "but of course I want to visit Canada, there is nowhere else in the world—nowhere—that I want to see so much."

For 30 years this small, competent woman has been a figure in the French Socialist Movement. Today she is a member of the French National Assembly and chairman of its nutrition committee.

She speaks quietly about the place of women in world affairs —"I am sorry to see there are not other women here as spokesmen of their countries, for food and food economics have intense interest for women."

She thinks that women can enter politics and public life and still raise families and care for households, but admits it is not easy. She has a son and daughter now grown up, and she was active in the Socialist Party and as a journalist when they were small. She enjoyed her home life but the demands on her time were great.

She would not like to say that all women can look forward to being both housewives and public figures. They must judge for themselves —and their first duty is to their children.

Women's Activities

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

Stirling.—The Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church held their monthly meeting in the church parlors on Tuesday afternoon with a good attendance. This was the 'Home Helpers' meeting and the devotional part was presided over by the President, Mrs. W. Anderson with Mrs. S. McIntosh and Mrs. Earl Fox as conveners for the program. The guest speaker, Mrs. Roy Bush, was introduced by Mrs. McIntosh and gave an interesting address on home life. The program was put on by the junior members with vocal duets by Marilyn Eggleton and Arlene Tummon, Bob Eggleton and Jimmy McIntosh. Readings were given by Joan Cranston and Ray Hermiston and a piano solo by Murial Devolin. The program was brought to a close with a girls' and boys' chorus and delicious refreshments were served to all

HOLLOWAY ST. W.M.S.

The September meeting for the W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Hitchon, Moira Street.

The opening devotional exercises were in charge of Mrs. Moorman. Mrs. Hubbs led in prayer. Much food for thought was contained in Mrs. Moorman's remarks regarding the foundation of the church. That foundation must be "Jesus Christ", whether in Africa which has been studied or at home, if it is to be lasting. The question was asked, "How many have you brought to church?"

Mrs. Potter presented the last two chapters of the study book, and Mrs. Hubbs expressed the appreciation of all present, upon the splendid manner in which it was given.

Mrs. Houston then sang "Father Teach Us", and this was deeply appreciated by all.

A dramatic sketch was presented by Mesdames, Cunningham, Burrow, Hitchon, Donnelly, Hubbs, Moorman and Potter.

The various secretaries read their reports, Mrs. McMurray, rep. of the C.G.I.T. reported that eleven girls availed themselves of the privilege of attending camp.

Light refreshments were served by the hostess.

Belleville W.M.S. Executive Meeting

The September meeting of the executive of the Belleville Presbyterial of the W.M.S. was held in Bridge Street Church on September 9.

The opening worship was led by Mrs. McCreary, who chose "Awake, thou that sleepest and arise from the dead and Christ shall give thee light". She spoke of Samson, of the ten virgins, the three disciples, who failed through sleep and of the deadly indifference which is the sin of our age.

Mrs. Spafford dealt with the situation re the Presbyterial president and past president caused by the resignation of Mrs. Finlay, last April. Mrs. Empey was installed by the executive as president and Mrs. Finlay was declared immediate past president with the hope expressed that Mrs. Spafford would also continue in an advisory capacity.

It was decided that $5 should be paid to Bridge Street Church for the use of their rooms for executive meetings during the term.

Mrs. Truscott, the treasurer reported an unusually large 2nd quarter's receipts.

Mrs. Bailey, Christian Stewardship secretary, brought to mind that the additional 60c per member for the Presbyterial over last year, would send the organization over the top of its allocation in 1947.

The point was cleared up that all evening auxiliaries would receive their allocation from the Christian Stewardship Secretary, unless they decided otherwise. The hope was expressed that in each individual church there might be, as in Bridge Street, Belleville, a cabinet bringing all workers of the church into an united fellowship. The Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Homan, spoke of the new affiliated W.A. in Cressy, with one woman taking charge of the missionary part of the meeting.

Enthusiastic comment was made of the affiliated W.A. at the Ridge. One of the main objectives in the Presbyterial for 1947 is to be affiliated W.A.'s.

Mrs. McCreary, literature secretary, made emphatic that rallies should appoint one of their women to contact her re literature for sale

There was discussion re the Presbyterial Executive reading circle. It was decided to have one again in 1947 with the earnest hope that readers would be more prompt and that at the end of the year, all books would be returned to the owners.

Mrs. MacMullen, secretary for "Circles", reported five circles. There are no more because of the lack of leaders.

"The Cavalcade"

This is a visual demonstration of the work of the church, travelling across Canada, to be seen in Belleville, in October.

In the program for that day, three important items: (1) 10:35 worship with Mrs. Russel Graham, speaker: (2) a panel discussion "Women, the church and today's needs and (3) the mass meeting addressed by Miss Wilna Thomas, in the afternoon.

Mrs. Wilson, secretary for Community Friendship, stressed the welcoming of war brides and strangers in the community.

Mrs. Baugh, for Mission Bands, said her aim was to visit all of the 60 Mission Bands in the Presbyterial. She felt personal visits were important. She reported visiting 11 bands and one rally since April. Reported one new band at Albury.

Mrs. Hamilton, Missionary Monthly and World Friends Secretary, warned to order World Friends for 1947 promptly.

Mrs. Carman Atton, in a short report, spoke of conducting a Sunday service on behalf of children's work.

Mrs. Broad, Associate Members' Secretary, emphasized giving missionary literature to shut-ins and business girls. She said if only one new member for the W.M.S. can be obtained, the work will be a success.

Miss Morden, Supply Secretary, said Miss Coultes and Miss Willows need no bales and no white gifts. If the W.M.S. would make Red Cross supplies it would be cheaper for them to get their materials from the Red Cross and become "Red Cross Units", but if they donate or buy as a W.M.S. unit, they should report to her all work done.

Mrs. Sills reported plans for rally, in the making. Mrs. Hawley, North Napanee, expressed her pleasure that there was a number of teen age girls at Whitby, School of Missions, and suggested that each auxiliary send one girl there. Mrs. Holmes said she received much help at Whitby re the use of the study book. Mrs. Nickle said Dr. Thomas insisted that W.M.S. women should not limit their field of service to missions and the W.M.S. but should include the young people of the church. Mrs. Bell said she hoped to dramatize the School for Missions at Whitby. She also was most interested in affiliated W.A.'s

Mention was made of a new C.G.I.T. at Foxboro and it was hoped to have a rally of C.G.I.T. and Circles to hear Miss Wilna Thomas at the time of the Cavalcade.

The Press secretary spoke of sending out new press booklets soon and hoped for more scrapbooks exhibited next April, on Temperance, Worship Services, Christian Stewardship, Pictures of India, for example.

Mrs. Patten, Temperance and Christian Citizenship secretary, said she thought the W.M.S. must work with the young people in co-operation with Sunday School, etc. She thought young people growing up would not forget easily if they had signed the pledge.

At this point, the Presbyterial Committee on the Cavalcade met the W.M.S. executive with additional information on the Cavalcade here. "The Cavalcade" will hold an open air service broadcast from truck and exhibit open on the Sunday they are here. Leaders will speak in Belleville and surrounding country on Christian education, S.S. Institute. There will be a speaker and motion pictures for young people's organization. Presidents of Auxiliaries are asked to be publicity agents to work and pray for the success of this effort to awaken the public to the work of the church.

There were several very welcome guests present and every member of the executive except one was present.

Mrs. Finlay expressed her appreciation of Mrs. Empey's acceptance of the responsibility of the office of president, under difficult circumstances.

Mrs. Herrington closed the meeting with prayer.

BONARLAW

English War Bride, Husband Honored

Bonarlaw.—On Tuesday evening of this week, a large number of friends and neighbors of Geo. S. Bateman, who returned from overseas a few months ago, and his English war bride who arrived on the Queen Mary a few days ago, gathered in the Orange Hall at Springbrook and gave them a shower of miscellaneous gifts and in an address read by Clayton Burkitt, welcomed his charming bride to this community and wished them every success and happiness throughout the coming years. On the platform were Councillor Ed. Bateman, representing the township of Rawdon, J. F. Baker, who acted as chairman and Rev. J. M. Brownlie, rector of St. Mark's Church, who delivered an interesting and appropriate address.

Prior to the presentation Miss Ruth Bain and Mrs. Burton Woodbeck entertained the audience with vocal solos.

Mr. and Mrs. Bateman, in a few well chosen words, thanked those present for their kind expressions of welcome and good wishes and for the many useful and beautiful gifts after which all sang "For They are Jolly Good Fellows", and gave them three hearty cheers.

The meeting was then turned over to the floor manager, Carl McMillan and the Jones' Orchestra who supplied music for round and square dancing. Delicious refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Hair Should Have Luster

Have you emotional hair? Does it snarl at you? Does it throw brain storms refuse to stay put, and then suddenly assume a look of extreme despondency, clinging close to your scalp? Ringlets go stringy. What's the matter with it? It just wants a little loving attention, that's all.

There are times when the glorious halo seems to be afflicted with nervous exhaustion or something like that. Sort of down at the heels. Time for you to do a little nursing job, make an effort to restore it to a state of health and vitality.

Time to restore your hair to a state of health and vitality

If you have been shampooing your hair, instead of taking it to the beauty shop, there is a possibility that the delicate shafts are being suffocated with soap deposits. If it lacks lustre, if one silky thread clings to the next one, that is the explanation. Have a rousing shampoo by a professional sudser and you may be astonished to find that the silky growth is as soft as floss, looks twice as abundant, has resumed its normal amiability.

Beauty shop operators tell of cases of improper shampooing that have not only caused the hair to break ,but also have dimmed the pristine color by several shades.

The head and scalp should be kept scrupulously clean, if they are to be in a healthy condition. There should be three soapings, as many rinsings. Friction should be brisk, so the lather will be well distributed. Only a strong current of water from a spray will remove soap completely. Dipping the head in a washcloth, avails nothing. At the finish, the growth should be light, soft and fluffy. If it forms strands of closely-packed rattails, the shampoon is a fizzle.

In a fortnight the head is in need of renovating. If the hair is oily, it should be laundered every ten days. Nightly brushing will do much to remove surface dust. This treatment will also act as a stimulant, the bristles giving little tugs to the hair roots, stimulating the tiny blood streams in the papillae.

Follow the brushing with a five-minute scalp friction. The scalp is the garden from which your hirsuite spinach gets its living. The better the circulation, the more nourishment the shafts receive.

Spread fingers and thumbs over the scalp. Keep the fingers stationary, do heavy pressure in circles with the thumbs. Work on the flesh at the temples. Hair usually thins there first.

Fashion Flashes

SOMEWHAT AKIN to the Leaning Tower of Pisa is the crown of a new tall sombrero. Fashioned of heather-purple velvet, the crown is banded in Victorian rose felt, which also is used for the manipulated top. The brim has a deep kettle edge, and there is a matching purple velvet muff.

Smart tricks enliven a co-ordinated, three-piece outfit designed for early teensters. There is a smart red-white-and green plaided gingham frock made with high, ruffled neckline and push-up balloon sleeves. With it is a suit of green wool. The loose jacket, which has double-button closing at top, is lined with the plaided gingham of the frock.

No end to the bright ingenuity of bag designers. A square envelope in brown, red or green alligator, has an adjustable shoulder strap, part of which unbuckles so that it may be used as a belt, leaving an ordinary handle. The bag has two outside pockets with separate belted fastenings.

A dash of the mysterious, plus beauty, makes the cape a favorite with the woman who likes to be an individualist in her choice of clothes. Black Alaska seal makes a handsome full-length cape with a slight fish-tail dip in back. An attached hood becomes a flattering cowl collar when worn off the head. Cape fastens at throat with a handsome ornament.

Intricate detail and cut mark some of the new frocks made for gala late afternoon doings. Brown crepe is used for one such model ,the hemline cut to an ankle-length dip in back. The hem is curved up in a slash in front, with a rippling front drape developing from the molded, draped hipline. A curved line of black bead fringe trims the high necked bodice which has deep armholes and long, tight sleeves.

A Program for Healthy Teeth

The toothbrush is the most effec-tive weapon for combating dental trouble.

By HELEN FOLLETT

ONLY TWENTY per cent of the inhabitants of Uncle Sam's domain receive dental service. That doesn't mean that only 20 per cent can afford professional attentions. Many individuals who are in comfortable circumstances never trot to the dentist's shop until pain compels them to make the trip.

They are not very far-sighted. Even though no pain is present, caries may be forming, tartar may be banking up under the gums. Twice a year there should be an examination, a thorough cleaning, repairs made if necessary.

Effective Weapon

The most effective weapon for combating dental trouble is the toothbrush. Even that won't do much good if it isn't the proper kind of a brush, or if it is not used with thoroughness. No toothbrush can be made that will conform to the dental arch, both the inside and the outside. Hence the need of thorough grooming so that every tooth, back and front surfaces, sides and biting parts, will be treated.

A small brush does a better job than a large one. The bristles should be fairly firm. If they are too long they are likely to bend or buckle, or, when wet, will slide over the teeth instead of getting a firm hold. Considerable pressure should be used so the teeth will be polished.

Salt Water Solution

A new toothbrush should be placed in a cold salt water solution before it is used. This practice will take away the original harshness of the bristles.

After using, rinse the brush with cold water. Hot water softens the bristles, may alter the shape of the handle. Place in a glass or holder, the bristled end up. To place the brush end downward is to encourage bacterial growth.

One should have two brushes so they can be used alternately. After several months they should be discarded, new ones purchased.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

When May We Start Eating?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are a club of twelve ladies, and the question has arisen with us as to when we should start eating. Also, is it proper to start when all the hot foods have been passed, or to wait, say, until the bread, salad, and even the relishes have been passed?

L. L.

At a small dinner party we wait to start eating until the hostess herself starts or until all the guests are served. At a banquet or other occasion where there are a larger number of guests, it is proper for you to start eating as soon as those near you at table have been served.

And it is not necessary for you to wait until every food-accompaniment of the course has been served. Of course we shouldn't began to eat so hastily and "eagerly" that we've finished eating our meat (which is usually served first in the main course) before the other food-items have been served. . . .but there is no reason why, if the time is appropriate for us to start eating, we shouldn't begin to eat, slowly, the item or items already served to us. Indeed in most circumstances, if we wait to begin eating until all the items of the main course, say, have been passed to us, we may very well hold up the progress of the meal, and unnecessarily.

When the Married Salesmen Ask for Dates?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am working in an office, and I usually have to entertain the salesmen and representatives of other companies while they are waiting for the manager to arrive. Frequently, we have a long chat before my employer arrives. Often these gentlemen, who are very much older than I am, ask me to go out with them. I tell them I do not go out with married men, but that doesn't seem to have much effect on them. What would be a proper and suitable reply when these older gentlemen ask me for a date?

L. K.

You sound as if you were very new in the business world, and very new in your position! And I am wondering what work you are expected to do when you are not being "the reception committee" which apparently you have appointed yourself to be, I'm fairly sure that your employer doesn't expect you, or want you, to have "long chats" with these salesmen and representatives, and if he finds out that this is what you are doing with your time in the office and that you are confusing your business endeavors and your social endeavoors, your job may very well be in jeopardy. So I suggest you stop your nonsense by not wasting your employer's time, be pleasant but much, much less personal in your point of view to these "married gentlemen older than you are" . . . and when they ask you for a date, say "Thank you. . . but I have an engagement for that evening." Of if no definite time is mentioned, say, "I'm going to be very busy for the next few weeks" . . . and turn your eyes and your attention back to your work.

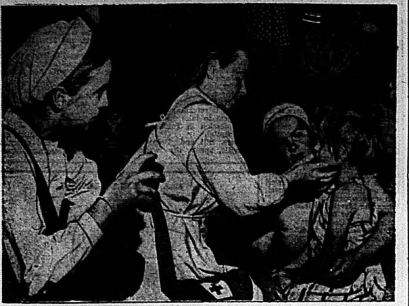
POLES REPATRIATED FROM EXILE IN SIBERIA



Long trains of boxcars are daily pulling into Lublin, Poland, carrying the repatriated of the 2,000,000-odd Poles who have spent seven long years of exile in Siberia. A Polish Red Cross nurse and doctor are shown examining a 10-year-old girl who, with her mother, has lived and travelled for eight weeks in a boxcar. Pickers Flocking To Nova Scotia

Kentville, N.S., Sept. 12 (CP) —Apple pickers flocking into Nova Scotia's orchard region to harvest a $6,000,000 crop were making farmers happy but were providing a headache for National Employment Service officials.

Farmers were pleased because possibilities of a shortage of help in picking the 1,600,000-barrel crop had vanished. But N.E.S. officials were worried because more harvesters were arriving in the Annapolis Valley than they could send to jobs at the present time.

With the peak of the harvest in the 90 miles long valley still ten days away, it was unofficially estimated that 700 of the required 2,500 pickers were already at work.

N.E.S. officials, however, confessed they were unable to estimate the numbers who had arrived because many workers had jumped the gun on the service's orderly call-up system and farmers were hiring the harvester without reporting to employment officials.

As a result, N.E.S. was urging potential workers to remain at home until called. Then their transportation would be paid to the job with wages averaging $3.50 daily plus room and board.

As Brain was led from the courtroom his wife, a defence witness, rushed to him, weeping.

Anglican Synod Fails to Reach Divorce Decision

By SHANE MACKAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Winnipeg, Sept. 11. (CP)—The Lower House of the Anglican General Synod last night failed to reach a decision on a proposed canon to allow conditional remarriage within the church of innocent parties in divorce cases.

A three-hour debate over amendment and sub-motions to a resolution proposed by the prolocutor of the House, Reginald V. Harris of Halifax, ended with a postponement of discussion until tonight's session. The discussion became involved in a controversy over the manner in which the Synod was asked to decide on the matter and considerable difference of opinion over interpretations and translations of Christian principles as enunciated in the gospels of St. Matthew and St. Mark.

The House did, however, approve changes in the Anglican Table of Kindred and Affinity of 1563. Under the proposed amendment, church marriages to sister or brother-in-law, aunt or uncle by marriage, and niece or nephew by marriage would be permitted.

Earlier in the day, a joint session of the Synod's two Houses called upon the federal government to give "every assistance" in the dispersal of Japanese residents of British Columbia across Canada. It also asked Anglicans to "extend a helping hand in the reception and settlement" of these people.

Another resolution opposed the extension of legalized gambling opportunities in Canada. A resolution proposing the setting-up of a committee to investigate the labor conditions and wages in companies invested in by the Church's Consolidated Fund Board was rejected on grounds of impracticability.

Washington, Sept. 11 —(AP)—The United States Navy plans to find out whether man can stand to travel at 1,000 miles an hour.

An announcement said today the world's largest human centrifuge will be built at Johnsville, Pa., to find means of combatting physical strain as the speed of sound is reached and surpassed by airplanes now on the drawing boards.

Flattened in a cage spinning around a central shaft, the human "guinea pig" will be photographed by X-ray cameras to study the affects of acceleration on his internal organs. He will be able to ride in various positions to discover the safest way of hurtling through the air.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When a partner criticizes your close decision, he is no expert. An expert knows that criticism is bound to spoil your partnership game.

Some of us are methodical instead of keen and impulsive. We admire successful instinct in others. If not always ungrudgingly, we usually admit to ourselves that they have something we do not possess.

But they are fools to take advantage of us as partners. They are unwise to make us sensitive of our admitted faults. They are saps to ridicule us in the presence of others.

Thereafter, every bid or play we make is a terrible strain. We are no longer at our best. In fact, we are decidedly at our worst. And partner is helping us drag him down.

We try not to displease him. We extend ourselves in the hope of meeting his desires. We try our utmost to keep from being censured by him. And we get overanxious.

As a result, we lean backwards in our efforts. We stifle what little initiative we might have. We even ignore what we know to be correct in the hope of better fitting with his approval.

West was in the lead against a slam. Having an ace, he led it. Unfortunately, dummy was void in that suit and trumped. As a result, declarer made the king in the other hand.

Instead of sympathizing, east had plenty of sarcastic remarks to hand out. On the very next deal, opponents bid another slam. You see the cards here:

Fearing partners caustic tongue, west did not lead his ace as he would have done if left to his decision. Instead he led a spade. Diamonds were the trumps and declarer took 13 tricks.

What should west call his partner? You can say that again.

STIRLING PAIR WINS TOURNEY AT LOCAL GREENS

Hold Queen's Hotel Cup for Year While Ab Wonnacott and Partner Win Tip Top Trophy

One of the largest mixed doubles tournament to be held in this district for some years took place at the local bowling greens on Wednesday afternoon and evening and it was well beyond the midnight hour before the last bowl was thrown and the prize winners decided. Rinks from the local club, Stirling, Campbellford, Brighton and Kingston took part and many of the men bowlers of the respective clubs were forced to sit on the sidelines being unable to secure a partner for the event. 57 rinks took part and it was necessary to hold a double draw, something unusual in this district for a tournament of this calibre.

The opening of the tournament was delayed slightly due to a sharp rain storm early in the afternoon but the rainfall only served to keen-up the greens and they were lightning fast during the time of play. They were also in excellent condition despite the fact of a heavy season on them. Suitable prizes were distributed with the trophies competed for and Ray Zufelt and Doug Row and their able assistants capably handled the draws and there were few delays between games.

Walter Elliott and his wife of Stirling were the three-game high winners of the tournament and possessors of the Queens Hotel Cup. A. E. Wonnacott and Mrs. Bill Whitty of Stirling were second and winners of the Tip Top trophy B. Derry and partner of Kingston third, George Watkin and Edythe Robson fourth, Alf. Symons and Mrs. J. Legault fifth, Charles Smart and partner of Kingston sixth, Herb Taylor and wife of Brighton seventh. In the two-game high winner Wilfrid Price and his wife of Belleville were first and "Happy" Tompkins and his wife of Stirling won the one-game high score.

Marty Servo Given Until Dec. 1st To Defend Title

(By The Canadian Press)

In its quarterly ratings of leading mitt-artists, issued at Cleveland, O., last night, the National Boxing Association confirmed that Marty Servo, welterweight champion, had been given until Dec. 1 to fight Ray Robinson or else get off the throne. If Servo failed to get into the ring, Robinson and Beau Jack would be privileged to battle for the crown. Johnny Greco of Montreal was listed as an outstanding boxer in the weight class.

The N. B. A. named no logical contender in the heavyweight division where Joe Louis is monarch but Tami Mauriello and Elmer Ray were named as leading in the outstanding section.

Two Ontario teams have been included in the entries for the softball tournament which opens at Cleveland tomorrow night. In the male competition, one of the 17 clubs is from Hamilton while Toronto Simpsons figure in the schedule of 14 women's teams.

The National Amateur Golf Championship at Springfield, N. J. lost its top medalist yesterday when Skee Riegel was eliminated in the second round of match play by Smiley Quick of California who had knocked out Henry Martell of Edmonton in the morning play.

Saying his job came first, Orville Burke, key man of Ottawa Rough Riders, left the capital last night for Vancouver despite last minute pleas of club officials to play out the season in the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union.

The Pony Baseball League last night reported a paid attendance for the regular season of 500,599 or 142,034 greater than in '45. The Hamilton entry drew 65,206 patrons.

Eoen Scott, owned by Dr. L. N. Harrington, won the $5,800 purse for three-year-old trotters in the feature Grand Circuit race at the Reading, Pa., fair although losing the first heat to Lacy Hanover.

Willy Quentmeyer, light-heavyweight boxing champion of The Netherlands, defeated Said Kadour, French title-holder, in 10 rounds at Amsterdam to earn a match with Freddie Mills of Britain, who will defend his European crown.

KIWANIS JUNIORS DEFEATED 3 TO 2 BY R.C.A.F. FLIERS

Speedy St. Louis Uncovers Another Pitching Prospect in Young Art Wright

Belleville Kiwanis Juniors and the Trenton Flyers dipped into their respective war-bags at the Alemite Field Wednesday night and brought out two new hurlers in a postponed Belleville Senior Baseball League fixture.

It was the case of a good youngster in the person of sixteen-year-old Art. Wright against the veteran first baseman B. Holdershaw. From a scoring point of view Flyers nosed out the kids 3-2 but to the youthful chucker out there on the mound goes the moral glory.

Wright pitched a game good enough to win any man's ball game. The youngster struck out five and walked but one and was exceptionally good in the clutches. In the sixth innings when Flyers had punched out two of the five hits they got off Wright, Moose Matthews strode to the plate in a pinch-hitting role. Wright promptly walked the big fellow to fill the sacks, then struck out Remigio to end the rally.

Holdershaw, a southpaw turned in a good effort also. A lefthander he struck out five and walked but one and was nicked for seven hits. The Juniors clustered hits in pairs in the first, fifth and sixth and should have tied the score in the fifth but for some sloppy coaching at third base.

Flyers scored single runs in the first, second and fifth while the kids scored in the first and fifth. Strachan paced the Juniors attack with a triple and single while Bridgeman hit a double for the winners. Kiwanis were not at full strength, Coach St. Louis saving some of his regulars for that all important Ottawa game on Saturday.

EASTERN RUGBY EXPERTS DIVIDED OVER NEW RULE

Some Claim Game Will be Speeded Up by 10-Yard Interference

(By The Canadian Press)

It's up to Father Time to settle the dispute raging in eastern Canada rugby circles over the new 10-yard interference ruling.

Some grid experts lament the move as sounding the death knell of the lateral pass and end run; others claim the game will be speeded up by the new regulation allowing blocking within 10 yards of the scrimmage line. Previously blocking was allowed only three yards in front of the line.

And the argument will probably continue until well after the season is over.

Some commeints on the new ruling:

Bob Cosgrave, Toronto Balmy Beach: "It's going to make things tougher for the secondary. If they wait for the play to break the attackng team will have a lot more tme; if they move too quickly they may be taken right out of the play. It will slow down the attack quite a bit until teams get used to it."

Bill Westwick, Ottawa Journal: "The 10-yard rule has been used in local high school leagues for five years experience here shows the 10-yard rule opens up the game if anything, making it speedier and leading to higher scores. Coaches here are all for it."

Tommy Shields, Ottawa Citizen: "It has proven itself in local leagues. It helps lateral passing and improves broken field running."

Annis Stukus, Toronto Indians: "We're going to see a lot of massed formations brought in... one disadvantage of the power system of getting points is that it takes up time—and one long forward pass or even two short ones can wipe it out in seconds."

Earl Selkirk, Toronto Argonauts: "It's liable to do away with lateral passing and end runs, and if that happens I'm sorry to see the new rule. If we try to Americanize Canadian rugby we are liable to lose many of the thrilling features of our own game."

Yankees' Manager May Retire At End of Season

Detroit, Sept. 12 (AP)—Bill Dickey was reported early today to have told President Larry MacPhail he would retire as manager of the New York Yankees of the American League when the season ends at the end of this month.

Dickey, Yankees' star catcher who succeeded Joe McCarthy several months ago, is said to have telephoned MacPhail not to consider him in the Yanks' managerial plans for 1947.

The Yanks, league pre-season favorites, proved a disappointment this year. They are now in third place.

Dodgers Could Lose National League Pennant by Scoreless Draw With Cincinnati Reds

Played Nineteen Innings Without Score and Dodgers Use Four Hurlers

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Like the 1938 Pittsburgh Pirates, Brooklyn Dodgers could lose the National League pennant because of inability to play their full schedule. The Dodgers situation came from yesterday's record-breaking 19-inning scoreless tie with Cincinnati Reds.

The scoreless deadlock, coupled with the St. Louis defeat by the Phils in Philadelphia, cut the Cardinals' first place margin to 1½ games. Both teams are all even on the losing side of the ledger but the Cards have won three more games.

Branch Rickey, head of the Dodgers, planned to confer with Ford Frick, president of the National League today, on a replay either Sept. 20 or 26.

On the field, however, the Dodgers were occupied with their all-important series with the Cardinals, starting today. This three-game set may easily decide the pennant race.

Johnny Vander Meer gave up seven hits in 15 innings and Harry Gumbert allowed one in the last four innings for the Reds. The Dodgers used four pitchers.

Twice the Reds missed scoring by a split second when Dodger outfielders Pete Reiser and Dixie Walker threw out runners at the plate.

Oscar Judd, 36-year-old southpaw from Ingersoll, Ont., pitched the Phils to a 9-4 victory over the Cards. It was the fourth time the Canadian hurler beat the Cards this season.

For the second straight day, the Tigers forced postponement of Boston's pennant celebration by handing the American League-leading Red Sox a 7-3 setback. Hank Greenberg highlighted a 5-run first inning against Dave (Boo) Ferriss, with his 33rd home run.

The Cubs and Braves battled through 17 innings before darkness halted their game with the score tied at 3-3. The Indians hammered four New York Yankee pitchers for 16 hits as Allie Reynolds went the route for his 11th win with an 11-2 triumph.

Chicago White Sox climbed on Bobo Newsom for five runs in the sixth inning to defeat the Senators 6-1, and St. Louis Browns shut out Philadelphia Athletics 4-0 in a night game at Sportsman's Park.

The Pirates took over seventh place in the National League, dumping New York Giants into the cellar by beating them twice, 7-6 and 7-5, at the Polo Grounds.

Andy Seminick, Phillies: Tripled with the bases loaded to highlight a five-run seventh inning rally which beat the Cardinals 9-4.

Johnny Vander Meer, Reds and Dixie Walker, Dodgers: Vander Meer hurled 15 innings of the 19-inning 0-0 tie, fanned 14 and gave up only seven hits; Walker saved the game for the Dodgers with his fine throw from the outfield in the 19th which nipped a runner at the plate.

Hank Greenberg, Tigers: Homered with two on to beat the Red Sox 7-3.

WHIPPER WATSON

Toar Morgan, the dashing Marine, will be the third man in the ring at the Hume Arena tomorrow night when Whipper Billy Watson and Karl "Krippler" Davis resume their feud in the main bout. The scuffle may take all night so better bring along a box lunch for Manager Walter Gerow has ordered the boys to go a no-time limit session and that may take until the wee small hours of the morning. The "Whip" was plenty mad last week when Referee Bert Maxwell awarded the bout to the Krippler after that worthy, to all appearances, was out like a light. Mr. Maxwell took exception to the Whipper's use of his tummy as a buffer for the Davis noggin and a ring-post and he nigh blasted the umps out of the ring. And our Mr. Morgan, who is a very determined gentleman especially in an arbiter's role won't stand for any nonsense. In fact he is a firm believer in socking the opposition first and arguing afterwards. So all in all—it appears to be a lively evening for the Whip, the Krip, and the faithful. What appears to be a honey of a match will be that between the popular youngsters, Pat Flanagan and Mike Sharpe. Curtain rises at 8.45 p.m.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Here's a tip for baseball or softball players who have a yen to sock the umpire when that individual gets beneath their epidermis. Up around Hamilton way, the Ontario Amateur Softball Association suspended a Hamilton player for three years for attempting to knock the block off His Nibs, while three other players were thrown out for one year for indulging in a free-for-all. The Hamilton's protest was chucked overboard by the governing body and the Brantford junior squad now awaits the winner of the Toronto-Belleville series for the Ontario junior title.

Both junior teams here are in fine shape for the important games that loom up on Saturday. Speedy St. Louis' juniors are rarin' to get a crack at the starry much-ballyhooed Ottawa Wrightvilles, while Don Barrett's Goodmans are itching to get at the Toronto team, whatever it is. The teams will be leaving early Saturday morning, and the good wishes of local fans will be riding with them.

WE COULD USE HIM

George Lay, ace hurler of the Kingston Athletics junior baseball team, which was eliminated from OBA junior competition by the Ottawa Wrightvilles, carved himself a niche in the baseball hall of fame the other day. The sensational youngster who is a brother of Joe Lay, baseball and hockey star, fashioned a neat no-hit no-run game against the Gophers winning handily 14-0 when his mates poled out a dozen hits behind him.

Several baseball and softball fans have suggested that an all-star team be picked from the City Baseball and Softball Leagues. Sounds like a good idea, so send them in and we'll compile full statistics when the line-ups arrive.

Elbie Fletcher's fine sense of humor, unfortunately, cost him $25 in the last game of the year at Forbes Field between the Cubs and Pirates on September 2.

Fletcher hit a drive to the right field wall. Phil Cavarretta jumped high and the ball hit his glove and bounced out. Then it skidded against the barrier and back into his glove. The umpire ruled a catch had been made, but hundreds of others, including the Pirates, figured otherwise and a wild protest occurred.

When order was restored, Fletcher, borrowing a pair of binoculars from a fan, went to his position with them fastened to his neck.

The umpire tossed him out of the game and he was fined.

Unless you are an umpire, it is unwise to wear a blue serge suit to a baseball game.

This is the admonition of Al Parsley, sports scribe of the Montreal Herald. After a recent game at Buffalo during which Bison fans had been aroused by some unfavorable umpire decisions, Parsley was leaving the park with his portable typewriter when a group of fans mistook him for one of the arbiters and gave the Montreal scribe a merry going-over.

SECOND SACKER HAS THREE PUTOUTS IN A TRIPLE PLAY

Second baseman Jake Pullens of Topeka participated in a triple play against Muskogee in the first inning of a Western Association game, August 29, in which he received credit for making all three putouts.

With the bases loaded, Al Lawrence grounded to Shortstop Art Priebe, who tossed to Pullens at second to force one runner. Pullens then threw to the third baseman and they trapped another runner between second and third. Pullens finally tagging him out after a chase. Then, spotting Lawrence heading into second, Pullens reached the bag ahead of the runner to tag him for the third out.

From Peterborough's Perdue

"Our old Lakeshore League ball friends, the Port Hopers moved into the next O.B.A. intermediate "A" round here last p.m. when they erased Lindsay from the picture with a 9-4 rub.

A skeleton crowd saw the struggle, not a bad number until the late heats, though both sides had fielding lapses. "Iron" Woods limited Lindsay to four hits while his mates—led by Douglas and Edwardson—mauled the melon with gusto to earn the duke. And they reeled off two fine double-plays. Tommy Pointer pestered both Scugog slabsmen by taking his stance in the first-base coaching box and stealing the catcher's signals and relaying 'em to the hitters. One of the Gander's old tricks. The Ports meet Batawa next."

To the surprise of all, Plate Umpire Monte Heard ordered Lupien back to first. No until after the game was learned that Heard had called time immediately after Storey dropped the ball the first time in order to brush off the plate, thus saving Storey from a second error on one of the most ludicrous muffs ever seen in Portland.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When a partner criticizes your close decision, he is no expert. An expert knows that criticism is bound to spoil your partnership game.

Some of us are methodical instead of keen and impulsive. We admire successful instinct in others. If not always ungrudgingly, we usually admit to ourselves that they have something we do not possess.

But they are fools to take advantage of us as partners. They are unwise to make us sensitive of our admitted faults. They are saps to ridicule us in the presence of others.

Thereafter, every bid or play we make is a terrible strain. We are no longer at our best. In fact, we are decidedly at our worst. And partner is helping us drag him down.

We try not to displease him. We extend ourselves in the hope of meeting his desires. We try our utmost to keep from being censured by him. And we get overanxious.

As a result, we lean backwards in our efforts. We stifle what little initiative we might have. We even ignore what we know to be correct in the hope of better fitting with his approval.

West was in the lead against a slam. Having an ace, he led it. Unfortunately, dummy was void in that suit and trumped. As a result, declarer made the king in the other hand.

Instead of sympathizing, east had plenty of sarcastic remarks to hand out. On the very next deal, opponents bid another slam. You see the cards here:

NORTH

♣A 9 6 4	♣K 10 7 5 3

SOUTH
♠10 5
♥A K Q J
♦A Q J 9 5
♣8 2

Fearing partners caust'ic tongue, west did not lead his ace as he would have done if left to his decision. Instead he led a spade. Diamonds were the trumps and declarer took 13 tricks.

What should west call his partner? You can say that again.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Sept. 12 (AP) — Sioux City Sue arrived in Hollywood just in time to get some blunt advice from Gene Autry.

Sue is Gayle Jean Hofstedt, chosen by the Iowa City to depict the girl in the song title. Her hair is red, her eyes are blue and she might easily provide grounds for swapping a horse and a dog, as the song lyrics go. Here for a screen test at Republic Studios, one of the first people she met was Autry, who advised her sternly:

"Don't get your hopes too high. Being a movie star takes an indefinable something. Some of the most beautiful girls don't photograph at all. And others who appear to have nothing in person, turn out to be big stars."

Gene appeared pleased to learn that Gayle is a sensible girl. She is staying here two weeks. If the movie chance pans out, fine; if not, she's content to go back to her job in a Sioux City department store.

From our correspondent travelling with Tyrone Power and Cesar Romero comes this story:

In El Salvador the party was staying at a hotel across from the palace. Four thousand citizens were demonstrating in front of the palace against the retention of three ministers from the previous political regime. Firecrackers, banners, speeches were in evidence as the police armed for trouble.

Then the word spread that Tyrone and Cesar were in the opposite hotel. The crowd swarmed to the hotel and the actors gave speeches from the balcony. Celebration followed and the budding revolution turned into a Latin holiday.

At least that's the way it's told here.

Montreal Defeats Newark 7-5 and Syracuse Grabs One From Baltimore 6-5

(By The Associated Press)

The International League champion Montreal Royals and second place Syracuse Chiefs, running true to form, drew first blood in their respective Governor's Cup semi-final best-of-seven series.

The Royals took the opening game from the fourth-place Newark Bears 7-5 before 15,064 at Montreal last night while the Chiefs took the measure of the third place Baltimore Orioles 6-5 in another after-dark game before 11,130 fans in Syracuse.

The Royals had to weather a ninth-inning storm to emerge victor, despite going into the final inning with a 7-0 advantage. Steve Nagy, the Royals' ace southpaw, weakened in the ninth, retiring with only one out. Chet Kehn came in but was tagged for two more runs and had the tying runs on second and third when he finally got the third man out.

The Chiefs had to come from behind to edge out the Orioles, breaking a 5-5 tie in the eighth when John Dudick singled with the bases loaded.

Trailing 3-0, the Chiefs came up with five runs in the fifth. The feature of the inning was a grand slam homer by Van Harrington. Ken Polivka, who relieved starter Howard Fox, was the winner, while Johnny Podgajny, second of three Baltimore pitchers, was the loser.

MAY ORGANIZE PLAYERS

Boston, Sept. 12 (AP)—Bob Murphy, leader of the American Baseball Guild, aims to "do something for hockey players."

Explaining that "no program has been drawn yet," Murphy said today that he had received "numerous requests from professional hockey players to form an organization similar to the baseball Guild."

He added that he had talked with "quite a few players of several hockey clubs" and had received letters from many of them.

"They seem more disgruntled than the baseball players who want a Guild," Murphy said.

CHAPTER ONE.

Isabel, wife of Avery Latimer, did not often experience a mood of complete contentment. But she was happy on this sharp sweet March morning; life seemed good to her. For no particular reason she came down to the sun-flooded breakfast room with a sense of satisfaction, of triumph. She had wanted a great many things in her life; she had them all now. Wealth and position, a kind husband, two dear little girls, beauty, youth. Even—it might sound silly, but it counted!—even a mink coat. A silky, supple, enveloping, richly dark mink coat with a Fifth Avenue label in it.

Life hadn't always run in these pleasant grooves. She had had to fight for what she had. Always with a gay and kindly exterior, of course, but still it had been one long steady battle. The daughter of a hardware-store clerk in an obscure California mountain town, she hadn't had too much to start with. But even then, a slim girl in high school, going through her quiet country days at the little pine-scented streets of Sutro's Mill, she had dreamed great dreams. Dreams of low-slung motorcars as swift as projectiles, of monogrammed luggage plastered with foreign labels, of hotel rooms filled with flowers, of trailing gowns that left her round throat bare except for encircling pearls. And of course of a mink coat

These things had not been achieved in one, single sweep. This was her second marriage. The two small girls who, with their nurse, were enjoying their breakfast when she came downstairs this Spring morning in 1943 were not Avery's children. Their father, Dennis Hardisty, was a captain in the Engineers; he and Isabel had been divorced six months earlier.

She remembered feeling a certain disappointment when Catherine, the second born, had proved not only to be another girl, but a small dark sallow mop-headed baby like Mary, the elder. Catherine to please her mother should have been a square, splendid boy, with Dennis's shoulders and Dennis's unruly dark red hair.

"Where do I get these tar babies? she had demanded ruefully upon first beholding Catherine. Dennis had grinned in great felicity. The baby was healthy and lively; Isabel was in good shape; he had said he liked girl babies.

"Luck for Pussy, too," he had said, "a sister to play with." "Pussy" was Mary; her father had a good many names for her, and this one stuck.

Well, if that had been a disappointment, Isabel sometimes reflected, it was really all for the better, now. For if she had a third child, by this second marriage, how proud Avery would be to be the father of her first-born son! He was in no hurry to acquire the honor, but sooner or later there must be a Latimer child, if only to inherit the Bamberger fortune. Avery's mother, as her third mate, had selected an enormously rich man, and was now widowed. Avery was an only child. Most of that estate would inevitably come to him.

Meanwhile Avery liked his small stepdaughters, and in their shy, inarticulate way they were charming, Isabel saw with pleasure, with him. Aged four and two and a half, they wedged themselves into a single chair and watched him with fascination, and laughed at him. They did not see much of him; their well-regulated little lives were arranged with no reference to his or their mother's hours. They had had breakfast and were off for their morning airing before Avery awakened; they had had their chops and spinach and custard and were asleep if and when he came home to lunch; they were ascending the great curved stairway in the hall, on their way up to baths and supper, when he came in at night.

"Hello, monkeys!" he might say, giving Yeats his coat.

"Hello, monkey man!" Pussy might daringly return, echoed as always by Catherine. After which they would both be consumed with laughter, and turning their small backs hurry upstairs with all speed in Yelta's wake.

Avery was tall, magnificently slim-waisted and broad-shouldered, with sleek hair as black and shining as the hood of his big car. At thirty-seven he was comfortably over the draft age; he never discussed the question of his entering the service. At a bond rally or Red Cross drive he could make a good-natured easy speech that had everyone laughing ,crying, and enthusiastic, and when he opend the bidding with his own contribution he fired the gathering to follow suit at an unexpected tempo. The family truck and estate wagon had always been at the disposal of the U.S.O., and Avery's beloved yacht, the Screw Loose, had been turned over to the merchant marine the day after Pearl Harbor. Avery felt, and Isabel felt, too, that they were doing their share.

"Avery," she said one day, "do you thing there's a possibility that when this war is over, you'll wish you had gotten into it?"

"In a word, no," Avery, who was carefully and lovingly cleaning a gun, answered undisturbed.

"But look—this is a tremendous thing, a tremendous occasion," Isabel had persisted.

"It's a tremendous thing to have all your arms and legs on," Avery had countered, squinting down a barrel.

"Avery, listen. You are infinitely more patriotic, and I know it, and you know it, than you sound."

"Maybe yes, maybe no," Avery had suggested modestly.

"You know you are simply crazy about America."

"Sufficiently crazy," said Avery, "to want to, go on living in it."

And he had burst into his great hearty laugh, never so hearty as when aroused by his own witticisms.

* * *

Well, Isabel reflected, a second marriage was entirely difficult from a first. One's whole attitude was different.

She had been an adoring, unsophisticated young wife to Dennis Hardisty. She had been anxious to please Dennis; afraid of his disapproval. Not that he ever disapproved, but it was a very strange and exciting thing to be married, and a wife's first consideration must be to hold her husband's love.

Isabel had respected Dennis, had looked on with awe when he worked at mysterious blueprints and specifications; Dennis was a remarkable person; he would be one of the city's famous engineering consultants someday. He often said that he would never be rich, but Isabel discounted that—of course he would be. His path lay straight to success.

But when war was declared he turned aside from that path. He said to her the brief four words that changed their lives — changed them irrevocably, as it turned out.

"I'll be wanted," he said. And on the Monday that followed the day of national tragedy he went somewhere and signed something and got himself into the war. Isabel made only a brief protest.

When they said good-by neither realized that it was to be a long good-by, that it was to end something, that things never would be the same. But when the time came for her to appreciate that, Isabel also appreciated that it wouldn't have made any difference to Dennis to know it, he would have gone away just the same. Men were that way about war.

Her marriage to Avery was on a wholly different, on a gayer note. It wasn't a matter of dutiful looking up to a man some years older, of revering and respecting and perserving anything. It was all fun. Fun to have him fall in love with her. Fun to plan for a complete break with the old way, and exciting days in the new. Nobody stopped her, nobody could stop her—divorce was an amazingly simple process, and to marry a rich and handsome and admiring man was a most rejuvenating adventure.

Isabel thought with real affection, and with only an occasional qualm of self-blame, of Dennis. He was out in the South Pacific somewhere, in one of those palm huts so popular in war movies, he was doing a great job, and she admired him. But life carried her into new channels as a small boat might be whirled away into delicious thrilling rapids.

Pleasure was Avery's one thought, and everything he did was for his own pleasure. Fortunately he was so amusingly frank and so good-natured that it didn't interfere with the happiness of anyone else—indeed, his amusements usually and generously included other persons.

Supremely they included Isabel, of course, in the breathless crowded days before they were married, in the unbelievable beauty and luxury of early married days. This time had been a time of the sort of thrills of which every woman dreams; white frocks, white shoes, sunshine, laughter. Other women asking her where she got her hats. The reflections of idly moving sea water against white sails; evening gowns and gardens filled with moonlight, and the scent of roses. And always Avery's arm about her, and Avery's cheek, hard and close-shavel and scented, smelling of good soap and tweeds and the stuff he put on his thick black hair, against her own.

They had laughed a great deal in those days; they had laughed all the time. A dozen little phrases were coined between them, and always met with bursts of merriment. There was a great deal of champagne, and a great many reserved tables in far corners of dim night clubs; a great deal of tipping. There were lazy happy mornings when sunshine battered at the Venetian blinds of the magnificent fifteenth-floor suite of a great New York hotel, and the little French clock ticked on from ten to eleven, and eleven to the noon whistles, and the big stiff napkins were crumpled on the breakfast trays, while Avery and Isabel made their plans for another pleasure-crammed day.

"Want to see it?" Avery would ask, when some particularly delightful event was announced; tennis tournaments at Forest Hills, new plays, races.

"But I don't suppose we can get in."

"We'll get in. I'll get Morrison to get me a box. Want anyone else?"

That was one of the nicest things about Avery. He never was jealous or small; he was incurably gregarious—he liked a great many people, he wanted friends around him.

Dennis, on the other hand—but then there was something rather vulgar, Isabel would think, about comparing one's husbands. Especially when the discarded one had been everything good and admirable. But Dennis had never been social-minded; he came home tired, thoughtful, grateful for peace and the company of wife and babies.

It was some time after her marriage to Avery that Isabel realized that she had quite innocently captured the most eligible bachelor of San Francisco's most eclectic—not to say snobbish—set. When Avery Latimer came to a dinner, or played in a polo or tennis match, that event was a success. What Avery Latimer wore was the correct wear; ties from Paris, topcoats from Regent Street, boots from a tiny shop off Fifth Avenue at fifty dollars a pair. He lived in the old Latimer house in Woodside Park, with his mother's large staff of perfect servants. His mother for many years had lived anywhere but at home.

Avery's one interest in life and his one subject of conversation was sport. He shot ducks, doves, deer, and pheasants as the seasons came around; he fished for steelhead in the Rogue and the Applegate, and for marlin and bonita off the coasts of southern California and Florida. In peace years he had gone on long trips to Canada or Ireland, for the hunting, and incidentally for racing, roulette, court tennis, all of which he played with fervor.

No woman had interested him seriously in all his thirty-seven years until he saw Isabel Hardisty dining in a New York night club with a group of friends. He saw a glowing beautiful woman whose delight in her surroundings overflowed even to a vague smile for him, a complete stranger at a nearby table. It was a smile from black-lashed blue eyes under a soft fluff of dark gold hair; there was a tipped little glittering pretense of a hat on top of the hair; he saw her bare flawless shoulders and beautiful thin nervous brown hands; there were black arched brows and a cleft chin, and, most captivating of all, there was a wide finely cut mouth whose expression underscored the smile in her eyes.

She had immediately risen, to dance, as he watched her; her innocent vague gaze came to again, over her partner's shoulder. Her body was straight; her ankles and wrists aristocratically thin. When she came back from the dance he was at her table.

"This is Avery Latimer, Isabel," Nancy Strait said, introducing them. "I didn't even know he was in New York. But you've heard me speak of him; he's one of my specials."

"You mean I am to let him alone?" Isabel asked, with a serious look from one to the other. Avery felt his pulses stir as he pulled out her chair for her. She thanked him with an unsmiling glance, put down her velvet bag, settled herself beside him.

"Well I wouldn't go as far as that," Nancy said.

"Suppose you stop us when we have gone far enough?" Isabel suggested. She turned the full battery of her shinning eyes upon Avery. and knew at once that it was well, that way.

Suffered Year With Gas Sour Acid Upset Stomach

"Often Had to Stop and Rest", Unable to Sleep; Had Dizzy Spells, Headaches and Backache; Says Syntona Gave Her First Relief.

MRS. KATHLEEN BOYCE

"During the past year I was in poor health due to very troublesome stomach disorders," said Mrs. Kathleen Boyce, 9 Wortley Road, London, Ontario, recently.

"Almost every morsel of food I ate caused an excess of acid in my stomach with belching up of hot, sour liquids. Gas pressure in my stomach and chest made me so short of breath I would often have to stop and rest until the attack passed off. When these attacks came over me at night I was unable to sleep. My system must have become contaminated by the poisons from the sluggishness of my stomach as I had a constant nagging backache and rheumatic pains all through my arms and limbs. I was subject to severe dizzy spells and frequent sick headaches.

"I tried many different things and although nothing ever helped me before, Syntona has given me such gratifying results that I cannot praise it too highly. It relieved the gassy condition of my stomach and got my bowels moving regularly. Food does not distress me now and I can enjoy my meals without fear of pain or shortness of breath afterward. I am entirely free from headaches and dizzy spells and the rheumatic aches and pains have gone away. I now get restful sleep at night and feel so much better that even my work seems easier. I am glad to add my name to the many who are recommending Syntona."

Let this Pure Herbal Compound help you as it did so many other grateful men and women. Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 12 — (CP) — The gold and western oil stocks had small index gains at noon today on the exchange and the other groups were lower by 1/4 to a half-point. Trading was in the lightest volume in recent weeks at 464,000 shares for the first three hours.

Quemont and its parent company, Mining Corporation, came to life soon after noon and advanced in heavy trading. Quemont at 16 1/4 was up a point or more and Mining Corporation gained 70 cents to $8. Neighboring stocks advanced in good action.

Among the stronger golr issues were Cochenour Willans, Giant, Duquesne, Macassa and San Antonio.

Moderate weakness was displayed in the industrial section by the paper, liquor and utility groups. Hiram Walker lost 2 1/2. The textiles were a bit stronger.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Sept. 12 —(AP)— Selling was resumed in today's stock market on a more or less restricted basis but many issues managed to achieve further modest recoveries.

An early attempt to extend Wednesday's rally soon faded when motors softened and a number of pivotals retreated. Dealings never crowded the ticker tape, however, and extreme losses of fractions to seven points were reduced in most cases or converted into advances near the fourth hour.

Canadian issues were in retreat at mid-day with Hiram Walker off two points and Dome one. Seagrams trailed by ⅜. Canadian Pacific and McIntyre lost ½ and Lake Shore slipped ¼.

HOGS

Toronto, Sept. 12 —(CP)— Grade A, dressed, bacon-hogs, were unchanged at Hull $20.75 delivered, unchanged at Stratford, to farmers $20.65, to truckers $20.80, down 25 cents at Peterborough $20.15 plus transportation, in markets reporting early today.

QUEBEC GOLFER WINS TOURNEY WITH 295 SCORE

Ottawa, Sept. 12. (CP)—The Canadian Professional Golfers' Association yesterday crowned its 1946 champion —diminutive Jules Huot, Laval-Sur-Le-Lac pro and eldest of the three golfing Huot Brothers, after two wet days of Rivermead Golf course.

Jules.' unspectacular seven-over-par 295 for 72 holes of medal play gave him a four-point margin over his closest rivals, bringing him the $400 winner's share of the $1,600 prize money and making him first winner of the Cohama trophy, a new title award.

The big struggle was for the runner-up spot, which ended with Bob Gray of Toronto Scarboro, Gordie Brydson of Toronto Mississauga and Bobby Alston of the Gatineau Club, Aylmer, Que., in a three-way tie with 299 totals.

Gray, who had been sole occupant of the number two slot for the first 54 holes, was forced to share it when Brydson added a 73 on the last round and Bobby Alston came up with a 74. Gray went four over par for a 76 on the last 18 holes.

Butter Stocks Higher Current Ration to Stand

Ottawa, Sept. 12 (CP)—The Dominion Bureau of Statistics report cheerfully that Canada's butter supply position has improved, lending support to the growing belief that the current ration of six ounces per person per week will be maintained this winter.

The Bureau said stocks of creamery butter in cold storages and dairy factories at Sept. 1 stood at 68,627,000 pounds, a seasonal advance of 10,109,000 pounds over the preceding month and an increase of 873,000 pounds over the stocks held at Sept. 1, 1945.

The total also was a 4,473,000-pound rise over the five-year average.

Prices Board officials said last week they thought it would be possible to maintain the ration this winter instead of reducing it, as was done last winter when stocks were low.

Stocks of cheese in storage and in transit were 43,110,000 pounds, compared with 52,543,000 Aug. 1 and 64,983,000 on the corresponding date of last year. Stocks this year included 42,508,555 pounds of Canadian cheese and 106,949 pounds of imported cheese in storage and 494,000 pounds in transit.

Canada Should Use Favorable Time to Establish Overseas Markets Says Thomas Bata

Canada is regarded as the Number One country of the world from a goodwill point of view by the countries of Europe, whether it be gifts of money or food and supplies. Thomas Bata, head of the Bata Shoe organization who recently returned from a six months tour of that continent and the British Isles, told the Rotary Club this week.

If Canada can deliver the goods and send out ambassadors of good will in traders of merit it will be in a position to create fine export markets.

"There is no hope for full employment unless we have good export markets," Mr. Bata said. "Our organization is sending trained Canadians to several countries of the world so that we can get the proper distribution of merchandise and maintain employment throughout the year.

"We should use this favorable time to establish these overseas markets and fill them with first class merchandise and hold them until everything is plentiful again."

Holland Recovering

Referring to conditions in Europe, Mr. Bata said that Holland is recovering rapidly from her war experiences. Belgium is coming back the best of all countries on a financial basis. She has established legislation to purchase abroad and has abolished all export dues and has a very rigid price control. People are eating well.

"France and her people are eating fairly well but there are large quantities of land not under cultivation," Mr. Bata said. "There is a terrific manpower shortage and not much merchandise available. Many districts have villages destroyed with little evidence of reconstruction. The average working man spends 80 per cent of his wages for food and has but little left for clothing or luxuries. A foreigner can gorge himself on black market food which costs 1,000 francs or from $15 to $20 a meal.

Swiss Not Affected

Switzerland was barely affected by the war. She has all her factories running, plenty of electric power. There is a terrific building boom under way and no shortages of manpower or material.

Italy is in poor shape but gradually recovering. In Milan alone there are 200,000 unemployed begging on the streets. They do nothing but talk of revolution or escape to Switzerland. The black market is thriving and if you have the money you can get lobster, steaks and caviar, but the general populations is eating at soup kitchens.

"Czechoslovakia," the speaker said, "is officially outside the Russian zone but considers herself inside the Red sphere of influence. "We were told there are more British soldiers at Prague than Russians, but these were mostly on leave. Moscow influence is not seen in the country but the press is definitely linked with that of the Red capital. The Communist press is as vicious as ever and controls 80 per cent of the 26 daily newspapers in the country.

When the government took over the plants it operated them on a four-party system. That is the staff and personnel were representative of the four parties in the country. The attitude of the Communist party was that if it were not taken into consideration, there would be bloodshed.

Communists Solid

Behind the "Iron Curtain" as Mr. Bata termed the Russian line of demarkation in Europe, the Communists got 36 per cent of the vote. A strange thing is that where the country is not occupied by the Russians that district votes almost solidly Communist.

"One thing the war did for the people of Europe," Mr. Bata said, "was to utterly demoralize them. They have a complete misconception of morals and do not know right from wrong. People are doing things they never did before."

He felt that Canada should be extremely careful and not fall into a situation similar to that in Europe. "If there is a moral collapse in any country, it means its ruin," he said.

Europe is watching this country and the Communist press is playing up the strikes and unrest apparent here. Some of his people, Mr. Bata said, had received letters from their native country, asking if they should send food parcels over here.

In his first remarks, Mr. Bata gave a highly enjoyable account of his personal experiences during his two trips to the continent.

He was introduced by Rotarian Alex Nathan and club appreciation was expressed by Acting President W. H. Morrison.

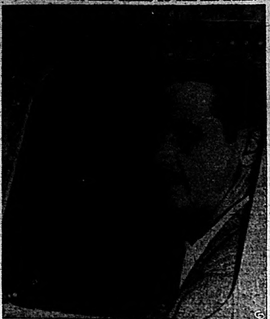
HOWARD HUGHES TAKES TO THE AIR AGAIN



Howard Hughes, multi-millionaire plane builder and movie maker, who only two months ago was teetering on the brink of death following the crash of his experimental plane, is shown in the cockpit of a B-23 in which he took off from Culver City, Calif., for New York. Hughes face bears signs of the physical ordeal he underwent in his fight for life. Purpose of the flight to New York is to contest action of the Motion Picture Association in ordering the withdrawal of its certificate of approval from Hughes' film, "The Outlaw." He is accompanied by Mechanic Earl Martyn and a soldier, identified as John Sleeter. His first scheduled stop was to be Albuquerque, N.M.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was reeding his paper and ma was reeding hers, saying, There's an embarrissment of riches on the radio this evening, William. There's a whole half hour Shakesbeer play, and there's the Zippy Cheese sympfinny orkester, and there's Lemuel Pitkin Gurkiss in a talk called Are We Ready for the Atomic Age?

Are we even ready for Lemuel Pitkin Gurkiss? pop said, and ma said, Who would of thought, a hunderd years ago, that the people of today would be able to sit quietly at home and improve their minds simply by terning a button on or off? The unfortunate thing is, those 3 programs all go on at the same time, so the question is, which one should I choose? she said.

If you bring the breakfist room radio in here too, and have Benny bring his little set down from his room, you could tern on the whole 3 programs, pop said, and ma said, Of course Shakesbeer is always good for the sole even if you just sit back and listen to the magic of his werds without bothering particulilly about their meening. What do you think, William? she said.

Shakesbeer was quite a writer, I understand, pop said, and ma said, On the other hand nothing can take the place of a symfinny orkester.

Unless perhaps another symfinny orkerter, pop said, and ma said, Lemuel Pitkin Gurkiss is suppose to be such an authority, it might be a mistake not to hear him. I wonder if we really are ready for the Atomic Age? she said.

Lemuel Pitkin Gurkiss will tell you, but the question is, does he know himself? pop said, and ma said, Oh, I think I'll just settle the whole question by listening to the Baffle Hour.

That'll be quite a change, you probably haven't heard a merder mistery since this afternoon, pop said.

Being the end of the subject and the beginning of the Baffle Hour.

C.I.O. MARITIME UNION VOTES TO STRIKE

Hitlerian Europe Destroyed by Map Makers at Parley

Fit Trieste, Thrace and Right Bank Danube Into New Map

By A. L. GOLDBERG

Paris, Sept. 13. (AP) — An Australian delegate to the Peace Conference said today the United Nations Security Council was in disrepute through arbitrary use of the veto power, and should not be permitted to govern the proposed free territory of Trieste.

"The use of the veto power in the Security Council has been arbitrary, irresponsible and dictatorial and has brought the Council into disrepute throughout the world," said Col. W. H. Hodgson, who has served as a delegate to the Council.

"It would make the Trieste Port question a threat to world peace".

To put the Trieste question in the hands of the Security Council, as suggested by the Four-Power Foreign Ministers' Council, "would insure making the plan unworkable," Col. Hodgson argued. He said Trieste should be governed by a Council representing the United States, Great Britain, Soviet Russia, France and three other nations.

His statement came as the conference resumed debate on the contentious Trieste issue. Other unsolved problems on the conference agenda included that of Thrace and the right bank of the Danube, as the peacemakers labored to change the map of Europe drawn at Vienna in 1940 by Hitler and Mussolini.

Two of the 21-power peace conference's five political and territorial commissions — for Finland and for Romania—completed their work yesterday, in the race to meet a newly established Oct. 5 deadline for drafting peace treaties for Bulgaria, Finland, Hungary, Italy, and Romania. The military commission also wound up its work on the Romanian pact.

This means that the future Finland and the future Romania have been outlined, with Russia getting Petsamo province and Finland's only outlet to the Arctic Ocean; and Romania losing Bessarabia to Russia and Southern Dobruja to Bulgaria, but getting back Transylvania from Hungary. The Balkan changes undid a 1940 Vienna mapping job by the Axis Partners.

Today's conference program called for eight commission sessions — a full slate — as delegates knuckled down to meet the Oct. 5 deadline, the final day here if the delegations are to be in New York by Oct. 23 when the United Nations General Assembly convenes.

Declined Complete Answer

After discussion opened today on the Italian treaty, Foreign Minister Molotov of Russia asked the United States to give a more precise explanation of how the liberty of the proposed free port of Trieste was to be guaranteed, but the American delegate declined a complete answer at this time.

James C. Dunn, United States Ambassador to Rome and chief American delegate in the Italian political and territorial commission which is considering the tough problem of Trieste, said only that the United States plan called for the government of the proposed free city of Trieste to be named by the United Nations Security Council and that he would be its representative in administering the area.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Sept. 13 —(CP)— Synopsis at 7:30 a.m.: The flood of cold air from the Arctic Ocean which has brought unseasonably cool weather to Eastern Canada for the last few days is now subsiding, and temperatures over Southern Ontario are beginning to slowly rise. Strong southerly winds have brought warm clear weather to the Prairie Provinces where maximum temperatures of 85 were reported on Thursday from Regina to Estevan. No rain was reported anywhere in Canada during the night but scattered showers were occurring south of the Manitoba border.

Want Arbitration Of Non-Wage Issues in Strike

Hamilton, Sept. 13—(CP)—The United Steel Workers of America (C.I.O.), which called a wages-hours strike in basic steel plants July 15, has gone as far as it can in compromise, and now insists that an agreement to arbitrate non-wage issues be one of the conditions of settlement, says C. H. Millard, national director of the union.

Mr. Millard told a press conference here late yesterday that if the companies would agree to arbitration this would pave the way to early settlement of the dispute affecting basic plants in Hamilton, Sault Ste. Marie and Sydney, N.S. "We hope we are reaching a point where the advisory committee can conscientiously recommend strike settlement to our membership because the number of issues has been reduced," he said.

He declared the union was not averse to a ballot on the government's settlement formula but insisted that only members of the bargaining agency — the union—should participate. Asked whether the union would agree to men still at work in the Hamilton plant taking part in such a ballot he said "The union has been certified as the proper bargaining agency and it could not possibly permit those outside the union who have refused to accept any responsibility or contribute to its operation to participate in its deliberations."

The union head emphasized that the union had not retreated from its demand for a 15½ ent wage increase per hour. He said the union was agreeable to a 12½ cent raise provided it was accompanied by other concessions that would bring the over-all increase up to the level demanded.

He explained the difference could be made up by granting pay for statutory holidays not worked, or double time for holidays that are worked, and other concessions.

Court Room Used for Temporary Living Quarters?

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 13 — (AP) — Mrs. Lucille Johnson today considered an offer made by Judge Robert C. Cannon to use the civil court jury room as temporary living quarters for herself and her nine children. Judge Cannon, hearing that the Johnson family was about to be evicted and the children placed in the county home, offered Mrs. Johnson the jury room. He then arranged with the Red Cross chapter to supply 10 cots to equip the quarters.

Meat Scarcity and Unemployment Chief Worries in Many U.S. Centres

New York, Sept. 13 —(AP)— Meat is the scarcest food item in the United States larder; hundreds of thousands of workers are unemployed in strike-hit American cities, and the housing shortage has reached critical proportions in many communities. These facts were disclosed today in a country-wide survey.

Samplings of conditions in cities from coast to coast also showed that the family larder was short of sugar, soaps, fats and oils.

This is how the situation stacked up in the leading United States cities before the end of the A.F.L. maritime strike on the West coast and before the start of the country-wide strike of the C.I.O. National Maritime Union:

New York — Food: Office of Price Administration investigators found only about 55 per cent of retailers had meat for sale. Housing: Highly critical. Strikes: Port at standstill through maritime strike. Truck strike cutting food supplies. Unemployment: State Department of Placement and Unemployment Insurance said 150,000 workers out.

Washington, D. C. — Food: Meat fast dwindling, with sugar and shortening equally scarce. Unemployment: Estimated 20,000 to 25,000 jobless. Housing: Individuals needing adequate living quarters estimated "in excess of 100,000."

Chicago — Food: Meat scarcest food in this important livestock centre. Strikes: 12, involving 1,675 workers. Unemployment: Unemployment Compensation Commission reports 75,000 compensation claimants.

Detroit — Food: Beef hardest food to get. Strikes: One factory shut with 5,000 idle. Unemployment: State commission reported 40,000 compensation claims from industrial workers, and 35,000 veterans seeking allowances. Housing: City housing commission predicts demand for 20,000 to 25,000 units.

GEORGE POPOVICH, WIFE SENTENCED TO BE HANGED

Jury Finds Them Guilty Of Murder of L. Nato, Thorold Merchant On June 21st Last

Welland, Sept. 13 — (CP) — George Popovich and his wife Elizabeth were sentenced to be hanged Nov. 12 for the murder of Louis Nato, Thorold merchant, after a Supreme Court jury late yesterday returned a verdict of "guilty" following deliberation lasting an hour and 50 minutes.

The 45-year-old Popovich and his 38-year-old wife were charged with the hold-up slaying of Nato last June. Nato, injured and minus most of his clothing, staggered to the home of a neighbor early on June 17, said he had been "taken for a ride" and had been robbed of $180 before he was left tied and unconscious in a field.

Before his death June 21, Nato told W. H. McMillan "It was Liz Johnson and that man of her's, Popovich. They did this to me and took my money." Mrs. Popovich's first husband was named Johnson, and she has two daughters named Johnson, 18 and 13 years of age. She was Nato's housekeeper for some time before she married Popovich and on Wednesday testified that Nato had threatened he would do everything he could to destroy her happiness.

Defence Witnesses Heard

Among witnesses for the defence was John Sewich, Welland cab driver whom the Popovich's said they were visiting at the time the attack on Nato was alleged to have occurred, and George Koucar, who testified he had talked to the Popovich's at 2 a.m. on June 17.

Both the Crown and defence addresses to the jury occupied less than an hour and Mr. Justice Walter Schroeder in his charge spent two hours reviewing the evidence. "I can find no evidence to justify a reduction of this charge," he noted. "The jury must find them guilty of murder, guilty of manslaughter, or acquit them."

When His Lordship pronounced the death sentence the woman's two daughters dashed towards the prisoner's box, sobbing. As Provincial Police stopped them Mrs. Popovich screamed and threw her arms around her husband.

After Popovich had been removed, an officer and a Provincial Police matron escorted Mrs. Popovich from the prisoner's box. She appeared to faint, but recovered and said "Let me kiss my children before you take me away."

Mysterious Lights in Sky

Nancy, Sept. 13 — (AP)—Mysterious "lights in the sky" were reported streaking over Lorraine last night by inhabitants of the region, and L'Agence France Presse quoted them as saying the objects could not possibly have been either shooting stars or fast moving airplanes. The first reports came several days ago from Longwy.

President of American Tobacco Company Dies At Matapedia, Quebec

New York, Sept. 13 — (AP) — George Washington Hill, 61, who rose from a $5-a-week helper in his father's tobacco firm to president of the American Tobacco Company, died today at his fishing camp in Matapedia, Que.

Announcement of his death was made here by the company. He had been ill for a short time but the cause of death was not announced.

Mr. Hill, whose company popularized Lucky Strike cigarets, made the tobacco business his life work and rose to become one of the highest paid corporation executives in the world, averaging more than $400,000 annually for years as president.

He earned $5 a week when he joined the company at the age of 20 and once disclosed that his salary and bonuses netted him $6,500,000 between 1926, when he became president of the firm, and 1939.

An advertising man at heart, Mr. Hill reputedly spent more money advertising a single product than anyone in history — around $200,000,000 by 1944. In a single year the advertising outlay was $20,000,000.

"As the result of my years of experience in advertising I sincerely believe it to be a very great yet a very simple science," he once said. "Reduced to its simplest terms, advertising is really nothing but 'salesmanship-in-print' and during these more recent years, with the introduction of the radio, 'salesmanship-in-person' as well."

Belligerent, controversial slogans were conceived and made to permeate the land — emblazoned in newspaper and magazine advertisements and on billboards and broadcast by radio. Many of these slogans were his own inventions, such as the "Reach for a Lucky instead of a sweet" phrase that stirred up reverberations from candy manufacturers.

Seeking a radio vehicle for his advertising message, Mr. Hill decided on music and the weekly "Hit Parade" was born. He was supposed to have gauged public reaction to the music by watching his elderly aunt tap her foot as she listened.

Through the programs the singsong jargon of the tobacco auctioneer was lifted from a sectional to international oddity.

Though one of the biggest corporation executives, he was one of the least known. His work was his life and he spent most of his time at it, except for his annual six-week fishing trips to Matapedia, Que.

Born at Philadelphia Oct. 22, 1884, Mr. Hill attended Williams College for two years, then joined the American Tobacco Company of which his father, Percival S., was head.

In the summer of 1935, in London, he married his secretary, Miss Mary Barnes of New York. By two previous marriages he had two sons, George, Jr., and Percival S., II, and a daughter Mary.

Family Comes Home to Find Furniture Loaded in Car; 3 Held

Charges of breaking and entry with theft, and automobile theft, have been laid by provincial police against three young men who were arrested in the Apsley district by Provincial Constable Stan Palmateer of Bancroft, following a search which was started in Madoc township, Tuesday night.

The three young men are Kenneth Holland of Brantford, Charles Airhart of Peterborough, and Roy Seymour of Toronto. They have been remanded in custody for appearance in police court at Bancroft on Wednesday.

Search for the three men commenced Tuesday night when Clifford Brooks, Madoc township, after being away several days from his residence west of Madoc, returned to find his furniture and other household possession loaded on a car in the driveway. The above three men are alleged by police to have been at the scene and are stated to have threatened Brooks when he approached.

Running to the highway Brooks flagged a passing car and had police at Belleville notified. When police arrived on the scene the three men had disappeared into the woods to the rear of the Brooks farm and an unsuccessful all-night search by Constable Ernest Keays and Traffic Officer Sam Ervine with Constable Palmateer ensued.

Police claim that the car the trio abandoned at the Brooks farm had been stolen in Toronto. Later that night police believe the three stole a 1934 Chrysler belonging to Ed. Hatfield, of Madoc. The three were sleeping in this car in the Apsley district when they were arrested.

In the car were several Ontario automobile markers which had been stolen since June, 1946. Equipment taken from the two cars and sold, has been recovered by police officers.

Four Smashing Successes Won In North China

Peiping, Sept. 13 — (AP) — Chinese government troops have scored four smashing successes in North China, including capture of Communist Army headquarters for eastern Hopeh province at Tsunhwa, 90 miles northeast of Peiping, independent press dispatches said today.

The Catholic newspaper Social Welfare said government troops under Gen. Fu Tso-Yi captured Tsining and Fengchen, two Communist strongpoints north of long-besieged Tatung, government railway city 150 miles west of Peiping.

Four Chinese newspapers carried dispatches saying government troops had captured Chifeng in Jehol province.

Montreal, Sept. 13 —(CP)— Louis Bercovitz, charged with the murder last July 25 of gambler Harry Davis in the latter's betting house here, appeared in King's Bench today and his jury trial was set by Mr. Justice Wilfrid Lazure for Oct. 1.

Davis was fatally shot in his mid-town Stanley Street bookmaking establishment and the following day Bercowitz gave himself up to police. He was alleged to have admitted the shooting and to have claimed self-defence.

Alexander Irked, Leaves Conference Over Albania Issue

Paris, Sept. 13. (AP) —A. V. Alexander, Britain's First Lord of the Admiralty, walked out of the Peace Conference Military Commission today during a two-hour debate with the Slav State group on inviting Albania to make a statement on the Italian Treaty.

"I despair of leading this Commission in the path of common sense," he said just before a vote was taken.

By a vote of 15 to 4, with one abstention and one absent, it was decided to invite Albania to appear and voice her comments without any time limit or other restrictions.

Mr. Alexander had argued that Albania should have only half an hour to speak on the military provisions of the Italian Treaty and should be notified beforehand that the Commission already had voted down several Yugoslav amendments that matched Albanian proposals

France, Greece and the United States voted with Britain against the proposal. A British representative remained ebhind for the vote.

GANGS ROB TWO PALESTINE BANKS IN DARING RAIDS

Four Persons Killed And 12 Attackers Arrested; Jaffa Loot Recovered

By CARTER DAVIDSON

Jaffa, Palestine, Sept. 13—(AP)—At least four persons were killed and four injured today when two armed bands, believed members of the Jewish Stern gang, raided the Ottoman banks in Tel Aviv and Jaffa, escaping with $6,000 from Tel Aviv.

Twelve of the 15 attackers in the Arab city of Jaffa were apprehended and all the $2,000 taken here was recovered from the arrested Jews. All the casualties were in Jaffa.

Both Tel Aviv and Jaffa were placed under a rigid curfew for an indefinite period following the daring daylight robberies.

The simultaneous raids were staged shortly before noon. Diversionary incidents at Jaffa, synchronized with the attacks, including the firing of an oil drum in the street to block traffic, an exchange of fire with police at a nearby sub-station, and a machine-gun volley from a moving automobile against an Arab crowd.

Police said casualties included one Arab police officer, two Arab civilians and one Jewish raider killed, and three arrested Jews wounded. An eyewitness said James Annett, English bank manager, also was shot through the leg.

The attack was accompanied by at least one diversionary oil bomb explosion and a barrage of machinegun fire from a moving automobile at the scene, David Douglas Duncan, photographer for Life magazine, witnessed the incident. He expressed belief at least three civilians were killed by bullets from the automobile.

"The man standing right next to me was killed outright and another man on the other side was badly shot up " Duncan said.

Duncan walked into the scene of the attack a few minutes after eight heavily armed men entered the bank.

He is on his first visit to Canada.

"We'll want all you can send us, I expect. We thank God for Canada, I can tell you that," he said.

See Wallace Speech Stirring Hornets Nest Over U.S.-Soviet Relations

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, Sept. 13 (AP) — Diplomatic authorities frankly predicted today that Commerce Secretary Wallace's foreign policy speech will stir a hornet's nest of controversy over United States-Soviet relations.

Despite President Truman's assertion that no departures from established United States foreign policy were involved there was wide speculation that it might also result in a sharp split between Mr. Wallace and State Secretary Byrnes, now at the Paris peace conference.

Calling for frank recognition of Russian and American "spheres of influence," Mr. Wallace at the same time denounced any "get tough with Russia" policies. He demanded that this country abstain from close co-operation with Britain in controversies involving the Soviet Union.

The United States cabinet officer delivered the speech in New York last night at a meeting sponsored by the National Citizens Political Action Committee and the Independent Citizens Committee of the arts, sciences and professions.

About four hours before Mr. Wallace spoke, Mr. Truman told his press conference that he approved of the speech and that it was exactly in line with the policies of Mr. Byrnes.

However, diplomats examining the text noted three points which they considered to be a variance with current practices and lines of development of American diplomacy:

1. While Mr. Byrnes has repeatedly and emphatically disavowed the existence of any Anglo-American bloc in dealings with Russia, London and Washington have followed almost completely parallel policies in dealing with political issues in eastern Europe and the eastern Mediterranean area.

Whether it was this kind of parallel action which Mr. Wallace had in mind calling for an American foreign policy independence of the "British Imperialistic policy" he did not say.

2. The present basic American attitude toward all major issues with Russia has been described at the State Department as one of an absolute refusal to yield when either American principles or interests are involved.

3. Since State Secretary Hull's visit to Moscow in the fall of 1943, American policy in the main has opposed the division of the world into spheres of influence.

Mr. Wallace, however, declared that the United States should recognize "that we have no more business in the political affairs of eastern Europe than Russia has in the affairs of Latin America, western Europe and the United States."

Want Wage Parity With AFL Workers In United States

Walkout Agreed on by Voice Vote After Pres. Approves

New York, Sept. 13 (AP) — The National Maritime Union (C.I.O.) voted unanimously today to go on strike at noon E.D.T. in a demand for wage parity with A.F.L. workers.

The C.I.O. Maritime workers, in a mass meeting, agreed to the walkout by a voice vote after they had heard N.M.U. President Joseph Curran urge approval of the plan, declaring:

"We will go on strike until the shipowners agree in writing to wipe out all wage differences. We won't go back until all seamen have parity in wages.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP) — C.I.O. seamen on both coasts today went on strike for higher pay even as A.F.L. seafarers on the Pacific Coast ended their eight-day old walkout by accepting a government proposal restoring a wage hike which had been vetoed by the wage stabilization board.

The C.I.O. men, members of the National Maritime Union, struck early today in New York and on the west coast because of "deliberate creation of inequities which result in different rates of pay for men doing the same work on the same types of ships," the N.M.U. council said here.

Joseph Curran, President of N.M.U., said the strike would not be effective in gulf ports or in eastern ports outside of New York City until noon today.

Has 90,000 Members

He said the strike would be supported by 200,000 members of the six C.I.O. and one independent union comprising the committee for Maritime unity. The N.M.U. has 90,000 members throughout the United States.

While it appeared there would be no lapse in what has been the country's most costly shipping tieup, beginning with the walkout a week ago of the A.F.L. Seafarers International Union and the Sailors Union of the Pacific, a possible swift settlement was seen when the government declared itself ready to cut in the C.I.O. men on the wage hikes a White House ruling opened for A.F.L. Maritime workers.

N.M.U. pickets began taking the places at docks at which N.M.U. ships were berthed on the west coast shortly after authorization was received from the National Council of the N.M.U. in New York.

Refer Proposal To Committee On Marriage, Divorce

By SHANE MacKAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg. Sept. 12 —(CP)— The Lower House of the Anglican General Synod last night rejected a motion asking it to "regard with sympathy" a proposal by R. V. Harris, Halifax, that the church remarry innocent parties in divorce cases.

Defeat of the motion came after a debate which began Tuesday night and had to be postponed until yesterday's late session.

A third resolution referring the proposal without comment to the Synod's committee on marriage and divorce was passed.

The Synod also recorded its "deep concern" at what it alleged to be the failure of labor and management to interpret and act under present legislation for the settlement of disputes.

Scheduled for discussion today are reports of committees on basic salaries, broadcasting, primatial see, restoration of Canterbury Cathedral and revision of the prayer book.

The Synod will close its 16th session tomorrow night when formal prorogation of the House of Bishops and the Lower House in joint session will take place. The meetings opened here Sept. 4th.

Grossly Disorted Says Vishinsky

Paris, Sept. 13 —(AP)— The battle of words touched off by Andrei Y. Vishinsky's remark before the peace conference about the qualities of Italian fighting men continued today.

The conference secretariat made public a letter from Mr. Vishinsky answering the protest of the Marquis Lupi di Soragna, in which the Russian deputy foreign minister said the Italian had "grossly distorted" that part of his Sept. 5 speech and insisted anew that he was talking only about such generals as Rodolfo Graziani and Giovanni Messe when he said the Italians were better at running than fighting.

"I leave aside the calumnious character of the declaration contained in the (do Soragna) letter," Mr. Vishinsky wrote, inserting the official text of his remarks as published yesterday in the official translation. He asked that his letter be distributed as a conference document, as was that of the Marquis, who said he considered the reported remark by Mr. Vishinsky a slight to thousands of Italian soldiers who joined the Allied cause.

First demolition job will be Admiral Jellicoe's flagship Iron Duke, recently salvaged at Scapa Flow. Later the company will break down the German battleship Derfflinger, salvaged in 1939 and still floating—upside down—waiting for the wreckers.

Steel and other materials which are recovered will go back into West Scotland industries.

The accused was represented by Richard A. Arnott.

A charge of operating a dance hall without a licence against Jack McCaughen of Stirling was enlarged at the request of the Crown.

The court docket was a lengthy one with a total of 36 cases being listed for hearing. Most of the morning session was taken up with the hearing of evidence in connection with an assault case on which a conviction against the accused was discharged by the Magistrate.

Youth Modest Over Rescue Of Drowning Man

Bravery of an Ottawa youth who rescued a tourist from drowning while attending the air cadet camp at Mountain View in late August has just come to light with the receipt by the boy of a letter from the man he rescued.

The cadet's parents learned of the act when they became curious about a letter the youth, Philip Steele, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Steele, 91 Melrose Avenue, Ottawa, received from the United States.

In the letter the tourist, J. Edward McAvoy, Watertown, N.Y., said he understood he was the 13th. person young Steele had saved from drowning in his brief lifetime.

Explaining, the youth modestly stated that two other cadets had assisted him in pulling the man from the deep waters of Lake Ontario off the Sandbanks. He added his other rescues concerned "mostly little boys at scout camp."

Evil Portents of Friday the Thirteenth Darken the Path of Carefree Folk

Belleville residents apparently are not a superstitious group of people. That is, until they are reminded that it is Friday the 13th; a black cat dashes across their path, or someone upsets a salt shaker or breaks a mirror.

The thing uppermost in the mind of the man on the street today was not the dark forces of superstition at work but where he could buy long underwear. For the coolness of the air this Friday the Thirteenth morning was sufficient to drive the hobgoblins of bad luck sometimes associated with the day and date from the average man's mind.

That is, as was said before, until he was reminded of it.

Walks Under Ladder

A pert stenographer, shivering in sheer nylons and summer apparel, walked between a ladder and the window of a Front Street shop on her way to the office shortly before nine o'clock.

"Did you know it was Friday, the 13th?" an inquiring reporter asked.

The pert one clutched her throat. She looked behind and upwards and noticed what a horrible fate she had missed. Then turning, she walked back and turned again, passing this time on the outside of the ladder.

Upsets Salt Shaker

At a soda fountain, the scribe purposely spilled a salt shaker, but the well-dressed young business man seated beside him paid no attention.

"That's bad luck, especially on Friday 13th" he murmured. His fountain companion looked quickly at the wall as if in search of a calendar. Then he grinned, reached out quickly and tossed a pinch of the spilled salt over his left shoulder.

Still tempting the fates, the reporter dug up a small piece of looking glass and deliberately smashed it. Nothing happened. Outside the sun shone brightly. People greeted him with a cheery good morning. No sinister black cats crossed his path. Everything was all right with the world.

Defies the Fates

Unfortunately there were no theatrical dressing rooms in which he could whistle. No first night leading ladies to whom he could present a bouquet of flowers. He went home and tossed his hat on the bed in his room. Still the lurking forces of bad luck stayed in their cloudy imaginative background.

Then he met a chap who paid him two dollars borrowed four weeks previously. He bought a ticket from a member of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment on a draw for a handsome prize and the number was 1313.

Then it happened. He strode back to his desk in the office.

A telephone tinkled — and he picked up the receiver.

Gets the News

His face suddenly assumed an expression of keen disappointment. It was the cheerful voice of his insurance agent notifying him that a substantial premium was long overdue and it must be paid — or else.

From now on, salt shakers will remain upright. Mirrors will remain intact. Ladders standing against the wall will be given a wide berth. First night leading ladies will go flowerless. Hats will be placed in the proper spot. Black cats will be shunned.

For the reporter suddenly remembered he was born on Friday 13, many, many years ago.

Reconstruction Issue Of Stamps Ready

By W. M. GLADISH
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Sept. 13 —(CP)— A four-months' wait by Canadian stamp collectors ends on Monday, Canada's first post-war "Stamp Day" when nine pictorial stamps of what has been termed the Reconstruction Issue go on sale.

The expectation is that main post offices across Canada will do a land-office business with queues of unusual customers — people who want stamps not solely to carry correspondence but rather to gain the prized first-day covers. These are stamped envelopes with first-day postal cancellations.

Already thousands of advance orders from outside Canada have flooded the Post Office Department in Ottawa, where covers are being serviced for foreign buyers.

ENDURANCE CONTEST

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 13 —(CP)— London's "squatter" campaign took on the appearance of an endurance contest between police and hundreds of invaders of vacant London luxury flats today as the government drive to quell the movement gathered momentum after a slow start.

The situation quieted during the night after the nearest approach to violence in the five-day-old squatter invasion occurred when mounted police herded 2,000 squatters sympathizers off the street near one occupied building without injury to anyone.

Directors Want Council To Act on Pigeon Nuisance

The directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce at its first meeting of the fall and winter term on Thursday, unanimously endorsed a motion recommending the City Council to take immediate action to rid the city of the pigeon nuisance.

These birds, it was pointed out by members, are a distinct disgrace to the city and are ruining awnings and other property along the main thoroughfares as well as in residential sections.

The recommendation will be forwarded to the City Council immediately.

President Lorne McDougall, who was in the chair, formally welcomed the directors at the first meeting of the new term. He made special mention of Mr. Harold Seldon, one of the guests present, who was recently appointed chairman of the Retail Merchants' Division of the Chamber. Mr. Seldon expressed his appreciation of the honor conferred upon him and briefly addressed the directors on matters pertaining to his new work as chairman of the merchants' division.

Female Help Scarce

Among the matters discussed at the meeting was the shortage of female help in the city. It was pointed out that merchants and those who work long hours are feeling the pinch especially along office help lines. Factories, it was stated, close one day a week, and in one instance, help has left city offices and joined a factory staff in order to get Saturday off.

Some of the directors felt that the time was not far off when stores and shops and other places of employment would close one day a week, instead of the usual half holiday in mid-week. One suggested that Monday would be the logical day to remain closed because factory personnel had Saturday off and would be able to do their shopping. A further advantage of Monday closing is that shop and store proprietors would be able to spend Mondays on buying trips and other necessary work relative to business.

Advertisements, it was pointed out, are appearing in Toronto newspapers offering five-day week jobs to stenographers and other office personnel.

Industrial Sites Needed

Following President McDougall's report on industry, ex-mayor Jamieson Bone stated that he had been informed that the city of Galt, Ont., had purchased 1,000 acres of land to be set aside for industrial purposes. He urged that Belleville likewise buy land for the same reason and if necessary get the vote of the people.

He also suggested that the government be urged to "get on with the work on the four-lane highway here. You can't drive down Highway 2 in these parts nowadays without being held up by trucks," he said.

City Promised Building Material For 250 Houses Early in 1947

Aftermath of a recent visit to Ottawa by Mayor Frank Follwell, President Lorne McDougall and secretary-manager John Badgley, of the Chamber of Commerce is that Belleville has been promised material for the erection of 250 houses here in the early part of 1947, it was announced at the first fall luncheon of the Chamber of Commerce directorate on Thursday.

President McDougall who made the announcement stated that a large firm that has priorities in building materials told the delegation that it was impossible to place this city on the 1946 list, but it would be among the first to get materials at the beginning of the coming year.

The president also stated that one or two contractors have indicated that they might be interested in integrated housing here later on a private scale.

Vermont Cattle Buyer Fined $300 For Violating Export Regulations

H. L. Myers, Vermont cattle buyer, was fined $300 and costs in Belleville county police court on Thursday after pleading guilty to a charge of conspiracy to violate export regulations under the Contagious Diseases of Animals Act.

Appearing on a like charge was Harry O'Neil of Thurlow township, who also pleaded guilty and was assessed a fine of $75.

Three other charges involving one Belleville area cattle dealer were enlarged tentatively to Friday, Sept. 20, when it is expected a date will be set for the hearing.

Six Picton Men Involved.

A total of twenty-six other charges involving violation of the Contagious Diseases of Animals Act have been laid against six men in the Picton district with the cases having been laid over until Sept. 25.

In the words of Special Prosecutor Malcolm Robb the two men who appeared in Belleville court on Thursday were "small fish" as compared with others who have been implicated in a widespread net of violations of the Contagious Diseases of Animals Act. The charges against Myers and O'Neil charged that in April, May or June of 1945 they had conspired to violate the above regulations.

Some Cows Turned Back.

Corporal Holley R. Greaves of the R.C.M.P., who investigated the matter, told the court that Myers had bought cattle in the Belleville area for export to the United States. Five of the cows had been turned back at the border because of their giving bloody milk which inspectors said were signs of mastitis.

The five cattle were returned to the premises of Harry O'Neil, Thurlow township, where within a few days the bloody milk condition with two of them cleared up. The two cows were re-exported with substitute ear tags.

Here Prosecutor Robb brought out that it was by ear tags that a definite check was kept on cattle by authorities and by cattle men. The whole scheme of the act was possible only through honesty of the ear tags.

Ear Tags Changed.

Continuing his evidence Cpl. Greaves told how ear tags from exportable cattle had been substituted for ear tags from the cows returned from the border. Two of the cows were then re-exported and passed the border successfully.

Ear tags placed in cows' ears for identification purposes are normally considered as "fool proof" according to the witness. As in the case of combination safe locks, however, there are "master mechanics" who can remove the tags from the cows without breaking.

Myers had caused no trouble for the authorities, witness said, when it was discovered he had violated the export regulations, and had gone to Toronto and made a full confession to veterinary authorities there. Myers did not substitute ear tags as a general practice, according to the witness.

Minimum Fine Asked.

Defence Counsel Robt. A. Pringle during cross-examination pointed out that cattle returned from the border would normally be sold locally and possibly at considerable loss to the dealer. Urging a minimum fine for his client Mr. Pringle stated that no financial advantage had been received by Mr. O'Neil as result of the transaction, but the bench pointed out that the cattle could not have been re-exported without the assistance of Mr. O'Neil.

The two cases were heard by Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

The six men charged in Picton court are S. H. Shipsides, veterinary surgeon of Wellington; Mike Levine, Sam Levine, Leon Suitt, George L. Brown and Fred Scott.

IN MEMORIAM

GANNON — In loving and sad remembrance of a dear son and brother, Corporal Warren Morgan Gannon, who lost his life on Active Service in Italy, two years ago today.

Gone, dear Warren, gone forever,
How we miss your smiling face;
But you left us to remember
None on earth can take your place.
A happy home we once enjoyed—
How sweet the memory still—
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill.
—Sadly missed by Mother, Father, Sisters and Brothers.

GANNON — In loving memory of Corporal Warren Morgan Gannon, killed in action on September 13th., 1944.

Beside your pictures I often stand,
With heart both crushed and sore,
But in the gloom the sweet words come:
"Not lost but gone before."
God knows how much I miss you,
He counts the tears I shed,
And whispers, "He only sleeps,
"Your loved one is not dead."
So I'll be brave, dear Warren,
And pray to God each day,
And when He calls me home to you
Your smile will guide the way.
—Lovingly remembered by Wife and Daughter.

TOURISTS LAMENT AS SARK REPLACES ITS SMALL HARBOR

Quaint Island Playground Again Attracts Visitors Throughout the Summer Months

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Sark, Channel Islands, (CP)—Creux Harbor, said to be the smallest in the world, is being replaced by a larger, more imposing waterway.

Thousands of visitors will be sorry. For the old harbor, nestling at the foot of gorse and daisy-clad cliffs, the centre of mysterious caves and limpid pools, has a romantic quality.

To the city-dweller it is so novel—so theatrically pretty and unreal—that he cheerfully pays the blue-jerseyed boatman sixpence for ferrying him a few yards from ship to harbor steps—on top of the fare from Guernsey and the shilling poll-tax which every visitor must pay.

From there he passes through a cliff tunnel, picturesquely littered with boats and lobster-pots and ropes and spars, and climbs the steep-winding lane through a wooded, flower-decked ravine.

Now the Germans have gone, Sark is once more a happy playground. Its dells and lanes and cliffs ring with the laughter of children. Young men and women bathe in sea-battered coves and explore the caves at low tide.

Norman Taverns

Their elders quaff strong ale in quaint little Norman taverns and play darts or shove ha'penny with the fishermen, the carriers and the harbor hands.

But Sark in winter is a different place. The gale-lashed breakers crash and thunder on its rock-bound coast and the savage wind sometimes blows a phenomenon known as the "souffleur" spouting sea-spray to a height of 100 feet. Then, but for telephone and radio, Sark is cut off from the world, inaccessible from sea and air.

On the cliffs above Gouliot Bay stands a monument erected to the memory of five men, including the harbor engineer, who were drowned while attempting to return to Guernsey in an open motor launch.

In the churchyard are numerous graves of Sark fishermen whose boats, for all their experience, were caught and overwhelmed by sudden squalls.

Sometimes in winter Sark is isolated for a week on end. Only recently, in mid-summer, no boats arrived here for four days. Food supplies ran low and visitors from London found themselves, once more, without beer.

That is the only disadvantage in coming to Sark for a holiday—you never know how long you may have to stay.

Plan to Build Churches Alongside Houses Under Govt. Plan

London, Sept. 13. (Reuters)—A plan to build modern churches side by side with the houses under government building plans is contained in a report to the ecclesiastical commissioners of the Church of England, issued yesterday by an advisory panel of churchmen, architects and planning consultants. Other recommendations include the provision of space in the new churches for the presentation of religious drama.

Veterans Design Women's Clothes

By A. M. MACKENZIE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, (CP)—Former servicemen and women who put together bren guns, tanks and airplanes during the war now are learning to put together women's clothes.

They are students at Canada's largest women's clothes designing school and their course is one of those offered by the veterans affairs department to discharged service persinnel. There are 200 students, more than half of them veterans, divided almost equally between men and women.

During the seven-month course the students learn about color blends, lines and the other intricate details of piecing together milady's wardrobe. For many veterans it is a far cry from their pre-war occupations.

Johnny Martin, a recent graduate, formerly was a gold miner at Noranda, Que. Now he has his own shop here. Sam Schrier of Montreal, was in the Provost Corps and at one time was welterweight boxing champion of Military District No. 4 (Montreal).

Every province is represented at the school which has its own Canadian Legion branch. Three of the seven instructors are veterans.

Principal is Maurice Lewis,, who has been in the designing business for 40 years, and A. C. Solomon, a veteran of the First Great War, is managing director.

"What the designing business is looking for is a definite characteristically Canadian style," Mr Solomon said in an interview.

Canada has no need for a "faked Parisian" style, he contended, but should adapt one of her own. He hopes the present influx of young people into the trade evntually will bring about such a result.

Mr. Solomon said the accent on youth is to be noted in the current style trends. People are wearing clothes that are loose and moderately draped. More and more persons are wearing sports apparel. Fussy evening wear is in demand.

One of the new trends he has noticed in the designing business is decentralization. In the past the industry was centred in large towns but the newcomers, including graduates from the school, are setting up their own establishments in their home towns across Canada.

MAN WHO CHAINED SON RELEASED ON PROBATION

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 13. (AP)—Kinz E. Wiltse was released on probation Thursday in connection with the chaining of his 13-year-old son.

Juvenile Judge Lawrence Wetherby probated a 50-day sentence on a charge of contributing to the neglect and delinquency of a minor, and told Wiltse, "You shouldn't even chain a dog, much less a child." The father was accused of fastening his son, James, to a 20-foot chain.

Accused Admits His Signature On Statements

Windsor, Sept. 13—(CP)—No jury was present yesterday when George Ronald Sears, 18, accused of killing two men and wounding three others in "slasher" attacks, said he did not remember signing a confession introduced as evidence by the prosecution, but admitted the signature was his.

Mr. Justice Dalton Wells ordered the Supreme Court jury from the courtroom until he had ruled as to the admissability of ruled as to the admissibility of after his arrest July 6.

Crown Attorney E. C. Awrey said he would attempt to prove Sears stabbed Sgt. Hugh Blackwood Price in August, 1945, after Price made indecent proposals to Sears.

Police officers had testified that Sears said he was glad he was arrested before he killed someone else and that he knew he would be hanged. Sears testified he did not remember making the statements.

Asked to tell his story by defence counsel J. H. Clark, Sears told of his arrest and said when detectives told him they were holding him in connection with the stabbings, he replied that he did not know what they were talking about and the charges were absurd.

He had then been returned to a cell. Sometime later he was questioned again but he did not remember what happened.

It was during this second questioning period that police said the statements were signed.

Sears was taken ill after the questioning and Dr. William Markhanen who attended him said Sears was pale and exhausted, probably because of emotional upheaval. But he had been rational when the doctor examined him.

When Sears denied the truth of the statements, the Crown Attorney asked: "Why did you sign a tissue of lies?"

"I don't know," Sears said.

BLUE PRINT for a NEST EGG

Let's talk a minute about savings . . . your savings. Chances are they are in a healthier state right now than for a long time. All through the war you made it a point of honour to buy—and hold—all the Victory Bonds you could. Now they amount to a surprisingly large sum.

In short, you proved you could save. And you discovered, perhaps for the first time, what a nice feeling of extra security and independence could be yours with a "nest egg" of savings safety tucked away.

Now there's no war to serve as a spur are you becoming less particular about putting aside a set sum every month? Are you losing the saving habit? Remember . . . the money you "save for yourself" is the most important part of the money you earn.

So please consider this simply a friendly reminder that savings do have to be planned; that sticking to the plan sometimes means doing without an occasional unbudgeted "extra", and that making regular deposits in a Royal Bank Savings Account is still a good way to get somewhere with your personal finances . . . and with your ambitions for yourself and your family.

Co-operation and Its Results

Ration book distribution has been carried on most efficiently by the local committee and the workers by whom thousands daily have been issued. The public knows the procedure and hence the task is lightened for the voluntary workers. These latter deserve the highest commendation on their co-operation to make the issuing of the books a smooth-running operation.

It is said that this may be the last of the ration books. Of course it is impossible to say definitely that it is the last because after the demands of the last war and the upset condition of the world and of agriculture in many lands which lay in the very theatre of war, no one can be farsighted enough to see the future in detail. However everyone will hope there will in the not too distant future be an end of rationing with the free flow of necessaries taking its place. Rationing in the years since it has been in use has served to bring about a fair distribution of products among the people so that no one would go without his due share.

Mr. Churchill Will be Welcome

Former Prime Minister Winston Churchill has been invited to pay a visit to Canada but so far no time has been arranged for the visit of the wartime leader who had so large a share to play in the making of the Allied victory.

Canada will welcome the great chieftain who took over the leadership of Britain in the dark days just before the fall of France. In the first few months as leader he saw Britain pass safely through the ordeal which the Huns had plotted against her. Out of those days can still be heard the ringing words of Mr. Churchill to the people of Britain and their Allies, words which were as mighty as guns. Destined, one must believe, to hold the greatest post in the world at that time and in the year following, Mr. Churchill saw his hopes and prayers answered. There was no invasion of the soil of Britain by the Hun. It could not be with so great a people and such a leader standing on guard.

Yesterday in Switzerland while he and his family were driving along the roads, they were the object of the admiration of the Swiss people. The English visitors were cheered to the echo.

Canada like other lands holds in highest honor Mr. Churchill's great leadership in those momentous times when the world was saved.

Therefore when Mr. Churchill comes to visit Canada he will be most welcome for what he has done for liberty.

The Circus—Roman and Modern

Circus appeal exists from age to age for the reason that it is interesting in a thousand attractions to every individual, little boy and girl, elder brothers and sisters, parents, aunts and uncles and grandparents. Circuses were frequent visitors in the old days but the day of bigger circuses has come and visits are more rare. All ages seized the opportunity to attend the performances of the Clyde Beatty Circus here on Thursday with its appeal crowded upon appeal in every form of attraction that the circus world can assemble for the pleasure and delight of the thousands of circusgoers. Here all ages give way to the thrill of expectation and to admiration of the performers.

The circus owes its name to a nearly oblong building without a roof in which among the Romans public chariot races, exhibitions of pugilism and wrestling took place. The Circus Maximus in Rome is said to have held about a quarter of a million spectators or even 385,000 as an ancient record says and was 2,600 feet long and 600 feet wide. It was rectangular except that one short side formed a half circle. On both sides and on the semicircular end were the seats of the spectators, rising gradually one above another, like steps. On the outside the Roman circus was surrounded with colonnades, galleries, shops, and public places. The old Roman circus opened with a procession of splendor, and magistrates, senators, priests, augurs, vestal virgins and athletes took part.

How like a modern circus though two thousand years separate the Roman circus which was naturally stationary and not like the circus of today which moves from place to place! Even the flourish with which the modern circus opens after the spectators have viewed the animals, recalls the splendid Roman scenes of so long ago. There are still races, there are animals brought from the far ends of the earth as there were in the days of the Romans. There were scenes with wild beasts in old Roman days and they were gory scenes. Today the scenes with the animals is one showing man's control of the animal kingdom. They are not gory like the Roman. The chariot of old has its counterpart in a modern circus.

Pageantry lives in the circus of today, there are the trained animals, there are the performances of acrobats, there is the clown with his mirth-making and sad humor and high class buffonery pleasing the people of the twentieth century.

The modern circus has powerful appeal but the people today do not ask the sensations and thrills the old Romans demanded in their gladiatorial combats and in the contests of men and beasts. The circus has grown down the generations and centuries. The modern circus entertains and will entertain. The circus can never fail. Man likes to see the great strange and familiar world it brings together. And the circus takes on no small bit of atmosphere of the age and the time. So it never loses its attraction. In a scientific age it can turn scientific with success.

The circus of today has grown to become a great organization, serving many thousands daily in the show season. No one will ever want to see it disappear for its visits have been red letter days for the boy and the man and the girl and the woman.

Long may the circuses live to delight the millions, to instruct and to thrill!

" . . . All Pleasant Fruits"

Unfortunately the value of fruit in the daily diet is not fully appreciated, and particularly the contributions to well being inherent in fruits grown and marketed in this country. The orange, the lemon, the lime, the pineapple and the other importations all have their varying places in the public esteem, and their recognized share in all health programs.

However there remains something of special value to Canadians in fruits grown in Canadian soil and by Canadian growers. What fruit so luscious and juicy as the Canadian apple, or so appetizing and appealing as the Canadian peach, or so downright good as the strawberry, the raspberry, or the ever popular and always acceptable blueberry.

The roll of honor of our fruits is lengthy, and a just cause for national pride. Their sequence in the spring, summer and autumn seasons is cause for deep appreciative thought and thanksgiving. The design is not man-made. Beginning perhaps with the humble, but valuable rhubarb, and continuing to the final harvests in the late fall, our country's fresh fruits with all their health-giving qualities are ready to play their intended share in the well being of the people.

With Thomas Campion Canadians can say:

> "A heavenly paradise that place > Wherein all pleasant fruits do grow."

HENRY FORD AND YOUTH

Said Henry Ford, these boys today
Will get along as well as we.
They'll find, no doubt, the better way
Our eyes have grown too dim to see.
They'll prove, whenever crises rise,
To be as steadfast and as wise.

Though boys are always fond of fun,
Don't worry! When they grow to men
They'll get the graver problems done.
When they have stepped from now to then,
As much of greatness will come out
As ever we could boast about.

Lose faith in youth? Ah, never that!
Each age has bettered all before.
The boy beneath that tattered hat,
Scarce noticed, in a few years more
May take his place upon life's stage
As great as any of our age.

Out of their ranks, for every post
Where strength and courage are required,
And love of right is needed most,
Will come the men with ardor fired.
However hard their tasks may be They'll do them, just as well as we.

Washington Spotlight

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 13. (CP)—A feeling of "this is where I came in" was created in Washington by the week's headlines and radio rantings over continued shipments of relief supplies to Yugoslavia by U.N.R.R.A.

The same protests were heard in the United States and Canada about continued shipments of war potential to Japan at a time when war with that country seemed inevitable.

But this time it is different. A ship bringing home bodies of five American flyers shot down while flying unarmed over Yugoslavia was passing eastbound ships bearing great quantities of relief material to Yugoslavia.

Although the relief is being shipped by the U.N.R.R.A., it is paid for, to the extent of about two-thirds, by American taxpayers, including the relatives of the martyred airmen.

U.N.R.R.A., is an association of some 50 countries including the Soviet, whose great humanitarian effort, launched late in 1943, was to succor and rehabilitate victims of Axis aggression.

On that basis Yugoslavia was well-qualified as a receiving country. And because U.N.R.R.A recognizes no politics and no racial discrimination, its aid to one recipient could not be stopped because that country was at loggerheads with the United States.

It is a large and distasteful pill for the American to swallow and probably as unpleasant to the majority of the other members of U.N.R.R.A.

What strikes an observer in Washington is the atmosphere of unreality. While the United States is torn by paralyzing strikes, newspaper headlines scream announcements of the most potentially dangerous international developments and good influences move with almost undiscernible speed.

Moving pictures depict the pitiful state of common people in backyard or victimized countries while the diplomatic representatives of those countries in palatial Washington embassies regularly pour the finest liquors and serve rare and expensive foods to guests who have never been hungry or thirsty without the means of satisfying their wants.

C.I.O. SEAMEN GO

Fleet Remains Idle

Washington, Sept. 13 (AP) — The government appeared ready today to cut in C.I.O. seafarers, who struck last midnight, on the wage raises a White House ruling opened for A.F.L. Maritime workers to end the strike.

J. Godfrey Butler, Labor Relations Director for the United States Marine Commission, told a reporter he thought the commission "would seek to extend to the C.I.O. the same increases as were given to the A.F.L."

Commission officials were to confer with the operators at 10 a.m. E.S.T.

Until the formalities are carried out, the merchant fleet remained the same—idle. Maritime unions are so distributed that either the A.F.L. or the C.I.O. can freeze the industry.

John R. Steelman, who is both reconversion director and economic stabilizer, signalled an end for the A.F.L. stoppage yesterday by giving the strikers the raises they wanted.

Labor men in Washington interpreted Mr. Steelman's action in the A.F.L. case as meaning the government decided against a "get tough" policy in the crisis.

The A.F.L. men on the west coast, headed by Harry Lundeberg, ended their strike Thursday midnight. The east coast group, however, decided to hold out until it got "written assurances" from the government that the money would be approved—in its case 10 a month a man. Barring a last-minute hitch, the assurances were expected to be sent today.

The National Maritime Union (C.I.O.), led by Joseph Curran, struck today to persuade employers to match the A.F.L. wages.

Under the Steelman plan A.F.L. seamen in the able-bodied class receive $5 to $10 more a month than the Wage Stabilization Board was willing to approve. The money will come partly from the pockets of private shipowners and partly from the Federal treasury.

The C.I.O. union wants $10 more for its able-bodied seamen, to add to the $17.50 basic wage raise they received in June.

Raids 5 Scheduled Bingo Games, One in Progress

Montreal, Sept. 13 — (CP) — The morality squad of Montreal's police department raided five scheduled bingo games last night following Archbishop Joseph Charbonneau's call for "all legal steps" to put an end to the games.

At four of the scheduled games, however, the police found no play in progress.

At St. Dominic's Parish, on Delorimier Avenue, some 150 persons were playing bingo and the voice of the operator calling the numbers could be heard on the sidewalk outside the Parish Hall. But police were unable to find a judge to sign the warrant."

The action followed by two days a statement issued from the Archbishop's Palace, which said: "Long ago the Archbishop made his opinion known on bingo games. They are forbidden by the provisions of the Canon Law and by the laws of the country. Do your duty; take all necessary legal steps to stop them."

In suburban Rosemont the previous night, a game was held in the basement of St. Philomene's Church. Father E. S. Girard, the parish priest, said after the game he had not been officially advised of the Archbishop's stand and declared his parish would face an 'almost immediate threat of bankruptcy or will have to increase its millrate to a point which will discourage homebuilding in the area,' if the bingo games were stopped.

General Council To Discuss Divorce, Mixed Marriages

By GEORGE BURMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Sept. 13 —(CP)— A discussion on divorce and mixed marriages is expected to highlight today's sessions of the 12th General Council of the United Church of Canada following the presentation by Chief Justice J. C. McRuer of the Ontario Supreme Court of the report of a special commission appointed to make a study of Christian marriage.

Reports also will be made by the committees on vacancies and on ministerial salaries.

Progress in the church's efforts to build up a pension fund for its ministry was reported at yesterday's session. David H. Gibson, Toronto, executive chairman of the campaign, said $4,372,133 had been raised to date, representing 85.7 of the $5,100,000 objective.

Rev. Victor T. Mooney of Toronto, reporting for the board of finance, announced that total current revenue in 1945 was $2,926,148, with disbursements totalled at $2,660,214. Of the surplus, $211,181 went to the stabilization fund and $54,752 to the overseas missions board reserve.

In the evening a "missionary night" was held. Rev. R. C. S. Crysdale of Williams Lake, B.C., describing the shortage of workers in home missions, said he was the only missionary in a territory 300 miles by 150 miles and the only Protestant minister serving over 4,000 church members in that territory.

He believed that more thought should be given to the training of energetic and able laymen to help carry on the work in places where an ordained minister was not available.

On the question of changing the election date from New Year's Day the Board decided that any change must be the subject of a recommendation of city council.

HI! HOW ARE YOU BREATHING?

Natural breathing is breathing with the belly. Unnatural breathing is breathing with the chest.

Animals, savages, and people when asleep or unconscious breathe with their bellies.

Belly is not, as you may imagine, just an indelicate term for abdomen. The abdomen is a cavity containing the liver, stomach and other organs. The belly is the wall of the abdomen.

Now, if you don't mind, we had better clear up another point while we're down here — what and where is the diaphragm and what purpose does it serve other than to fit a girdle on?

The diaphragm is a muscle attached to the lowest ribs and the spine. It separates the trunk or, as our crime reporter loves to call it, the torso, so that the cavity above the diaphragm is the thorax or chest and the cavity below it is the abdomen.

The diaphragm is dome shaped, covering the stomach, liver, spleen and intestines like a tarpaulin over a haystack.

When the diaphragm works automatically, as it should, without restraint or interference, it presses down upon the stomach, liver, gall-sac and other structures for a few seconds regularly from ten to twenty times a minute twenty-four hours a day.

The diaphragm is the chief breathing muscle. When it contracts in that way upon the contents of the abdomen the first effect is to lower the pressure within the thorax, and air rushes into the lungs or is drawn or sucked in, as you please. This is inspiration.

When the lungs are more or less expanded or inflated the diaphragm relaxes or knocks off work. Other muscles between the ribs work with the diaphragm, elevating the ribs and expanding the chest, while the diaphragm expands or inflates or pushes out the belly. Then everything relaxes, and normal pressure is restored in the thoracic cavity and the elasticity of the muscles between the ribs contributes to the outrush of air from the lungs. This is expiration.

I do hope you are not all balled up about this, for the way the diaphragm works is an essential bit of physiology you must understand clearly in order to derive the special advantages natural breathing gives. If this brief description had not made it clear, read "How to Breathe"—No. 21 Little Lesson in the Ways of Health, (for copy send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope) — or study the chapters on Respiration in Howell's Textbook of Physiology in your public library.

Here are some of the advantages of natural breathing:

Prevention of insomnia. Alleviation of asthma and chronic bronchitis. Prevention and correction of menstrual difficulties in young women. Lowers high blood pressure Relieves the discomfort and congestion of varicose veins. Promotes functional efficiency of liver and biliary system. Nerves as booster pump to aid the circulation in heart disease with lost compensation. Combats the tendency towards stagnation in the great splanchnic pool (net work of blood vessels in abdomen capable of holding out of circulation nearly a fourth of the entire volume of blood) which is one of the manifestations of early degeneration due to sedentary life.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why do coins have milled edges?

The original purpose of "milled money," coins stamped with raised borders and fluted edges, was to prevent the fraudulent removal of metal and to protect them from wear.

Milled coins were first struck off in England in 1553. Such coins were issued again from 1562 to 1572, when the practice was discontinued until 1623. It was not until about 1662 that it became permanent in England.

The first machine for "milling coins" was invented in the 16th century by a Frenchman named Antoine Boucher.

Milled sixpences were so rare in Elizabeth's time that they sold at a premium.

In Shakespeare's The Merry Wives of Windsor (1599) Master Slender says Pistol picked his purse "of seven groats in mill-sixpences, and two Edward shovel-boards, that cost me two shilling and two pence a-piece of Yead Miller." These rare coins were sometimes used as "counters." In News from Plymouth (1668) Sir William Davenant, reputed son of Shakespeare, wrote: "A few milled sixpences with which my purser keeps account."

Formerly crooks practised "clipping; that is, they filed off a little metal from each coin that passed through their hands. Shakespeare also alludes to this practice. In Henry V the king, on the eve of Agincourt, says: "Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one, they will beat us; for they bear them on their shoulders; but it is no English treason to cut French crowns, and tomorrow the king himself will be a clipper."

In 1708 Maryland prescribed penalties for cutting and clipping coins. At that time it was a common practice to cut large silver coins into quarters and to use the pieces for change. These pieces were called "sharpchange" because of the sharp points and edges of the pieces.

Even as late as the administration of George Washington it was a common practice to file, shear and clip the English, Spanish and French coins in circulation in the United States. Sometimes coins would lose as much as a quarter of their weight within a few months after being placed in circulation.

Milled coins cannot be filed or clipped without the loss of metal being noticeable. All coins issued by the United States are milled on the face, but only gold and silver coins are made with fluted edges. Milling coins, besides protecting them from wear and clipping, also aids in distinguishing them by touch and to some extent facilitates stacking and handling them.

The rubibng together of coins results in the annual loss of many tons of silver and gold throughout the world.

Lengthy Docket In Police Court

Trenton—One of the lengthiest courts, for some time, was disposed of by Magistrate T. Y. Wills, at Trenton. Sixty-three cases were listed on the court docket. Gordon S. Robertson was present for the Crown.

Ila Corenné Ische appeared before the magistrate on 18 charges of false pretenses (worthless cheques), these included charges from Trenton, Toronto, Niagara Falls, Brantford, St. Catharines, Hamilton and Stratford. Restitution to the amount of $657.25 had been made. Miss Ische was placed on suspended sentence for one year, on bond of $200.00 and had to pay the costs of the court.

William L. McEwen appeared on five charges; Trenton, false pretenses, Toronto (three charges, fraud hotel bill), Oshawa, fraud hotel bill. He was given an additional two years in the Kingston Penitentiary to run consecutive to a two year sentence now being served. McEwen was sentenced in Kingston to two years and was brought back to Trenton from the penitentiary for trial.

Eight persons charged under the Liquor Control Act were assessed the usual fine of $10 and costs $3. These included charges of intoxication and having liquor in a public place.

Case Dismissed

Ray Garfield Hartman, Kingston, pleaded his own case when charged with careless driving under the Highway Traffic Act. The charge arose from an accident in which he was involved. The magistrate dismissed the case on the evidence.

Colin Cleveland and Wm. E. Gray paid $12.50 each when they pleaded guilty to charges of careless driving.

Samuel Griffith, Trenton, was assessed $27.50 on a charge of careless driving.

Seven persons pleaded guilty to charges under the Highway Traffic Act, these included, driving without a license, faulty brakes, speeding and violation of traffic signal lights.

A fine of $5 and costs of $2.50 were paid by Leslie Lee when he pleaded guilty to firing off a rifle within the town of Trenton.

Sentence Suspended

Hugh Blight was given a suspended sentence of six months by the magistrate on a charge of doing grievous bodily harm, to another youth. Blight, working in an ice house, threw a piece of ice weighing about a pound and struck a youth on the head causing a fracture. He was placed on bond and ordered to pay costs of $7.50. Blight told the magistrate that he had thrown the piece of ice, intending to frighten the youth but had misjudged and struck him on the head.

Robert McFarland, Frankford, charged on a breach of his recognizance was released on payment of costs not previously paid and was also ordered to pay further costs of $9.50. McFarland was convicted previously on a charge of taking a truck without the consent of the owner and at that time ordered to pay costs and make restitution. This was not done and the resultant charge was laid by the police.

Sam Whaley, Trenton, was also charged for a breach of his recognizance and upon paying the previous costs he was released on further payment of $9 costs. Whaley had been previously convicted on a charge of theft.

Cases Enlarged

Gordon M. Tanner pleaded guilty to a charge of assault (common) and a further charge of assault was enlarged for two weeks. The charge on which he pleaded guilty was enlarged for sentence for two weeks. Arthur C. Lockwood also charged with common assault had his case enlarged for two weeks when he pleaded not guilty. Tanner and Lockwood were alleged to have been involved in a fight in a local dance hall.

Herbert Peterson had a charge of vagrancy dismissed when the evidence was heard.

Maurice Faulkner, Stirling, had his case enlarged for one week. The charge of reckless driving was laid by Chief Constable McGeachy of Frankford.

Failing to appear before the magistrate, after personal service of a summons, proved costly to Bert Payne of Toronto. Payne was charged with failing to obey a traffic signal light. Evidence was given by Constable Walter Youmans. The fine was $2, but costs amounted to $8.

Two paid fines under the Parking By-law.

Death Accident Jury's Verdict

Trenton — An inquest, inquiring into the death of Samuel Forrester, Trenton, was held on Wednesday afternoon. Coroner Dr. E. A. McQuade presided with Gordon S. Robertson present for the Crown. Constable Walter Youmans was coroner's constable.

The inquest was ordered following the death of Samuel Forrester at the Central Bridge plant on August 23rd., 1946. Levis Begin and Norman Broadworth, both of Trenton, were injured at the time. The extent of their injuries was not of a serious nature. The accident occurred when the top structure of a tug was being hoisted in order to assemble it. A hook gave way and the extra weight thrown on the other hooks caused the heavy object to crash to the ground. The deceased was crushed between the structure and a pile of timber. He was on top of the superstructure as it was being hoisted.

The finding of the jury was as follows: On August 23rd., 1946, in the forenoon that Samuel Forrester came to his death on the premises of the Central Bridge Company Ltd., situated on West Street in the Town of Trenton. He was accidentally killed when the superstructure on which he was working fell to the ground when the hooks raising the superstructure broke. He was hit with some object on his way down, presumably by the chains or a flying hook, causing his death.

Members of the jury were, Arthur Black, Gabriel Aziz, Samuel Ashworth, Douglas Kinney, C. P. Yourex.

Daniel Douglas, Peterborough, a provincial inspector of the Department of Labor, was present at the inquest and gave evidence.

Careful Training Of Infant Deaf

Toronto, Sept. 13 — (CP) — Scientific developments spurred during the war years are making it possible for deaf and hard-of-hearing persons to lead happy, normal lives, said Dr. A. W. G. Ewing, head of the Department of the Deaf at Manchester University, last night. He told the Toronto Board of Education that recent added study has intensified realization of the need for careful training of the infant deaf because it is recognized that these children "have no sense of security such as have children who can hear their mother's voice."

Miss Lorna Jean Salisbury, of Watertown and William B. Somers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Somers, Watertown, were married at 10 a.m., on Sept. 5, in the parsonage of the First Baptist Church by the Rev. Hale F. Thornberry, pastor.

The bride was attired in a beige crepe dress with pink accessories and wore a corsage of pink and white roses.

Mrs. Donald G. Grant was the matron of honor and Frederick Lawrence was best man.

The couple left on a wedding trip to Montreal and Quebec for a few days. Upon their return, they will reside in their home on the Ives Street Road, Watertown.

WILLIAMS—JOHNSON

On September 11, at 10.30 a.m., Rawdon Parsonage, Stirling, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding when Joyce Barbara, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Johnson, Stirling, became the bride of Stanley Edward, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Williams, Campbellford. The Rev. Nathaniel Cole performed the ceremony in a setting of gladioli, snapdragons and other Fall flowers.

The bride, who was attended by her sister, Miss Eleanor Johnson, wore a chartreuse wool suit with dark brown accessories and a pearl necklace, gift of the groom. Her attendant wore a cocoa brown wool suit with matching accessories.

Mr. Keith Johnson, Stirling, was groomsman.

The bride's gift to the bridesmaid was a pearl necklace, the groom's gift to the bride, a chest of silver, and to the groomsman, a shaving set.

Following the wedding trip to Niagara, London and points west, Mr. and Mrs. Williams will reside at Hoard's.

BROWN—KOKESH

On Saturday, August 31, at the Bridge Street United Church parsonage, Rev. D. C. Amos united in marriage Edith Rosetta Kokesh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Kokesh, of Belleville to George William Brown, son of Mrs. C. Harris, of Toronto, Ont.

The bride wore an afternoon dress of ice blue crepe with navy blue accessories with a corsage of red roses. Mrs. Helen Kokesh, the bride's sister-in-law, was her only attendant, gowned in an afternoon dress of rose crepe with black accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses.

Mr. Walter Kokesh was best man.

After a reception at the home of the bride's parents, the bride and groom left on a wedding trip north and then later to Buffalo. On their return the young couple will take up residence in Toronto.

Breakfast Clubs Gain Popularity

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Vancouver started it, Victoria followed, and now across Canada, business girls are getting up an hour earlier to attend the monthly eight o'clock meeting of their Breakfast Club.

A downtown restaurant or hotel is usually the Club's headquarters, where the girls breakfast together and listen to a speaker they have invited for the occasion, before dashing off to work.

The Credit Women's Breakfast Club in Canada is affiliated with the Credit Women's Breakfast Club of North America, popular for years in cities throughout the United States. Canadian clubs have been formed in Victoria, Vancouver, Chilliwack, B.C., Winnipeg, London, Ont., Toronto and Ottawa.

The club in British Columbia are responsible for publication of a monthly bulletin known appropriately as the Yawn News.

Through the Breakfast Club women in offices and stores, whether dealing with retailer or consumer, may increase their knowledge and ability by attending the meetings, and through the exchange of experience and ideas prepare themselves for higher positions.

In the Toronto club, which has 75 members, the girls this Fall will have lectures on public speaking.. Other early morning talks have included everything from the advantages of grooming to actual business topics.

"Boss" breakfast meetings also are held occasionally to which employers are invited.

Total yearly membership fees generally average around $4 and for the most part are paid by the girl's employer.

"After all if she is sufficiently interested to spend her time taking part in these meetings, it seems only fair that her company should pay her fee," said J. H. Suydam, manager of the firm sponsoring the Toronto club.

Women's Activities

FOXBORO GUILD

The regular monthly meeting of the Foxboro Presbyterian church was held on Wednesday. Quiet music was played by Nellie Bell. Miss Bessie Spencer, the president, conducted the worship period. Scripture reading about the Prodigal Son, with the story taken from our book "Every Day", following prayer by Mrs. Lake. Various reports were received and adopted. Cards and letters were read in thanks from bereaved and sick friends. It was decided to send $4 for Christmas gifts for the bale. It was also agreed to invite St. Andrew's W.M.S., Belleville, out to the October thankoffering meeting and to furnish part of the program.

Mrs. Bailey gave a splendid paper on "The Island of Leguan". Twenty-five dollars was sent to Presbyterian and $2.50 donated to the flower fund.

EVENING AUXILIARY BRIDGE STREET CHURCH

The regular monthly meeting of the Jubilee Evening Circle of Bridge Street United Church was held at six o'clock on Tuesday. Supper was served by Mrs. McCabe's group, and then the meeting was held in the church parlor. The President, Mrs. Morden, referred with feeling to the long association with the Auxiliary of the Honorary President, the late Mrs. O'Flynn, and her deep interest and valuable advice in every activitiy of the missionary work of the church. The Jubilee members stood for one moment in silent tribute to her memory.

Several reports of committees were given. Mrs. Franklin and her group took charge of the program. Mrs. Franklin gave a short talk, and laid emphasis on the value of listening, in the attitude of prayer. This was followed by a solo by Mrs. Evelyn Bird, "Peace I Leave With You: My Peace I Give Unto You".

The next part of the program took the form of a conversation around a tea table and Mrs. Franklin as hostess led her guests in a discussion on how to extend usefulness as members of Auxiliary. After a very interesting conversation, touching on the advantage of the social half hour at the beginning of the meeting, and the value of extending hospitality to newcomers who are lonely and the great need of friendliness, kindness and thoughtfulness in the world of shut-ins and older people, it was decided that the organization could improve its missionary efforts so much by paying that little visit, and inviting that lonely stranger to the home and to church, in short,—by not being too busy with one's own affairs to realize what a power friendship can be. Friendship is the key to Christian living. "Follow up visitation and evangelism by giving newcomers a place, a taste, a voice in our church. Community friendship needs us all!"

U.P.E.-BELLEVILLE WOMENS CLUB

A delightful afternoon was spent on Wednesday, when the club was entertained by Mrs. Chas. W. Earle, Ann Street.

In the sunroom overlooking the park, rich with Autumn color in flower and leaf—an interesting program was carried out. Mrs. Weese read a short poem entitled "Sympathy".

Two new members were received, Mrs. J. W. Cavers and Mrs. Rorabeck and each, will at the next meeting tell the group of her former residence in the County of Prince Edward.

Mrs. Osborne took charge of the program, which consisted of a humorous reading "Making a Husband out of a Man", by Mrs. Thomas. Community singing led by Mrs. Ackerman; a reading, "Autumn" by Mrs. Roblin and a unique contest put on by Mrs. Wardner, who read "Landing on the Moon". Those present wrote short synopsis of what they gathered from the reading—with Mrs. Rorabeck winning the prize.

Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Earle, assisted by Mrs. W. Thomas, who poured and Mrs. Ackerman, Mrs. Boyd, Mrs. Schryver, as serviteurs. On behalf of the club, Mrs. Percy Parliament expressed appreciation to Mrs. Earle and her co-hostesses.

The next meeting will be held at Centre School, the guests of Miss Doris Blakely. Those on the program committee will be, Miss Blakely, Mr. C. Sarles, Mrs. L. Ragsdale and Miss H. Cook.

Miss Donaldson then took charge of the following program —Miss Mary Huff conducted a sing-song teaching two new songs suitable for school use. A very interesting display of Arts and Crafts was shown by Miss Betty Redner, who took the course this past Summer. Some articles shown were—masks, shell work, weaving, textile painting, paper mache, puppets, copper tray and scratch work. Mrs. Herb. Johnston conducted a Weed quiz with Miss Mary Walters being the winner.

The collection for the evening amounted to $2.85.

Delicious refreshments were served and Miss Mary Walters moved a vote of thanks to Miss Donaldson for her hospitality.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Visitor's Questions

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance's family, whom I ave not met, have invited me o visit them in their home, hich is some distance away. nd since I am very anxious to o everything "just right", will ou please answer some ques- ons that are bothering me?

1. Should I take with me a mall gift, such as a box of candy r something similar?

2. Should I take my own soap, acecloth and towels, or will they e provided for me?

3. If I am invited to stay long- r than the arrangement is now, nd my clothes need laundering r puessing, is it permissible or me to ask if I may do this yself, or should I arrange to end them out to be done?

4. I realize that immediately fter my return home I should rite a thank-you note, expres- ing my appreciation for the ospitality and kindness. But I would also like to know what would be suitable to send for a gift. Something useful for the entire family.

Elva

1. Yes, this is a proper gesture for you to make, friendly and generous.

2. You may take your own soap if you wish to, but your hostess will provide soap for you; and facecloths and towels will be placed for you either in the guest bathroom or on a special rack in the family bathroom.

3. Don't hesitate at all about talking over this situation with your hostess. . . this very often has to be planned between hostess and guest. She will plan for this if she has service and if not, she will make it convenient for you to do these chores if you wish to.

Since you will be in this home where you can observe, I suggest that you keep your eyes very wide open and make yourself aware of something that you realize will be particularly welcomed, something that you can afford and that will give happiness to all the family. Or, if you wish, you might give your hostess a personal gift, and send a general gift to the family.

When the Bride's Father is Not Well

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sister is being married soon, and we are confronted with a problem. Our Dad is not well, so extremely nervous that we are afraid he wouldn't be able to stand up under the strain of giving my sister in marriage. Would it be proper for her to have our oldest brother give her in marriage?

Or is it ever permissible when the bride is wearing a formal white wedding dress with a train, and a fingertip veil, for her not to be given in marriage? Have you any other suggestion?

H. H.

It is not the type of costume the bride is to wear that determines whether or not she is to be given in marriage. Sometimes this is a requirement of the denomination of the church in which she is to be married; often there is no such requirement; and often the bride may make her own choice as to this procedure.

Under the circumstances, it would be proper for your oldest brother, if he is of age, to give his sister in marriage. Or may I suggest a procedure often followed: the bride to walk up the aisle with her brother, and then, if she is to be given in marriage, have her mother do this part of the ceremony. At the proper time in the ceremony, she may simply rise in her place in the first pew on the left of the aisle, and respond "I do" to the minister's question, "Who giveth this woman to be married to this man?"

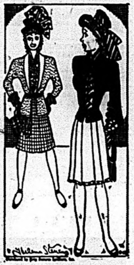
BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Do You Want to Look Chic?

Every girl can't be pretty. Nature sometimes thwarts that ambition by bestowing features that do not qualify. Few women want to be pretty, though all of them would love to be handsome. But any girl or woman who will take the trouble to learn something about sartorial elegance—and whose balance in the cheque book will permit a few shopping indulgences—can look smart. So, if you can't be pretty or handsome, have chic. You will add to the spectacle that is Woman.

The successful dress designer, man or woman, is one who has the artist's highly developed sense of line and color. Truly smart clothes are nearly always simple, depending for style and loveliness on graceful lines, interesting fabrics, beautiful colors. If there is an ornament, it has meaning. Fuss stuff just isn't piled on. Because of lack of falderals, a costume of this kind is as good one season as another; one can wear it for years, still not be out of the mode.



The Essential quality of Smartness is a Regard for Every Detail of Dress

The essential quality of smartness is a regard for every detail or dress—hat, shoes, hosiery, purse, jewelry—so that the ensemble will be harmonious.

Smartness is composed of the graceful silhouette—it need no longer be slender to extreme—attention ti detail, restraint, and insistence upon superlative fit and smoothness. This means that one is not to wear a floppy, bridesmaid hat with a tailored suit, or break out with T-strap sandals from which pink toes emerge. A lot of the good old laws of dress are being broken right along— imagine slacks, flowers in the hair and a fur coat ten or twenty years ago!—but ladies of fashion still have respect for some old time ideas. They are the ones who merit admiration.

You can accent the simplicity of a gown by wearing quantities of bracelets, if you like. There seems to be a passion for them now. Bracelets can be heavy ones, extreme ones—even elaborate—and you can wear them with a daytime frock.

Think about lines— always. Unless you are slender as a lily, you must be perfectly corseted. The foundation garment should not be selected casually, but should be fitted by a corsetiere who knows her business, has a keen eye for lines that are nit so good, and who camouflages them with the garment she sells you. The ideal figure is a svelte Diana type. One must look as if one were an outdior girl, blessed with vitality as well as grace and dress manner.

Make-up and hair-do form important parts of the smart composition.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

His Problem: Has He a Right to Her Love?

Most of us, I'm afraid, when confronted with a problem, try to figure it out on the basis of what's going to bring us most happiness. It is only a rare person who is more interested in finding the solution that will make someone else happy.

Here is a touching letter from a young man who is falling in love with a much younger girl and is uncertain as to whether or not he would be doing the right thing to try to win her. All he asks is to see the thing clearly enough so that he can do whatever will be best for this young girl in the end.

This is what he says:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am a young man 23 years old. Recently, I went into partnership with Dad; my future seems well secured. Here in the same place where I work, I met a girl of whom I became very fond. I have taken her out two or three times and have just discovered that she is only 16 years old—will be 17 soon—and is only a junior in high school. She doesn't look her age, but looks very much older, and I took her for at least twenty.

"Now, what I want to know is, do I have a right to keep on seeing this girl, or should I stop it altogether, before she or I get hurt? I told her my age and she said it didn't matter. But I think it does, because, since she is in high school with all the boys and girls of her own age, her feeling might change later on. Also, our religions are different. Do you thing that matters when two people are in love? I like her very much and want to be with her every second, but I don't know whether or not I have the right to go with her. I found out from her brother, who is a good friend of mine, that she is interested in me.

"Miss Fairfax, it is very funny when a fellow is very much in love, but is willing to give it all up so that the girl will be happier later on.

"Watertown"

The only reason it seems "funny" as you say, for a person to be willing to give up what he wants most in the world, for the sake of someone else, is because most of us are so selfish that we want what we want at all costs. The fact that you are so ready to stop seeing this girl, if that is for her best good, is very convincing evidence that you really love her.

Under ordinary circumstances, I would certainly feel that the average 23-year-old man should not try to develop a romance between himself and a 16-year-old girl. But you are quite obviously not an "average" young man, but one with an unusual amount of maturity, common sense, and character. And, for this reason, I am going to give you the following advice:

I suggest you continue to be friendly with this girl but do not try to rush her. Instead of being "with her every second", as you say you would like to be, take her out only once or twice a week for a while. That will give her opportunity to see other people and follow whatever interests she chooses, while showing her, without your saying anything, that you are fond of her and like to be with her.

I would try to keep things on this basis until she has graduated from high school. That may be hard to do, but after all, she only has one more year to go and you are so anxious to do right by her that you make me feel you would make any effort required.

When she is through with school, if you still feel as you do now, and she has come to love you, and her family is willing, then I think it would be perfectly all right to have a more definite understanding with this girl. Seven years isn't too great a difference between a husband and wife, if they are truly in love and their interests are congenial.

As for the matter of your different religions, of course that is another problem, and a more complicated one. Would you like to write me a personal letter, giving me your name and address, so that I could discuss it with you at greater length than I am able to do in this column?

SYDNEY BRIDGE NOTED LANDMARK

Great Australian Structure Took Six Years to Build

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Sydney, Australia.— (CP)—Australia's most famous landmark is the Sydney harbor bridge which links the city's downtown business section with northern suburbs and even 14 years after completion remains one of the most popular Sydney sights.

A toll-bridge, the great structure which took six years to build with 50,000 tons of special steel manufactured in England, is slightly more than two miles long.

When it approaches, including 285-foot granite pylons at either end of its arched central span, were completed in 1932, the total cost was about $32,000,000.

To Sydney residents, 'our bridge" is not only an object of pride but an indispensable traffic route to the north shore of the harbor where thousands have homes from which they are able to travel in to city jobs by fast suburban train.

The bridge, carries four railway lines in addition to its six-lane automobile roadway and two footways. Its capacity is 138 trains, 6,000 motor vehicles and 40,000 pedestrians an hour.

Its 445-foot height from the water permits the largest ships visiting Sydney to pass under it easily, and from the footways, travellers get a view of the sprawling port exceeded only by the view from an airplane.

When it was first projected early in the century, at a time when harbor travel was largely by ferry, there was also talk of tunnelling a route to the northshore.

Now dominating the waterfront, thebridge lighted at dusk can be seen from downtown areas miles apart. To Australian servicemen returning from the wars the bridge has represented the front gate to their homeland.

New Zealand Plans Big History of War

Auckland, N.Z., (CP)—New Zealand's histories of the Second Great War will require about 20 volumes, apart from unit histories, and will take seven to ten years to write, according to the editor-in-chief, Maj.-Gen. H. K. Kippenberger.

The project has been divided into four sections. As early as possible there will be published a series of volumes containing the relevant documents and messages on some of the critical phases of the Dominion's part in the war. The second phase will be the publication of a popular history, simply written, covering the whole field and complete with photographs, maps, diagrams and drawings.

The third section will be the official history proper, which will deal with the New Zealand armed services overseas and at home, prisoners of war and civilian internees, medical and dental histories, political, economic, industrial, financial and social developments, and the work of voluntary patriotic organizations. The fourth section will be the supervision and control of a series of histories of the more important units in the various services.

General Kippenberger is collecting a staff to carry out the work and an immense mass of records is being put in order.

7-Pound Black Bass Caught Near Coboconk

Toronto, Sept. 13 — (CP) — Thomas Grills may have had hopes of setting a record when he caught a black bass weighing a bit over seven pounds down Coboconk way, 100 miles to the east.

But he reckoned without Northern Ontario where, as everyone knows, a really full-grown black bass can beat the scales off the odd maskinonge. Sudbury was prompt to object that saying a seven-pound bass might be a record was an insult to the north. The bass which won a Sudbury fishing contest last year was an even seven pounds and a heavier one has been entered in the contest this year. The optimistic Sudbury man adds that still a bigger one will be caught before the season ends.

Grills' record hopes were based on the assumption that the biggest ever caught before in Ontario weighed something like 5½ pounds.

Ontario government wild life experts couldn't lay their hands on the exact record immediately but they thought it must be more than seven pounds.

Records of a Toronto newspaper (Star) showed the report of the largest of this type of fish filed in their clippings was a seven-pound-four-ounce small-mouthed black bass caught by Mrs. S. C. Faller of Wilkinsburg, Pa., at Sunken Island, Cameron Lake, near Fenelon Falls, Ont., on Aug. 16, 1924.

CANADA UNLIMITED – The Formative Years

"Navigation Flight"—After a painting by Donald Anderson, Official War Artist, R.C.A.F. War Records

✦ ✦ ✦ Wings for the Youth of Empire ✦ ✦ ✦

FROM THE FAR CORNERS of the Empire they came—bronzed striplings from the Antipodes, pink-cheeked youths from England, lads from India and from the Indies—to train for the greatest battle of all time under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Over Canadian prairies, forests and towns they won their wings, and with them flew the youth of Canada, closely integrated in a new unity of purpose and a new understanding. Their courage, and the skill they learned in Canadian skies, held the enemy at bay during the dark years of the war and provided a flashing spearhead for the final victory . . . We shall be forever indebted to them.

The training of 225,000 men for air force duty was a major Canadian contribution towards the winning of the war, but equally important, it was a portent of future greatness, for out of such unified and far-reaching efforts will come the Canada of tomorrow—Canada Unlimited.

To each of us whose savings went into Victory Bonds to contribute to this great achievement, there remains the continuing challenge to hold those Bonds as our investments in a glowing future.

Clyde Beatty Circus, First Since Before War to Visit City, Gives Fine Performance to Big Crowd

Animal Act With Beatty in Charge One of the Highlights of Show

There was the tan-bark and gaily caparisoned horses; elephants and lions and tigers; there were grotesquely painted clowns and gorgeously gowned ladies; there were acrobats, tumblers and trapeze artists; in fact there were all the trimmings of the pre-war circus and thousands of youngsters and oldsters thrilled to their first "Big Top" show here Thursday night when Clyde Beatty's Circus played a one-day stand, the first tented circus to appear here since before the war.

The real thrill, however, came to hundreds of city school children at the afternoon matinee. The majority of the youngsters saw their first Big Top show and thrilled to the color, glamor and noise that is part and parcel of the circus and which has made it a continental institution this side of the Atlantic.

The youngsters stared wide-eyed at the blaring signs of the side-shows; they were amazed at the hoarse cries of the barkers and the hustle and bustle that is part of a show of this kind. The wild animals were the cynosure of thousands of childish eyes as elephants, lions and tigers paraded in their colorful sequence of acts before the youthful spectators.

Never Grows Old

To the crowd that packed the big tent at the evening performance it brought memories of the piping days of peace. John Q. Public never grows old when the circus is in town, and many an oldster forgot for the moment the delighted offspring who clutched his arm and asked questions as the old familiar scenes once more appeared in the tented theatre.

There was the inevitable popcorn and crackerjack and pink lemonade; the appetizing odor of hot dogs and hamburgers; the colorful balloon and novelty vendors and the "sensational offer now being made in the form of this delicious candy — every box contains a prize."

And many an oldster rubbed his eyes and grinned in sheer delight as the smell of horses and animals tanged the cool September air. He thrilled to the sight of parading elephants, haughty camels; mincing prancing horses, the antics of the clowns and the colorfully garbed figures of pert equestriennes.

And his spine tingled once again to the nerve-chilling sight of wild animals of the jungle roaring and snarling defiance at their human master inside a steel cage as he put them through their paces.

Another familiar sight was the row of tented sideshows with the "Thin Man", the bearded lady, the men who had "sheep heads" and the rest of the freaks that is as much a part of a circus as peanuts and elephants.

Acts Exceptionally Good

The Beatty show lived up to advance notices. It had everything that one expects at a circus, and all its acts were of exceptionally good calibre. While not as large as other internationally known Big Top shows, what it lacked in quantity it made up for in quality and variety.

Clyde Beatty in person with his wife Mrs. Harriett Beatty, headline the show and their acts earned well-deserved applause. Garbed in the conventional white shirt and riding breeches of the animal trainer, equipped with whip, revolver and chair, Beatty thrilled the large audience with his command of two dozen snarling cats.

Black-maned lords of the jungle from Africa; royal Bengal tigers from the hinterland of India, a striking, defiant den of beasts, went through their paces under the expert hands of Beatty. He made six tawny lions lie down in regimented order before him. He made them jump gates; stand on their hind legs with fore-paws raised in salute. His climax was putting a striped Bengal tiger through its tricks of rolling over, whirling in circles, lying "doggo" and finally steeplechasing around the steel arena over wooden gates.

Shares Honor with Husband

Mrs. Beatty shared honors with her clever husband in her act with a tiger and an elephant, natural jungle enemies, as the cat rode the elephant around the cage and climaxed its performance by leaping through a blazing hoop of fire.

The Consuellos, a flying trapeze act that climaxed the show, was another outstanding event as three men and a girl "whirled through the air with the greatest of ease." The DeWayne acrobatic troupe provided more thrills while an aerial ballet consisting of several pretty girls whirled and pirouetted high in the air in their "Ballet of the Skies."

The Oliveras, a balancing act in which the masculine member of the duo balances his pretty partner high aloft on a steel pole drew plenty of applause. Clowns put on a number of funny skits individually and collectively. Trained horses and ponies went through parading and dancing numbers while "War Cloud" a handsome Morgan stallion proved a past equine master at the art of dancing.

Clever Dog Act

Then of course there were the elephants which danced, marched, laid down, rolled over, stood on barrels and performed several other tricks that delighted the crowd. A troupe of clever dogs drew rounds of applause. Don Francisco proved an adept young man on the slack wire and his imitation of a "drunk" rounded out a clever performance.

Then last but not least was the circus band, a talented group of musicians whose typical circus music added zest and melodic color to a performance that was thoroughly enjoyed.

TRUMAN GREETS "MONTY OF ALAMEIN"

President Truman and Field Marshal Montgomery, British Chief of Staff, are shown in the White House rose garden outside the President's office during "Monty's visit. Both were in rare form as they posed for photographs and joked together on the burning down of the White House by British Red Coats in 1814.

Young Disgraceful Says Nonagenarian

Toronto, (CP)—Young people today are a "disgrace" because their parents haven't brought them up properly, and girls in restaurants "who puff at their smokes like men" are disgusting, says Mrs. Phoebe Woods of Toronto, who has just celebrated her 99th birthday.

"Where would some of the girls of today be if they had to take charge of a home? They wouldn't know what to do." She continued. "And when I was a girl no one would think of smoking cigarets."

Mrs. Woods has five children, two of whom live in Toronto, but she prefers to live in the Fern Oxley Home here because "I am very independent and having looked after myself for 99 years I'm not going to be a burden on my family now."

Ottawa, Sept. 13 —(CP)— Early in the war years, it was disclosed Thursday, the Bank of Canada obtained for the Bank of England a storage vault in the Sun Life Building in Montreal, but just what the vault was used for is not known here.

Civil Servants Return to Union

London, (CP)— The ban on their affiliation lifted by Labor government action, civil service unions have been re-admitted to the Trades Union Congress, increasing its membership by about 250,000.

The T.U.C. general council accepted the re-affiliations of the Civil Service Clerical Association, Inland Revenue Staff Federation, Union of Post Office Workers and Post Office Engineering Union at a recent meeting.

All were compelled to withdraw from association with the T.U.C. under the 1927 Trade Union and Trade Disputes Act passed following the general strike of 1926. The act was repealed by the Labor government now in office.

The council will consider establishment of a separate group within the T.U.C. for the civil service unions. An application for affiliation was received from the Association of Civil Service Designers and Draughtsmen which was not affiliated when the 1927 act was passed.

Editor Speaks Out For Men of Science

London, (CP) — Nobody can control science except men of science, L. J. F. Brimble, editor of the scientific magazine Nature, said at a conference.

" Scientists have been developing a code of ethics for some time They are well aware of the way science is leading and they are resenting the treatment meted out to them since the development of the atomic bomb," he said.

"They now are beginning to show signs of self-control and they are determined not to be controlled by anybody else. Scientists are willing to co-operate with men of religion and have held their hands out to them on more than one occasion."

Prof. A. V. Hill, London University, said that failing the collaboration of the world's scientists and maintenance of a common ethical standard, "one could foresee the time when scientific discovery and invention may provide one of the chief stumbling blocks to international cooperation and the chief means for mutual destruction."

BATTLES FOREST FIRE IN GIANT BULLDOZER TO SAVE TOWN
RAY CUMMINGS wins Dow Award

Fierce forest fires menaced the town of Richibucto, N.B. Flames swept viciously over the wooded areas on three sides . . . and an arm of fire had broken away from the main blaze and was roaring rapidly toward the heart of the town. It was then that Ray Cummings volunteered to drive a bulldozer into the holocaust . . . in an attempt to cut off that surging arm of fire. Calmly guiding his giant machine, Cummings headed into the blaze. Unmindful of the flames sweeping around his machine, he coolly raised his 'dozer blade, ploughed into the inferno . . . and worked his way toward the town by pushing up huge cuts of earth that buried the fire. This provided needed time for the fire-fighters to get organized . . . and won for Cummings the praise of the entire community.

We are proud to present The Dow Award to Ray Cummings, of Moncton, N.B.

THE DOW AWARD is a citation for outstanding heroism and includes, as a tangible expression of appreciation, a $100 Victory Bond. Winners are selected by The Dow Award Committee, a group of editors of leading Montreal daily newspapers.

Looks As If It Will Be St. Louis Cardinals Against Boston in World Series

Cards Win First Game in Crucial Series Against Dodgers by 10-2

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

More than ever today it looks as if St. Louis Cardinals will be the Boston Red Sox' World Series opponent next month.

Not so much because the Cards beat Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday in the opener of their "fight for the flag" three-game series to increase their National League margin to 2½games, but because of the easy manner in which they bowled over the flock. The score was 10-2.

The game was over barely five minutes after it started. Kirby Higbe, the Dodgers' ace righthander, retired the first two batters to face him, but then the roof caved in. Stan Musial doubled, Enos Slaughter walked, Whitey Kurowski and Dick Sisler singled, and rookie catcher Joe Garagiola homered to make it 5-0 for St. Louis before Howie Pollet, who was to gain his 19th triumph, made his first pitch.

The victory was number 14 for the Cards in 20 meetings with the Dodgers.

The pennant-bound Red Sox failed again to clinch the American League flag when they bowed to Bobby Feller and Cleveland Indians 4-1. It was the sixth straight defeat for Joe Cronin's frustrated nine which needs a victory plus a Detroit defeat to take the championship.

Feller held the Sox to eight hits and struck out seven batters to boost his season's total to 308.

The Tigers moved two games in front of their battle with the Yankees for second place by defeating the New Yorkers 6-4 in Detroit.

Chicago Cubs earned a split with the Phillies in a doubleheader in Philadelphia, winning the second game 5-4 in 10 innings after the Phils had come from behind to win the opener 4-3.

After losing 1-0 to Pittsburgh, Boston Braves edged out the Pirates 2-1 in the second game of a double bill.

A six-run eighth inning gave the Washington Senators a 9-6 victory over the Browns under the lights in St. Louis.

Rookie Monte Kennedy yielded only two hits in pitching the National League cellar-dwelling New York Giants to a 4-1 victory over Cincinnati Reds.

Cold weather in Chicago forced the postponement of the White Sox — Philadelphia Athletics game.

BOSTON RED SOX WAIT 28 YEARS BETWEEN FLAGS

Flags Won Six Times Before and All Except One Team Went on to Win World Series

By JOE REICHLER

New York, Sept. 13—(AP) — Boston Red Sox have culminated 28 years of waiting by capturing their seventh American League pennant.

And by doing it the Red Sox assured themselves of competition in the World Series at an earlier date than any other American League club, over a 154-game schedule, with the exception of the 1926 and 1941 New York Yankees.

The 1941 Yankees ended all doubts on Sept. 4 while the 1926 club eliminated their last rival on Sept. 9.

Boston, however, equalled the Yankees' feat of rising from 7th place the previous year to win the flag. The 1926 Yankees won the championship after having finished seventh in 1925. No cellar American League club ever has gone on to win the pennant the following year.

Previous pennants won by the Red Sox were in 1903, 1904, 1912, 1915, 1916 and 1918. Each of these aggregations, except the 1904 club, went on to win the World Series. There was no fall classic in 1904 because the New York Giants, National League winners, refused to meet the American League champion.

Always in Front

Except for two days in April, Joe Cronin's champions were exclusive custodians of first place every day of the season.

Like true champions, the Red Sox already have captured the season's series from each of their seven rivals, and pace the league in club batting and fielding.

Boston players figure prominently in the individual races, too, with Dave (Boo) Ferriss leading all pitchers in the won and lost records and Ted Williams and Johnny Pesky battling with Washington's Mickey Vernon for the individual batting title.

Williams, although not as devastating a batter as before the war, is out front in the home run derby and together with teammates Bobby Doerr and Rudy York, is making it an all-Boston party for the runs batted in championship. On defence, Doerr at second and Pesky at short, rate as one of the best double play combinations in the business.

A new pitching star twinkled over the baseball horizon here the other night in the person of fifteen-year-old Art. Wright, who has been doing a job of outfielding for the Kiwanis Juniors. The youngster held the Trenton Flyers' sluggers to five hits and did a fine all-round job of the mound chore. He seemed to have plenty of ability, was cool under fire and handled his job like a veteran. Wright has plenty of ability and with five years ahead of him in junior ranks should be heard from in the near future. The kid will do.

Coach Speedy St. Louis was minus several of his regulars in the tilt and used Bobby Bunton at first base. The Green Brothers were absent as was Dicky Fitzpatrick. The kids had a bad break in the fifth when they should have tied the score but some loose coaching along third base prevented the tying run from coming in. However it was a good workout for that all-important game tomorrow in Ottawa

According to Jack McVeigh, manager of the team, who with Speedy St. Louis has been doing a man-size job with the Kiwanis younkers, the squad is in good shape for the game which will be played, so we are informed, in the Hull Stadium. Bobby Bunton said today that his arm is in good shape and is ready to fire 'em at the highly touted youthful m'sieus from down Hull way.

• • •

The team will embus here tomorrow at 7:30 a.m. for the long ride to Bytown and will return home tomorrow night. Kiwanis are keen on winning this all-important first game and with it in the bag, and the hometown support next Wednesday might take the series in two straight. Cross your fingers, chums.

• • •

There is just the bare possibility that baseball fans hereabouts might see a repetition of that classic series of last year, between Jack "Lefty" Garton and "Smoky" Smith. There two sterling southpaws it will be remembered hooked up in a thrilling three - game chucking duel with "Smoky" emerging victor by a narrow margin. The squads, Batawa and Thornbury battled thirty-six innings in the three-set brawl and the hurlers whiffed 104 batters between them.

• • •

Now they're at it again, only in widely separated areas. "Smoky" is mowin' 'em down in the Intermediate "A" series in these parts, and "Lefty" is doing likewise up in the northern part of the province. Hurling for the St. Thomas Canadian Legion, "Lefty" won his first game, 17-3 against the Shallow Lake squad, restricting them to six hits. "Smoky" turned back the Port Hopers, 2-1, whiffing 17. So yuh never can tell.

Batawa have a stranglehold on the second round of the playdowns and go into tomorrow's game strong favorites to cop the series in two straight. The game will be played on the Shoemen's diamond at 3 o'clock and a sellout house is reported. Port Hope has its baseball backs to the wall and will go down fighting — if they can't win. In any event, it should be a neat eyeful for those baseball addicts who can't make the trip to Ottawa.

• • •

By the time this is being perused, Napanee and Latta baseballers should be in the middle of their first game in the second round Intermediate "B" series. The game started at 4.30 and is now in progress at the Alemite Field. Second tilt, next Wednesday at Napanee at 4:30.

Whipper Billy Watson has sounded off in a most unusual way about his coming match with Karl Krippler Davis on Friday night here. Watson and Davis as every wrestling fan hereabouts knows are meeting in a grudge go with no time-limit. Toar Morgan the Lindsay Lion will referee this important brawl and the sparks are due to fly if the Whipper's attitude means anything.

• • •

Says Watson: "Davis turned out to be one of the meanest men I've ever met. In fact he is the worst opponent I can think of. He pays absolutely no attention to the rules and takes advantage of every illegal thing the referee will let him get away with. But I think I can cope with him this time and I make this promise that if he beats me on Friday, it will be my last wrestling bout in Belleville."

• • •

Such a reckless statement on the part of the British Empire Champion is evidence of the kind of action Billy expects to hand out. As for the Texan who "fears no man", he says bring him on but quick. One thing can be said for Davis, rugged and illegal as he often is, and that is that he doesn't seem to duck any opponents. "Put them into a wrestling ring one at a time" says the Krippler, "and I'll beat every heavyweight you have got in Canada". Phew, with those two threateners meeting on Friday night it looks like a large or even immense evening for the mat faithful. And don't overlook the Referee-Morgan angle. Toar is not the easiest tempered gent in this world and if either Davis or Watson gets out of line there may be two main bouts going on at the same time.

• • •

Lee Henning, pretty well recovered from that neck which Morgan injured a month back, meets a newcomer in Jim Dobie of Akron, Ohio. Starting off the big night is the match between two popular boys, Pat Flanagan and Mike Sharpe.

• • •

Manager Jack McVeigh, of the Kiwanis Juniors baseball squad announced that tickets for the second game between the team and the Ottawa Wrightvilles, played here Wednesday are now on sale, and can be obtained from him or members of the team. Two handsome prizes, a choice quality sports shirt and a pair of nylon stockings donated by two members of the Kiwanis Club who desire to remain annoymous, will be drawn for between the sixth and seventh innings. Interest in the game is keen and potential spectators are urged to get their tickets early.

Goodman's Game In Toronto Saturday Is Laid Over

Secretary W. Feaver of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association, Hamilton, announced today that the game between the Goodman Juniors and Toronto in the second round OBA Junior Playdowns scheduled for Saturday in Toronto has been laid over for a week. The first game of the series will take place here Wednesday, Sept. 18 at 5.30 p.m. at the Fair Grounds and the second game in Toronto on Saturday Sept. 21st.

The reason for the postponement, Secretary Feaver pointed out is that games in Toronto have been rained out forcing the delay.

Toronto, Sept. 13 (CP)—What promises to be the golf highlight of the year, at least so far as Toronto's golfing fraternity is concerned, is the first annual competition for the Arthur Hulbert Memorial Trophy. This will see the British-born pros of the Professional Golfers' Association zone 4 (Central Ontario) vie with the zone's Canadian-born pros for the honor of initial ownership.

The idea originated in a plan to perpetuate the memory of congenial Art Hulbert , former Thornhill pro who died suddenly last year, and a scheme to set up a P.G.A. benevolent fund. Thornhill members, backing the plan to the proverbial hilt, have donated the trophy and use of their North Toronto course. The tournament is slated for Wednesday, Sept. 25.

Captained by Willie Lamb, the British-born pros number about 20 and probably will include as added strength Montreal's leading tee-artist, Stan Horne. To balance the British team's Montreal starter, Dick Borthwick of Hamilton, the native team captain, said the Canadians have lined up Horne's close friend and keen adversary, Jules Huot.

All in all, this is something new in the way of golf matches which undoubtedly will thrill thousands of fans and serve to set up a fund for which there has been a long-felt need.

Postscript—they say the fairway fiends from the isles will prove the victors.

Superstitious?

They say that of all athletes, baseball players are the most superstitious yet five hurlers in the National League (count 'em) wear the number 13. And since today is Friday the 13th, wonder what will happen if they pitch today?

One will definitely not be in action. He is Claude Passeau of the Chicago Cubs who hurt his back earlier in the season after his brilliant world series triumph of last season. Other "13" wearers are Kirby Higbe of Dodgers, Charley (Red) Barrett of Cardinals, Hal Schumacher of Giants and Mort Cooper of Braves.

Cooper, once the leading pitcher in the circuit, one year kept graduating his number. When he won his 13th he took the number 14 and continued the sequence wearing a higher number each time. But now he's stuck to old 13.

Vancouver, Sept. 12 (CP) — With the baseball season drawing gracefully to a close and the football season on the way, hockey mentors are beginning to talk hockey.

Paul Thompson, the sa Thompson who coached Va couver Canucks to the Paci Coast Hockey League last ye and went on to annex the U ited States amateur crown, r ports that many of his champio ship Canucks will be missi from the lineup this year.

"Four of our best men," Pa says, "Andy Clovechuck, Ab M Dougal, Bernie Bathgate a Alex Pringle are all in the ca of the big leagues, and schedu ed to begin training within t next couple of weeks."

Andy and Ab are both in t strip of the Toronto Maple Lea while Bernie and Alex are la guishing at Chicago's Regi camp.

The only players who will d finitely be back are Ed. Ma Neely, Chuck Millman, Mel Ne sen and Jock Smith.

In light of the heavy sche ule, Paul reports the Canuc will be carrying three forwa lines this winter instead of t customary two.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The lead against a slam should puzzle not a bit. Decide what you should do. Then, do the opposite. If you should lead an ace, it makes you out a chump to learn a little late you should have led a trump.

What should you lead against a slam? That will, no doubt, always remain a bone of contention. Because there are so many surprise situations you could run into. Lots and lots of them.

When a pair reaches a slam contract, it is usually because there is something unusual in their hands. It may be something out of ordinary in one hand, or the other, or both.

It stands to reason that one or both their hands will have some special feature. To be able to count that many tricks it must be so. Else there would never be a chance to defeat it.

When you lead an ace against a slam, it is often unfortunate for your side. When you do not lead an ace, it is often the time you should have. And no advance dope seems to tell you when.

Many expert players have some sort of rule for an ace lead to a slam. It is this: Lead an ace if there is another possible trick in your hand. It has some sense behind it.

Against a slam contract in hearts, it is your opening lead from this hand:

♥8 5 3
♣K 10 6

Lead your diamond ace. When somebody else leads a club you may take another trick with your club king. This looks very reasonable.

But I do not always have a king or queen with my ace against a slam. What do I do then? Something in the bidding or the makeup of my hand may dissuade me. But I nearly always lead an ace.

Why? Because it is my hope that the law of average gives me a better than even chance that it is best. But that is more of a tip than it is a rule. Some prefer to study the racing form.

Hollywood, Sept. 13 —(AP)— Well, Barbara Drake of Borger, Tex., how does it feel to be Cinderella?

By this time, Miss Drake should have been notified that she has been selected to be Barbara Stanwyck's stand-in for the "molded sex" clothes in "The Other Love." (These new dresses are based on the theory that a woman is more appealing clothed than exposed) she will also be given a role in the picture, a course at the Patricia Stevens modeling school and a chance for a movie career.

All the cats were out at the Mocambo last night. Thirty days ago the town's favorite nightspot was closed on a charge of serving liquor after 12 o'clock midnight. Last night the place re-opened with a $10 filet mignon dinner, which was eagerly eaten by the movie famous. Hollywood hasn't seen such a display of strapless gowns and diamond necklaces in months.

Among those shuffling about the postage stamp-like dance floor were Bette Davis, Rita Hayworth with Tony Martin, Sonja Heinie, Ida Lupino, John Garfield, Franchot Tone, Anita Louise, and many others. SQUEEZE BUNT HELPS ROYALS TO BEAT BEARS

Al Campanis, Montreal Shortstop, Provides Play That Wins Game

(By The Associated Press)

The Greeks have a word for their little fellow countrymen, shortstop Al Campanis of the International League champion Montreal Royals, and translated into English, it means very good.

The New York-bred Brooklyn Dodger farmhand was the individual hero yesterday for the second straight day as the Royals made it two in a row over Newark Bears in the best-of-seven Governors' Cup semi-finals.

Campanis, who drove in what proved to be the winning runs in Wednesday's 7-5 win, pushed a perfect squeeze bunt in the ninth inning last night to bring in Les Burge with the run that gave the Royals a 2-1 victory over the Bears. The triumph gave Montreal a 2-0 edge in the play-off.

Baltimore squared its semi-final series with Syracuse Chiefs at one game apiece by batting out a 7-4 victory before the largest crowd to watch a play-off game in Syracuse — 12,419 fans.

The Orioles came from behind with a four run outburst in the seventh to clinch the decision. A walk by Floyd Giebell to Joe Mellendick with the bases full proved to be the winning run.

NATIONAL PACING DERBY WON BY APRIL STAR

Pacer That Once Was to be Destroyed Paces First Mile in 2.03¾

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Westbury, N.Y., Sept. 13. (CP)—All the stirring stories about the fighting heart of a thoroughbred found a real-life hero today in April Star, a five-year-old gelding which cinquered early infirmities to reach harness-racing heights the hard way.

Fans may embroider the tale a little, in this thriving community of 30 miles east of Metropolitan New York, but they won't be far wrong in their phraise of the poster-cast pacer who won the $25,000 National pacing derby in straight heats.

He did it last night at floodlit Roosevelt Raceway, leaving three Canadian-owned entries behind him in North America's richest invitational pace before 14,048 fans. The Canadian invaders — Ron Todgham's Friskey Lee from Chatham, Dr. R. W. Leatherdale's Blue Again from Windsor, and Guy H., seven-year-old bay gelding owned by Elzear Cournoyer of Sorel, Que.—finished unplaced in both heats.

Spinning around raceway's sharp bends for a 2.03 3-4 mile in the first heat of the free-for-all event and 2.05 in the second, April Star won $10,000 purse money for owned R. L. Craig of Urbana, O.—more than twice his earnings in three previous seasons.

The chestnut gelding, driven by Canadian-born Will Fleming, thus apparently reached the summit of a slowly-developing career after once being relegated to the sidelines as a cripple. Three days after he was foaled, April Star suffered a fractured right hind leg when his dam trod on him in a stall, but owner Craig refused to destroy him.

Jimmy Creed placed second in tht event with a second and third in the two heats and Cardinal Abbe, 7-5 favorite in the first heat, was third with a third and a fourth.

Friskey Lee, entered only last Tuesday for the first running of the derby after setting a 6 1-2-furlong track mark of 1.39 3-4 last June 29, showed the most profitable tally of the Canadian challengers by finishing sixth in the first heat for $800 and fifth in the second for $1,000.

Blue Again, world champion at a mile and a half but beaten by Guy H. in a match race at Sorel three weeks ago, was 10th in both heats.

LOUIS EXPECTS TO TAKE FIGHT IN SIX ROUNDS

Tami Mauriello Will be His Opponent in Yankee Stadium Wednesday Night

By FRANK ECK

New York, Sept. 13—(AP) — Joe Louis figures to take care of Tami Mauriello inside six rounds when the Detroit Bomber makes his 23rd heavyweight title defence in a scheduled 15-round fight in Yankee Stadium next Wednesday night.

I arrived at this conclusion after examining Louis' almost perfect record. In the 22 previous title battles he has been "forced" to go 142 rounds. A simple case of division shows that the Negro's opponents last an average of six rounds.

And Tami, the Bronx beer baron, is nothing more than an average fighter and a mediocre boxer. True, he has never been knocked out, but Mauriello has been very careful of his ring opponents. It seems he never has fought anyone with a knockout punch.

I have seen Mauriello groggy from blows to the head and jaw against the much lighter Bruce Woodcock, British Empire heavyweight champion, and against Lee Oma's lackadaisical left jabs.

Feeling that Tami has about one chance in 100 of beating Louis, I put the question point blank to Mr. Mauriello.

"Sure, I have a chance," Tami said. "After all Louis has to fight me."

That's where Mr. Mauriello is wrong. Louis doesn't have to fight him or anyone. All Mr. Louis has to do is punch. And he's learning rapidly.

Diogenes' celebrated search for an honest man ended in the Boston Yanks' office last week . . . When a flock of fans crashed the gate for the Yanks-Chicago Bears exhibition, one ticket seller whose booth was smashed found $116.75 missing from the till . . . A few days later an unidentified fan walked in and planted down $1.20 . . . "I owe you this," he explained. "I got caught in that mob and was carried right into the park. It was a great game and I don't want nothin' for nothin'."

FIVE GRIDIRON CLASHES SAT.

(By The Canadian Press)

Football coaches removed thumbscrews from recalcitrant footballers today after using desperate measures all week to take the bugs from their squads before the weekends games.

Most dopesters expect to see a clearer football picture Saturday after the smoke clears from five gridirons in the country's four senior leagues and most coaches hope to see the weak spots removed from their teams.

Montreal Alouettes journey to the Capital tomorrow to tangle with Ottawa's Rough Riders in the Interprovincial Union and in the league's other game Hamilton Tigers visit Toronto Argonauts. In the Ontario Rugby Football Union Sarnia Imperials play at Toronto Balmy Beach and Hamilton Wildcats are at home to Ottawa Trojans. Winnipeg Blue Bombers go to Regina to play Saskatchewan Rough Riders in the western circuit.

Sarnia Imperials have their big chance to break loose. The O.R.F.U. race has Sarnia tied with Windsor Rockets and Toronto Indians for first place with the Indians-Windsor-scheduled for tonight, postponed because a stadium is not available at Toronto, a win for the Imps means undisputed hold on fifth place.

MINK Coat

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER TWO

The way of a woman with a man. She knew that in a moment he would square his chair about and rest his elbow on the table, his eyes only for her. She knew that he wouldn't pay any attention to the food that was presently set before him. She knew that he would ask her if she had seen a certain play, and take out his notebook, when she said that she had not, to find a free date upon which he could take her to see it.

"This isn't your first look at New York, Mrs. Hardisty?"

"It is. My very first."

"But what's the answer?"

"Well—" Along look down, a look up. "The first twenty-one years in Sutro's Mill. That's California."

"I know it is. I know just about where it is. Up somewhere round Three Rivers."

"You know Three Rivers!"

"Sure I do. I used to go up into the Sierras with Earl McKee."

"My father knows him!"

"Your father's— what? Forestry?"

"My father is the senior salesman in Smith's General Store at Sutro's Mill."

"No kidding?"

"No kidding."

"But how is it you're so chummy with Nancy Strait?"

"I'm married,' you know. My husband is in San Francisco engineering. I met Nancy in San Francisco. I have two little girls.'

"Now you've spoiled everything!"

And so on and so on, with the magic of her beauty and of his admiration weaving a spell between them; Avery's dark face all attentiveness, Isabel's eyes glowing in the softened light. And that was the beginning.

Isabel had been married for five years, then, to Dennis Hardisty. She had known from her very childhood that she wanted to be married to somebody nice and strong and kind and successful, and from her middle teens she had also known that she need only to choose. Roger Smith, whose father owned the big store; Guy Gustavesen, son of the town's richest man; Ellie Elliman, who had been to Harvard and had a stunning car—they all wanted to marry Isabel Jordan. Isabel liked them all, but in the end she married a San Fransico man. San Francisco was not New York and it was not Paris, but it seemed a long step in the right direction to the girl's of Sutro's Mill.

Everyone in this little mountain town loved Isabel, and they gave her an emotional and exciting farewell. Dennis, she remembered, had been immensely pleased at the tears and kisses that had followed the simple wedding, and the crowd at the train when they went away. It had been a dreamy summer morning, that wedding morning, with the scent of pine and juniper coming down from the ranges, and only the tallest of the eastern Sierras topped with fringes of snow.

"Marie Louise, you don't know what it means to be going to live in San Francisco-" Isabel told her bridesmaid. "I think I was born wanting things."

"Things?" said Marie Louise, concerned at the moment only with the hideous fear that she was going to have a pimple on the tip of her nose when she preceded Isabel down the church aisle.

"Perfume at forty dollars a bottle," said Isabel, "and to sit in the right restaurants looking at people, smelling and hearing and seeing the big cities! Being bustled into big cars and knowing how to order French dishes-I'll tell you what, Miss.

I want a mink coat, a great big generous one, and everything that goes with it!"

"And do you think that Dennis Hardisty will buy you that?"

"Not right away, maybe. But someday."

"Mrs. Elliman has a fur coat. So I suppose, if you'd liked Ellie—"

"Ah, but I didn't! I liked Dennis." And Isabel had laughed joyously, sure of her own love and his. Of course she wasn't going to marry anyone she didn't love; the thing was to pick love and prospects of a brilliant future, too.

So she danced through the last weeks at home with complete confidence that the new life would be as kind to her as the old. Left motherless at twelve, the whole town had mothered her. When Isabel played with the other children she could have lunch wherever twelve o'clock happened to find her; somebody was always treating Mary Kimball's child to a new pink frock or a straw hat with daises around the crown.

But at five o'clock she must always be at Smith's General Store to walk home with her father. Often she went in at other times, for a new pencil or a nickel for an ice-cream cone; there was always a moment of ecstacy and pride for Oliver Jordan when his pretty little girl came in. The atmosphere of his department, the smelll of creosote and sawdust and new rope and machine oil, was as familiar to Isabel as that of the old sitting room at home. She liked the feel under her small sandals of the dark oiled floor; the feel of her father's finger's gripping hers as they walked home.

Home, whitewashed, bay-windowed, shabby, was dear to her heart, too. A rather ramshackle cottage set on the slope of the foothills, as all the town was. Geraniums and fuchsias and marguerites grew in the garden, with other flowers that needed no tending and were hardy enough to survive the snows;; alyssum and periwinkle and pittosporum. Stunted pepper trees bowed their graceful withes over the bare beaten earth of the back yard, and chickens fluffed in the dust under them. A long clumsy worktable had a rusty plane nailed to it; in the spring weeds grew tall through a tangle of old wheels and wire netting and planks that cluttered corners of the collapsing fence, Isabel didn't mind the disorder; Aunt Mansie and her father never saw anything wrong, and her mother was dead.

"Dennis, what does a mink coat cost?" Isabel asked him, when they where first married, and taking possession of a small apartment in Sacramento Street. It wasn't the best address in the city; it wasn't like having "Pacific Avenue" at the top of one's paper, but it was good, just the same.

"What's a mink coat?" Dennis asked, sitting back on his heels after an investigation of the icebox.

"Darling a fur coat."

"Oh. A fur coat. Oh yes. Well, couple hundred... There's a gadget here that clamps this shelf in," Dennis said, "and you want to be sure it's pretty steady."

"A couple of hundred! Dennis, a mink coat costs a couple of thousand."

"Yep. S'pose 'twould," said Dennis. "You'll want to take this out sometimes, I suppose? I could fix it so it would always be steady. This is a pretty good old icebox."

"But Dennis, don't you think it's astonishing how many men do give their wives mink coats?"

"In this climate you wouldn't need it." Dennis was blissfully indifferent. "Mom had a squirrel, I think," he said, getting to his feet and going over to the sink to wash his big thin hands thoroughly in plentiful suds and hot water. "I don't know—black. Soft and black and not too deep."

"Seal. She has that now."

"That's a nice fur."

"If ever we had a baby, I'd want him to have a square little army gray coat with a beaver collar."

"Wouldn't he look sissy?... That woman who was at Mom's the other night, Mrs. Hayes. Was that a mink coat?"

"Yes a beauty. But Dennis, she's seventy."

"But what's that got to do with it?"

"Lot's Isabel said under her breathe. A little shadow came into her sapphire eyes and into her heart. But Dennis was looking with deep attention at curtain rods and did not see it.

Dennis did not have money, obviously; in the sense people meant when they said "Isn't there some money there?" But on the other hand he was accustomed to a finer sort of living, to higher standards than anyone Isabel had known in Sutro's Mill. The very richest families there—and a few were rich—didn't live much better than did Isabel Jordan and her father who worked in the general Store.

Mrs. Allerton, wife of the town banker, had been abroad, and put out very handsome Italian cutwork doilies when she gave a bridge club luncheon, but it wasn't much prettier, after all, than little Mrs. Rowley's charming effects with dime store pink paper napkins, pink candles, and pink peppermints. Everyone had a car, most of them shabby and mud-spattered in the long winter; everybody had a radio and electric lights and a telephone and a gas stove, and most wives had an enormous great white glacial refrigerator squeezed into the kitchen scheme somewhere, and the kitchen cabinet that had come into vogue some years earlier, and tin spice sets ornamented with decalcomania flowers.

But about Dennis and his mother there was a definite air of being settled in fineness and quiet and security, and accustomed only to what was solid and established. The older Mrs. Hardisty had a roomy house in Laguna Street, with dark front windows, sun-flooded back rooms looking out over the bay, a deep garden running down into fuchsias and pelargoniums and pines. There were books in every room; all the furniture was good and solid and some of it was fine, but nothing particularly matched anything else; the chairs had all been sat in hundreds of times, the curtains showed fine darns in their spotless folds, the old steel-rodded grate had held fires that had winked at three generations of Hardistys, and would wink on placidly against all the roaring open fires in great tiled fireplaces that helped to warm the modern apartments all about.

"The Hardistys," Isabel told her father, "are the kind that go to concerts."

"Ha," said Oliver Jordan, not knowing what to make of this.

"You know what I mean, Dad. They look forward to lectures. They say So-and-So is coming next month. Mrs. Hardisty says, 'Get tickets, Dennis.' They subscribe."

"Sho, what do they want to do that for?" said Oliver.

"So you'll be sure of your seats Dad. Lyceums. Courses."

"Like 'em?" her father asked. For by this time Isabel had been married some months, and hed presumably been included in these entertainments.

"Yes, I like them. Of course, the people you meet at lectures about the political future of Russia and the leftish trend in England are not particularly thrilling."

"Not?" asked Isabel's father.

"Well, no. Not Social Register."

"What's that?"

"It's a book with important people in it. I mean, people in society."

"Who wants to read a book like that?"

"The people who are in it, Dad. You don't read it: you refer to it."

"Want to read their own names?"

"We're in it," Isabel admitted suddenly. "That is, we will be in next edition. Dennis' mother is in it."

"Pay to be in it?"

"Well, you buy the book, of course. It's five dollars, I think."

"Must be payin' someone pretty well," Oliver Jordan commented thoughtfully.

"What I mean is," his daughter pursued, "at these lectures and things you meet awfully nice people—solid people. Some take the music scores and nearly everyone makes notes. They have fine clothes, you know, but not very smart—maybe a real lace collar sewed on an old velvet dress—that sort of thing."

"Ha," Oliver Jordan said to this again.

The apartment in Sacramento Strret, to which the young Hardistys returned after a brief honeymoon, was presently found to be rather dark and inconvenient. But it was well located, and the sitting room had a small open fireplace, and they stayed on from month to month planning a move to something much nicer someday. Dennis and his mother however, owned a pleasant rambling farmhouse on the top of the Sausalito hills, and from the beginning of their marriage they all liked to go over there for week ends, and for whole weeks in the summer.

If the old Mrs. Hardisty had had some misgivings when her only child had married an unknown girl from an unknown mountain town, these had been quickly allayed when she met Isabel, and when she discovered that Dennis's wife was not only affectionate and sunny, and brightly intellingent, but that she was a capable housekeeper, she felt a deep gratitude and peace in her heart. Life could run serenely now; her job was done.

STATUTORY HOLIDAY

Ottawa, Sept. 13—(CP)—Remembrance Day has been declared a statutory holiday this year, it was announced today. Ceremonies will be held throughout Canada to celebrate victory in both the First and Second Great Wars.

It is unlikely that another date will be chosen to celebrate the two victories. At the last convention of the Canadian Legion a resolution was passed asking that Nov. 11 be known permanently as the day to mark victory in "any war."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 13 —(CP)— Industrial stocks advanced nearly a point by noon today on the exchange and they improved further in the early afternoon. The mining groups and Western oils displayed mild weakness but were better also in the early afternoon. Volume for the first three hours totalled 457,000 shares, a big drop from the recent average.

A jump of about two points for Montreal Power was the feature of the industrial section. Better prices ruled for the steel and utility issues.

In the base metal group, Sherritt firmed a few cents and Labrador was stronger.

Some of the junior mining issues including Joliet, Duvay, Goldvue and Delnite were up.

Livestock, Poultry, Dairy Products In Short Supply

Edmonton, Sept. 13 — (CP) — Shortages of livestock, poultry and dairy products in Alberta marked the first week of the 30-day delivery strike of all farm produce by 20,000 members of the Alberta Farmers Union, called at midnight last Friday in a bid to force federal recognition of their demands for higher prices.

Tightened picket lines choked off livestock receipts at most centres in the seven-day-old strike. Many restaurants and butcher shops were reported closed or closing for want of supplies. Large centres noted a sharp decline in egg deliveries, while a number of central Alberta creameries said shipments would stop until the strike was over.

The union called out its members after a joint delegation representing the A.F.U. and the estimated 30,000 members of the Saskatchewan section, United Farmers of Canada, reported "unsatisfactory talks" with Federal authorities at Ottawa two weeks ago. The farmers seek establishment of a fact-finding board to determine parity between their costs and returns.

A.F.U. officials said early today they had received strong support from non-union farmers, but yesterday the United Farmers of Alberta, comprising more than 30,000 of Alberta's 97,000 farm families, issued a statement saying the U.F.A. would not support the strike.

Outbreaks of Disorder

The week was marked by widely-scattered outbreaks of disorder as tempers flared when pickets attempted to turn back non-striking farmers trying to deliver their produce to the market. Seven A.F.U. pickets have been arrested and convicted on charges ranging from "intimidation" to "violence by destroying property."

Possibility that the strike would be felt in British Columbia's fruit belt loomed today as wholesalers here disclosed fruit shipments might rot because of lack of demand at country points. One dealer said fruit would have to be dumped if the strike continued.

Found Guilty On Two Charges Of False Pretences

Daniel Vesterfelt of Campbellford was sentenced to six months in the Ontario Reformatory by Magistrate T. Y. Wills in city police court Friday morning when he was convicted on two charges of false pretences. Vesterfelt was arrested in Campbellford on August 10th. and has since been held in custody.

The false pretences charges against Vesterfelt involved the sale of an automobile at Cobourg and the purchase of merchandise in Belleville by means of a worthless cheque.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Sept. 13 —(AP)— Selective recoveries continued as a steadying influence for today's stock market although many leaders failed to attract worthwhile bids.

Dealings slowed appreciably after a fairly active opening, while losers were plentiful near the fourth hour, advances of fractions to a point or so predominated. There were a few isolated gainers of four to nine.

Among Canadian stocks Hiram Walker climbed a point but Canadian Pacific, Dome, and Seagrams all suffered fractional setbacks.

HOGS

Toronto, Sept. 13 (CP)— Grade A. dressed, bacon-hogs, were unchanged at Brantford $21.85 delivered and unchanged at Barrie $21.25, in markets reporting early today.

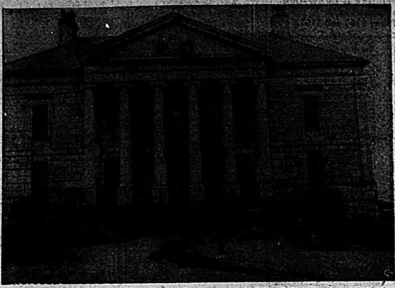
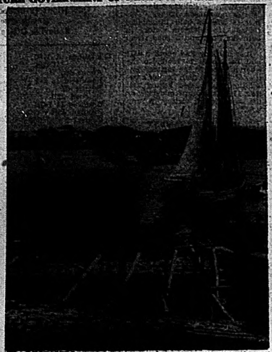
45-MAN CONVENTION OPENS HISTORIC SESSION TO RECOMMEND FUTURE GOVERNMENT OF NEWFOUNDLAND



The Colonial Building in St. John's, Newfoundland, is the meeting place of the 45-man convention which is being held to recommend the future government of the British Empire's oldest colony. The building is built of grey stone which came from Cork, Ireland.



There are hundreds of coves and harbors like this along the deeply indented rocky coast and few of them lack a fishing station or village like this, with cod drying on stages and a typical schooner at anchor.

Here is a typical coast fisherman of one of Newfoundland's 1,500 communities where "confederates" and "anti-confederates" argue.

American Matron Amazes Russians by Her Travels

Washington, (CP)—Perhaps a woman would understand this exchange which took place at a news conference when Mrs. LaFell Dickinson, president of the General Federation of Wimen's Clubs which has many Canadian affiliates, told of her recent 25-day tour of Russia:

"I enjoyed shopping in Russia tremendously," Mrs. Dickinson said.

"Oh, what did you buy?" a woman reporter asked, eagerly.

"Not a thing," Mrs. Dickinson replied, and, while the male reporters struggled with that one she added something about shortages and exchange troubles.

Mrs. Dickinson, whose published sketches fail to mention her age but who must be sixtyish although she doesn't liok it, told of a Russian man dinner companion who asked—"How many years have you?"

"I told him how many years I had," she said, "and he became very excited. He passed the word around the party and all the men seemed excited. My interpreter told me they were amazed that a woman of my age would even leave her fireside to say nothing of flying half around the world with a party of strange men."

From that moment the men treated her as tenderly as if she were an old lady, offering their arms and "almost wanting to carry me around," she said, "and I told the men in our party they might take some lessons on how to help ladies get about."

Mrs. Dickinson, who comes from a prominent Keene, N.H., family, went to Russia with a party of six men of the American Society for Russian Relief who went there on invitation to see how relief materials were being used.

"I am virtually a teetotaller as you all know," she told the reporters. "But my friends insisted I try vodka and drink it in the proper fashion—in one gulp. I did it and I didn't taste anything. And I didn't feel anything either," she added.

But, she said, a friend who had been facing a tonsil operation tried the experiment with her. "She told me the vodka had so burned her throat that it cured her tonsil trouble. She hasn't been bothered since."

Mrs. Dickinson said she had been asked if American women had equal rights as they had in Russia. "And I had to admit that we didn't— I was so ashamed. And they were so sympathetic."

She said she was embarrassed too when the Russian women, who do not indulge in many racial animosities, asked her about the Negro question in the United States and the anti-Semitism that exists in some areas.

The Russian women, she said, were friendly, desperately anxious for peace and friendship with other peoples, particularly American. "But I am sure, if their country were again attacked, they would go out and fight side by side with the men" Mrs. Dickinson said.

Canadian Teaches Chinese Officials Latin Dance Step

Regina, —(CP)— China's deputy minister of education learned the latest Sonth American rhumbas and tangos from a Canadian dancing teacher while both were taking post-graduate in their respective professions in New York.

That's the international mixup reported by Marilyn Whittet, young Regina dancing teacher who recently returned from a month's study in New York.

Teaching Hsu Ze-Cheng, the Chinese education minister, the the latest steps was a pleasure, Miss Whittet said. He speaks fluent English although he has been in the country only one year. The minister will visit Regina this fall during a tour of Canadian educational centres.

As a student in the professional class in ballet arts at Carnegie Hall, Miss Whittet danced with members of the ballet corps from the current Broadway hits "Carousel" and "Annie Get Your Gun."

The latest technique in rhythmic dancing is that done to the accompaniment of a steady rhythm of drums with pattern beat out by hands and feet. Stage shows are definitely veering from straight tap dancing to ballet. The tap ballet originated by movie-dancer Gene Kelly is considered "Tops." Miss Whittet said.

The samba, Viennese waltz and rhumba are the most popular dance steps seen in New York night spots. A rhumba called the paso doble which resembles square dancing in that it includes groups of partners, is becoming a fad,

The rhumba porte, styled after the Cuban mimicking of Americans' improper shoulder action in the traditional Cuban rhumba, is also popular. Now dancers can be "wrong" and "right" at the same time.

SUDBURY REVIVES STATUE CEREMONY

Sudbury, Suffolk, England, —(Reuters)— For the first time since the Reformation, a statue of the Blessed Virgin has been carried through the streets of Sudbury.

When they revived the ancient Harvest Home, Sudbury Roman Catholics also revived the festival of "The Homecoming of Our Lady in August."

The statue, normally kept in the restored shrine of Our Lady of Sudbury, was carried through the streets, and as it returned to the church doves were released and flower petals showered upon it. Special prayers were said for the farmers of Norfolk, Suffolk and Essex and the abundance of their harvests.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma terned on the Baffle Hour, being the favorite mystery on the radio, and pop kept on reeding his paper and trying not to listen, and ma said, William, I'll bet you anything I know who committed the merder already.

For Peet sake the thing has hardly started, pop said, and ma said, I know it, but it's serprising what a detecktive terned into, listening to so many mysteries. The butler is the gilty man, you can take my werd for it, she said, and pop said, But the fellow has hardly said a dozen werds.

I know it, but it's the way he said them, ma said. I'm shure he's the same actor that committed the merder in the Baffle Hour last week, and there's something in the tone of his voice that gives him away, she said.

And she kept on listening, and pritty soon she said, I wasn't quite right, William, the housekeeper is really the gilty one, but the principal is the same, because they're really berds of a common feather, hand in glove.

I'm glad that's settled pop said, and after a while ma said, Now I know, I mean I really know, It was the husband. Why else would he pretend he didn't know what was in the letter? she said. No, I'm wrong, it was the husband's friend. He's entirely too oily to suit me. Oil and innocence dont mix, at least in a merder mystery, you cant fool me, she said.

And after another while she said, It was the wife's sister, that's who it was. Her sugary meekness never threw me off the cent for a minute. You wait and see, she said, and pop said, Let's both wait and see.

Which they did, and the housekeeper was gilty in the end, ma saying, I told you, William, I named that housekeeper almost from the start, and pop said gods, you named every in the cast.

Nothing of the kind, I mention the district attor never sispected him for a ma said, and pop said, You my dear, it's still a wo werld.

Being the end of the Hour and the subject.

Drastic Shortage Of Livestock Looms in Alberta

1,200 Employees From Four Packing Plants Laid Off

Edmonton, Sept. 14—(CP) — A drastic shortage of livestock products loomed in Alberta today as the 30-day delivery strike of all farm produce by more than 20,000 members of the Alberta Farmers' Union moved into its second week today.

Commenting on the results of the first week of the strike to force Federal recognition of union demands for parity prices — the relationship between farmers' costs and returns — the A.F.U.'s farmer president, Carl J. Stimpfle, last night said he was "amazed at the support farmers have given us. We are certainly getting results."

Butchers and grocers in Edmonton agreed as they reported dwindling supplies of meat, lard and eggs. A sharp decline in livestock receipts forced four big city packing plants to announce the laying off of some 1,200 employees yesterday. Reports from other parts of Alberta told of restaurants closed, butcher shops closing and serious shortages of eggs and dairy goods.

Edmonton city council, asked by the A.F.U. to set up a milk committee to ensure delivery of milk to children and hospitals in the city should the city's milk supply be halted by pickets, at a special meeting late yesterday unanimously passed a resolution requesting the Alberta government to take all possible measures to prevent interference with milk deliveries.

Sporadic Outbursts.

With hundreds of farmers picketing stockyards, creameries and grain elevators, sporadic outbursts of violence at widely separated points resulted in 11 arrests during the first week of the strike with 12 convictions. Picketers paid a total of $347 in fines and damages.

Yesterday at Leduc, south of here, three men were convicted of damaging property after 36 cases of butter were thrown into a ditch from an Edmonton-bound truck. Only 11 boxes were recovered by police. They were fined $50 and costs each.

In Saskatchewan, where some 30,000 farmers of that section of the United Farmers of Canada were asked for voluntary support of the strike, pickets were out in some parts and effects of holdbacks were felt.

Regina reported a 35 per cent drop in livestock receipts and 10 per cent in eggs and poultry.

The first "brush" reported in Saskatchewan between pickets and farmers attempting to deliver grain, came last night from the Yorkton district. Stopped by a pickets automobile parked across the highway, a farmer shouted "This is the King's highway and I am going through."

He eased his team of horses forward and the wagon tongue pierced the side of the automobile as he drove on.

Boy Questioned On Disappearance

Yuba City, Calif., Sept. 14 — (AP)—A 16-year-old boy who vanished with two neighbor children was in custody today as police tried to unravel the mystery of his parents' disappearance from their blood-spattered ranch home near here.

Held at Barstow, Calif., was Billy Anderson, 16. Officers searched the countryside around Yuba City for W. H. Anderson, Billy's father, and Mrs. Donnie Anderson, his stepmother, fearing they had been slain.

District Attorney Lloyd Hewitt declared "fragments of flesh and bone and blood" were found in the bedroom of the Anderson home and "it is certain at least one and perhaps two murders have been committed."

Sheriff G. W. Carpenter of Yuba City said Billy was questioned there all day last Monday about the absence of his parents from their home, and told conflicting stories.

Sheriff Emmet Shay of San Bernardino reported young Anderson was picked up on the forgery warrant when he tried to cash a cheque in a bank at nearby Barstow. He said the boy was driving an automobile registered in his father's name.

Sheriff Frank L. Porter at Kingman, Ariz., announced that the two missing neighbor children, Marilyn Hodge, 12, and Nathan Edward James, 15, had been picked up at Topock, Ariz., where they told officers they were on their way to Texas.

Several Changes Made in Pattern Of Anglican Ch.

By SHANE MacKAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Sept. 14 — (CP) — Several changes in the traditional pattern of the Canadian Church were made at the 10-day meeting of the 16th session of the Anglican General Synod which ended here yesterday.

For the first time in history, an Archbishop of Canterbury, Most Rev. Geoffrey Fisher, attended a Canadian Synod session. Other firsts:

The election of a layman, Reginald V. Harris of Halifax, as prolocutor of the Lower House;

The seating of a woman delegate, Mrs. R. E. Wodehouse of Ottawa;

An alternative text for three-year trial of the Anglican prayer book and hymnal;

Commendation of a report on a common ministry and communion service with the United Church, an action which may ultimately lead to relaxation of certain Anglican dogmas in order that "the reunion of Christendom" may be achieved.

Probably the most outstanding innovations at this session of the Synod were the new influence of the Laity and an unfamiliar tone of moderal social changes. Labor legislation, venereal disease prevention, social security and world church organization frequently cropped up in debates.

The Synod registered its "deep concern" over current industrial strife, and urged labor and management to consider their actions "in the light of the welfare of the whole country." Another resolution endorsed the principle of collective bargaining.

The church maintained its traditional stand on divorce after a lengthy and heated debate postponed a proposed canon which would have allowed remarriage of "innocent parties."

Secrets of War Camps Unfolded

Lethbridge, Alta., Sept. 14 -(CP)- Secrets of the Lethbridge prisoner of war camp, which accommodated thousands of German prisoners during the Second Great War, are coming to light.

Some months ago a secret radio receiving set was discovered concealed between two walls. This week, a second powerful radio receiver has been found.

While working on the P.A. system in the camp, a short-wave converter was discovered concealed in it. Ingeniously constructed of Canadian parts and hand made devices, the set is said to be powerful enough to pick up trans-atlantic messages.

14,500,000 Puts '46 on Record As Biggest Tourist Year Yet

(By The Canadian Press)

Every time those unfamiliar licences caught your eye this summer you were looking at a small part of Canada's biggest "sure thing" business — tourists.

All those highway happy dads and window-shopping moms and wide-eyed youngsters added up to an estimated $225,000,000 for busy Canadian cash registers.

Leo Dolan, chief of the Canadian travel bureau in Ottawa, says the sum — and the estimated 14,500,000 visitors who spent it— put 1946 on record as the biggest touring year yet. The previous all-time high was in 1937 when the tourists "take" was $166,000,000.

The end of the war and the end of gas rationing were two main reasons for the increase. Another was the re-opening of famous resorts such as the Rocky Mountain playgrounds of Jasper and Banff after a war-enforced shutdown.

All reports are that the visitors had a whale of a time. They raved about the Queen Elizabeth Highway in Ontario, they marvelled at the "old world" atmosphere of Quebec, said the Rockies were beyond description. They liked the fishing, the boating and, above all, the prices.

Despite early-summer fears, few tourists ran into accommodation difficulties.

"Not one-tenth of one per cent of tourists had any complaints," Mr. Dolan said. "As a matter of fact, they were tremendously impressed with the accommodation we had to offer and were satisfied with our prices."

Had Little Effect

What's more, the return of the Canadian dollar to parity with the American dollar July 5 had "little if any" effect on the tourist trade, he added.

RESERVE, ACTIVE ARMY MEN DUE FOR RAISE OCT. 1

Private With No Trade Will Receive $95 In Comparison With $76.50 Now Paid

Ottawa, Sept. 14 — (CP) — Soldiers of both the active and reserve armies are due Oct. 1 for a pay raise, the one Defence Minister Abbott forecast last April.

Army officials reported today that that day has been set as the probable starting date for a new pay system that will bring permanent force soldiers up to the levels enjoyed by the other two services.

Reserve Army men will get the benefit of the increase on the basis of the 30 days of training they are slated to do annually. For purposes of computing pay two nights of training will be considered the equivalent of one day.

Majority of the 14,054 officers and other ranks now serving in the interim army are expected to enlist in the permanent force by Oct. 1, leaving about 11,000 still required to complete Canada's peacetime army of 25,000 members. The transition period to permanent force status will involve new documentation, medical examination and trades qualification tests before the higher rates of pay are instituted.

Members of the two-year interim army force who are not accepted into the permanent army for medical or other reasons, may continue in the army until their temporary army commitment expires in September, 1947. These men, however, will continue to be paid according to rates paid during the war and which still are in existence.

At present there are 2,763 officers serving in the interim army approximately the required number for the permanent force, but vacancies are still to be filled in specialist branches such as the Medical Corps and Engineers.

Under the new system of pay, a private who is unqualified in any trade, will receive a basic rate of $95 per month compared with the present rate of $76.50 a month.

The new marriage allowance will be set at a rate of $20 a month for men and $30 a month for officers.

British Press Resents 'Imperialism' Charge

London, Sept. 14 (CP)—Britain's press voiced resentment today at the "imperialism" charge made in New York by Commerce Secretary Wallace of the United States, and expressed surprise at his apparent divergence from the views of State Secretary Byrnes, but concluded generally that the situation was "America's baby."

"American policy toward Russia may be right or wrong or... a bit of both," said the Liberal News Chronicle in commenting on Wallace's foreign policy speech Thursday night.

"Right or wrong, Britain is not responsible for it and Mr. Wallace's picture of America in the leading strings is quite fanciful. We have had to hold a lot of other peoples' babies in the past year or two. We are not holding this one."

The pro-labor Daily Herald and the Conservative Daily Telegraph made virtually identical demands that Mr. Wallaces produce evidence of "British imperialistic policy" citing Britain's recent policy in India, Iran and Egypt.

The Telegraph editorial hailed Mr. Byrnes' "considered and welcome" statement of American foreign policy at Stuttgart last week and indicated surprise that six days later a fellow cabinet member should make a speech "implicitly criticising every recent action of the State Department."

Both papers, commenting on Palestine, remarked that, in the words of the Telegraph, Britain still is "vainly seeking assistance from the United States to enable us to withdraw." The Telegraph suggested that Britons regard the Wallace speech with "tolerant bewilderment."

The News Chronicle joined the Telegraph in asserting it wasn't Britain which recently sent an ultimatum to Yugoslavia and that it was not at British invitation that an American fleet was cruising the Mediterranean and that the foreign office was not being consulted about United States policy in Japan and China.

The Communist Daily Worker sounded a note of approval for the Wallace speech, terming it a revival of "the Roosevelt spirit."

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 14 (CP) — President Truman today occupied the hot centre of an administration family row that may have serious international implications.

Republicans accused the President of angling for political advantage on the issue of American Relations with Russia and invited him to choose between State Secretary Byrnes and Commerce Secretary Wallace as his exponent of United States Foreign policy.

Mr. Truman put himself in the position by endorsing in its entirety and in advance the speech Mr. Wallace made in New York Thursday night, critical of Britain, advocating establishment of Russian, British and American spheres, of influence and, most important domestically, criticizing United States Foreign policy.

It was made at a political meeting launching a campaign to beat Thomas E. Dewey, Republican candidate for re-election as governor of New York.

The President was in the position of endorsing such statements by Mr. Wallace as:

"Make no mistake about it— the British Imperialistic policy in the Near East alone, combined with Russian retaliation, would lead the United States straight to war unless we have a clearly defined and realistic policy of our own."

In London, a spokesman said the Foreign Office was particularly surprised at Mr. Wallace's criticis mof "British Imperialism". criticism of "British Imperialism". at once fastened the blame for Balkan troubles upon Britain, and indicated the lack of "a clear and realistic" policy in the United States administration.

That statement, following so closely the clear statement of Secretary Byrnes on policy in Europe, closely allied with British policy, sent reporters scurrying to the State Department.

BANDITS KILL BRITISH SOLDIER RIDING IN TRUCK

Wear Gendarmerie Uniforms and Had Bren and Sub-machine Guns

Athens, Sept. 14—(AP)—The British Press Office said today that bandits in gendarmerie uniforms shot and, killed a British soldier and wounded another when they opened fire on a truck, carrying five British soldiers, with Bren and sub machine-guns near Naoussa station.

British military authorities in that area issued a statement saying the attack was "not considered as directed primarily against the British," and pointed out that the chief of the gendarmerie was expected to return to Naoussa along the road where the action took place.

In Athens, a reporter for the Communist paper Rizospastis and the EAM organ Elleftheri Ellada, was detained by police for questioning in connection with the slaying of a Right Wing mathematics professor three days ago.

The professor, Anthony Vorities, was shot to death in his class room and two others were wounded.

In Salonika the editor and four assistants of the Leftist organ, Laiki Foni, were sentenced to jail and fined and their paper suspended for one year by a military court for publishing an article criticizing the establishment of military courts on the mainland and the Peloponnesus.

The press ministry in Athens said last night that a number of members of E.L.A.S., the fighting arm of the Leftist political party National Liberation Front (E.A.M.), who fled Greece last year at the end of the Civil War, now are concentrated near Devdelija, Yugoslavia, a few miles north of the frontier, and are preparing to move into Greece.

Previous government statements indicated 4,000 to 5,000 E.L.A.S. men were in the Devdelija region.

ALMOST OVERCOME

Toronto, Sept. 14 —(CP)—, Ignoring firemen's warning to leave her blazing West Toronto home, Mrs. J. Creighton was almost overcome by smoke late last night when she went to the basement to get $100 she had hidden there. Cause of the fire was not determined and damage was estimated at $400.

FAVOR RELAXING OR SCRAPPING OF WAGE CONTROLS

Some U. S. Unions Demand Public, Industry Members Quit Stabilization Board

By HAROLD W. WARD

Washington, Sept. 14 (CP)— The White House decision in the seamen's wage dispute spurred a fresh drive by some labor unions today for relaxation of scrapping of wage controls in the United States.

Mixed with it were demands that, public and industry members resign from the Wage Stabilization Board after turning down as inflationary the wage increases which A.F.L. Maritime workers finally secured through White House amendment of the stabilization rules.

The four members indicated to reporters, however, that they have no intention of stepping out so long as President Truman stands firm on the position that Stabilization Director Steelman's decision in the seamen's case did not upset stabilization policy. Mr. Truman made a statement to that effect at a press conference.

The six-man Stabilization Board has two members from the public, two from industry and two from labor (one C.I.O., one A.F.L.).

William Green, A.F.L. President, led the attack on the board.

"The wage Stabilization Board no wstands repudiated and disgraced. Its public and indusry members have forfeited the confidence of the public and labor and should resign at once."

Unionists have complained frequently that wages have been held down but prices have not.

From R. J. Thomas, Vice President of the C.I.O. United Automobile Workers, came a declaration yesterday that his union will demand higher wages if the Maritime decision sets a new and higher wage formula.

The 18 1-2 cents an hour awarded his union after a strike has been a W.S.B. yardstick for measuring allowable wage increases under the stabilization policy laid down in an order from President Truman last February.

PENALTY MADE SEVERE

Manila, Sept. 14 — (AP) — After the Mayor of Manila and scores of other citizens had their jeeps stolen by organized gangs, the Philippines House of Representatives today passed a bill making eight years imprisonment the minimum penalty for motor vehicle thefts.

NINE CRITICALLY BURNED IN HOTEL FIRE IN ARKANSAS

Great Northern Hotel One of the Oldest In Hot Springs Lost In Night Fire

Hot Springs, Ark., Sept. 14 — (AP)— Nine persons were critically burned and several others slightly injured in a spectacular fire early today which destroyed the 75-room Great Northern Hotel. Police, fire department and hospital authorities were unable to say whether any occupants were missing, and no deaths had been reported.

Authorities said it might be as late as tomorrow before they could determine whether anyone perished.

Weldon Rasberry, Hot Springs Commissioner of Public Safety, and W. A. Akers, city fire inspector, said it was impossible for firemen to look among the remains because of intense heat given off by bricks.

They asserted it would be late today before the bricks could be cooled sufficiently.

The fire broke out at 12:50 a.m. in the 50-year-old hotel, a three-storey brick structure. The Hot Springs fire department said many of the guests jumped to safety or escaped down ladders.

The fire, cause of which was not yet known, sent flames 75 feet into the air. By 2:30 a.m. the walls caved in.

Corridors at Levi Hospital were filled with injured at 2:30 a.m. Four ambulances were kept busy taking the injured to the hospital as thousands of spectators in this resort city lined the streets to watch the fire, some narrowly escaping injury themselves when line wires tumbled to the streets.

Justice Admits Statement Given By the Accused

Windsor, Sept. 14 — (CP) — Mr. Justice Dalton Wells ruled yesterday that a statement signed by Donald Sears in connection with the slaying of Sgt. Hugh Blackwood Price should be admitted as evidence. Sears is charged with murder in the slaying of Price last July 6.

His Lordship told the jury, which had been excluded during lengthy argument on admissibility of the statement, that he was making no comment whatever on the value of the statement.

Police said the statement was obtained when the 18-year-old accused was questioned in connection with the slaying of Price and with knife attacks on four other men, one of whom was fatally injured.

The Crown has indicated its case is based on the allegation that Sears attacked each man after he had been the recipient of indecent proposals, the suggestion being that accused was on the watch for persons of abnormal inclinations.

Usual Warning Given

Crown Attorney E. C. Awrey said there was no evidence that would indicate either an inducement or a threat to accused in connection with the statement. He said detectives testified the usual warning was given, and that the detectives disagreed only as to whether the youth had read the statement over to himself in a low voice or silently.

Bombers of Future May Carry Own Fighter Planes for Their Protection

Washington, Sept. 14-(CP)- Huge bombers of the future may carry their own fighter planes with them for their protection if military plans now in the discussion stage materialize.

Projects to equip super-long-range bombers with jet-propelled "parasite" fighters, launched and recovered in flight, have been discussed among the Military and Aviation officials.

One phase of the subject involves the possible conversion of a bomber such as the Consolidated Vultee XB-36 into a flying aircraft carrier so that it would have its own escort when in enemy territory.

The XB-36 is a six-engined plane weighing about 120 tons with a wingspan of 230 feet and a length of 163 feet. It recently flew at Fort Worth, Texas.

Such a plane might have a hangar built into its huge fuselage and carry folding-wing jet fighters which could be launched and recovered in flight.

The Navy already has two jet fighters with folding wings for use on aircraft carriers, and others are being designed and built.

The fighter could be launched from below the plane and could be recovered on a hook in flight much as a carrier plane is snagged by an arresting cable on the deck.

A.F.L. Mariners Cross Picket Lines of C.I.O.

Strike Again Ties up All Seaports in United States

New York, Sept. 14—(AP)— C.I.O. Seamen today shouldered the prolonged shipping strike but in one instance A.F.L. Longshoremen, who had supported fellow A.F.L. Mariners until their walk-out was ended yesterday, crossed C.I.O. picket lines.

About 30 members of the International Longshoremen's Association walked through a National Maritime Union picket line at a New York City pier. There was no disturbance.

However, about 200 longshoremen at the pier refused to go to work despite I.L.A. president Joseph P. Ryan's plea.

Asked if he would confer with N.M.U. head Joseph Curran, Ryan said, "You can't do anything with Communist groups."

However, in Baltimore, William Rentz, port agent for the A.F.L. Seafarers International Union, which with the A.F.L. sailors of the Pacific, ended its country-wide strike Thursday, said that A.F.L. seamen in the Maryland port expected today to cross picket lines established by the C.I.O. men.

His announcement came several hours after Paul Hall, Port agent in New York for the S.I.U.-S.U.P. said it announced the end of the A.F.L. strike that A.F.L. members would refuse to cross C.I.O. picket lines.

The A.F.L. withdrew all its east coast and gulf coast pickets last night with this announcement:

The end of the A.F.L. strike was made possible by the action of John R. Steelman, economic stabilizer, in amending Wage Stabilization Board regulations to permit government agencies such as the United States Maritime Commissary the same wage scale as private operators in the same field.

This upheld wage increases up to $27.50 a month won by the S.I.U.-S.U.P. in negotiations with ship operators.

But the C.I.O. National Maritime Union, which had won a $17.50 monthly increase, struck yesterday to enforce demands for "parity" with the A.F.L. mariners.

Joseph Curran, head of the N.M.U. which has 90,000 members said the strike would be supported by 200,000 members of the six C.I.O. and one independent union forming the committee for maritime unity.

Mr. Curran, said after a meeting with Frank J. Taylor, head of the American Merchant Marine Institute, which represents companies sailing ships under contract to the N.M.U., that the union planned to "tie up every ship in all ports" by picketing both A.F.L. and N.M.U.-manned vessels.

WON'T HANDLE STRUCK WORK

Vancouver, Sept. 14 — (CP) — Pressmen of the Vancouver Daily Province last night reaffirmed their decision not to handle "struck work" at the newspaper despite an order by their International Union headquarters to "stay on the job."

A unioff statement said that the vote was 81 for and 17 against, with two spoiled ballots.

The newspaper has not published for two days following refusal of the pressmen to handle plates produced by composing room employees who are not members of the A.F.L. International Typographical Union. The I.T.U. members have been on strike since June 6.

REPORT OPPOSES EASY DIVORCE, MIXED MARRIAGE

United Church Report Also Decries Marriages Without Adequate Preparation

By GEORGE BURMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Sept. 14—(CP) — A definite stand against easy divorce, mixed marriages and marriages without adequate preparation was expressed in a report presented Friday by Chief Justice J. C. McRuer of the Ontario Supreme Court to the 12th General Council of the United Church of Canada, meeting in Erskine-American United Church here.

Mr. Justice McRuer, an elder of Bloor Street United Church, Toronto, gave his report as chairman of a special commission on Christian marriage appointed by the Boards of Christian Educations and of evangelism and social service of the United Church, while the resolutions were presented by the commission's secretary, Rev. J. R. Mutchmor, also of Toronto.

The report, filling 57 pages of the council's agenda, was compiled after an exhaustive study and following consultation with committees in Vancouver, Simcoe county in Ontario, and Montreal, it traced the history of marriage from its beginnings to its present status in the light of modern conditions.

Divorce and Society

Among the topics touched upon by the Chief Justice were:

1. Divorce: "The commission decided that it was not in the interest of the community as a whole that the grounds of divorce should be widened. In my experience, I endorse wholeheartedly that view . . .

"For young people to think that they can enter into holy wedlock with mental reservation that they can obtain a divorce if things do not work out right . . . strikes at the very root of human society as it is built around the family."

Move to Smash Black Marketing By U.S. Soldiers

Frankfurt, Sept. 14 —(AP)—In a move to smash black marketing by American soldiers, the United States army has announced it will issue scrip next Tuesday in lieu of Allied marks as the legal tender in all post exchanges and other military establishments in the American zone of Germany.

Unofficial reports said that millions of dollars obtained through black market operations have been sent back to the States by American soldiers and civilians in the last 18 months. Recently, under a strict currency control system, the flow of illicit dollars to the United States has been retarded, but under the scrip system, it is expected even that leak will be plugged.

Acting simultaneously in Rome to curb military black marketing United States army authorities declared a 72-hour moratorium on virtually all soldiers' financial transactions.

The substitution of scrip for Allied marks will involve the redemption of an estimated $[illegible]000,000 in Allied marks now believed to be credited as dollar-backed currency in the control books of more than 300,000 Americans and Allied personnel in the United States zone.

FARMERS COMPLAIN THEIR HORSES' MANES, TAILS BEING CLIPPED

That there must be a black market demand for horse hair is the conclusion of police in the Colborne district following numerous reports from farmers in that area of horses' tails and manes being cut during the night.

Provincial Constable George Colling at Brighton stated that since the first of May he had investigated no less than nine complaints of such mutilation in the Colborne area. The cutting takes place at night while the horses are in pasture and police believe it is being taken for sale.

"In every case the horse had been out in pasture and a pair of shears had been used," stated the officer. Thus far inquiries have not unearthed any clue which might lead to the identity of those responsible.

Good Price Wanted For Bag of Cement Of Doubtful Value

Despite efforts of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board to keep prices in line in Canada, it will take a lot of convincing for a certain Hillcrest Street resident to believe that there is no black market in the Belleville district.

In search of a bag of cement to fix his residence chimney the man inserted an advertisement in the newspaper and received several replies. One reply from a Stirling district resident did not meet with too welcome reception, however. The reply indicated that a bag of cement was available although it was two or three years old and the owner "did not know if it be of any use."

"If you wish to take chances on it, you may have it for two dollars and a little extra for delivery," read the reply.

The man got his cement from another source.

Aims of Art Program in Schools Told Teachers

On Thursday afternoon a visit was paid to the city of Belleville Public School Inspectorate by Mr. C. D. Gaitskell, M.A., Director of Art for Ontario.

Mr. Gaitskell accepted an invitation to visit the city following the attendance at the special summer school in art by Miss June Crosby, Miss Olive Elson and Miss Kathleen MacPherson, members of the Public School teaching staff.

Teachers from Trenton, Foxboro, Point Anne, Cannifton and the Prince of Wales School with Public School Inspector R. H. Macklem, assembled with the Belleville teachers at the Queen Alexandra School. Mr. Gaitskell described the aims of the modern program of art in Ontario Public schools. Mr. Gaitskell also visited the Collegiate Institute and Vocational School where he discussed with Principal Currie and teachers concerned the secondary school program in Art.

Progress of Art Education

Teachers were given a brief history of the progress of Art education in modern times through impressionism and expressionism to the modern trend which is yet new enough not to have a formal name.

Impressionism is familiar to almost everyone who has attended Ontario schools as the system by which an attempt was made to train all pupils to be artists. Formal lessons in advanced theory were given even in primary classes with the thought that the ideas would remain with pupils for later transfer to the problems of any one who might chose art as a career. The teacher outlined the steps; the pupils followed each step with very little thought or understanding of what it all meant or led to. It was about as sensible as assigning to a Grade II class a problem in Trigonometery and then carefully outlining each progressive step in order that an obscure result might be achieved.

This system of art instruction is still very much in use.

Swings to Other Extreme.

Expressionism swung the pendulum to the other extreme where the teacher abandoned her position of domination and the child expressed himself absolutely freely in whatever medium and manner his inclinations determined. The only motivation as is the need of the personality to express itself. Expressionistic teachers believe that any curb or control of the individual urge leads to frustration and failure. This program is to be found in operation rarely in Ontario schools.

Mr. Gaitskell explained that it is the aim of the modern system of Art in Ontario to permit the child to express his personality through media and by methods properly motivated guided and supervised.

Sense of Rhythm

The child has a natural sense of rhythm and proportion. It is the skilful teacher's opportunity to fill the child with desire to express himself through satisfactory media in a desirable way.

Junior pupils must be expected to express themselves with large simple instruments of art on large surfaces just as they naturally select and enjoy large and uncomplicated toys at play. The intricacies of form, tone, proportion etc., will be taught as the child develops and needs them to express on paper what he is thinking, feeling and understanding at the time.

Mr. Gaitskell expressed the wish that he might return to Belleville at a later date and visit and observe the schools in operation to see what progress was being made in Art Education.

The assembly was presided over by Mr. E. S. Fairman, President of the Belleville Teachers' Institute. Introduction was made by Public School Inspector L. A. Kells and appreciation was expressed by Principal A. C. Wilkin.

Saturday Market

Blue grapes at from 50 to 60 cents the basket were offered on the local produce market for the first time on Saturday. Locally grown grapes were offered at the lower figure.

Wealthy and St. Lawrence apples were quite plentiful at 60 cents the peck for the former and at 50 cents the small basket for the other variety. Cooking apples sold for a slightly lower figure.

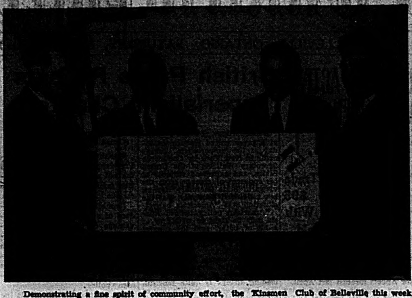
Bartlett pears were plentiful at prices ranging from 70 cents to $1 the basket; prune plums were 95 cents, Blue Damsons, 90 cents, and tomatoes 30 cents the basket or $1.25 per hamper.

A fairly complete offering of vegetables was available with potatoes bringing 55 cents the peck with bunched vegetables at the usual dime per bunch and radishes at a nickle. Cauliflower sold up to 40 cents; corn was 35 cents the dozen ears, while watermelons and musk melons were available in any quantity desired at prices according to size.

On the inside market eggs were scarce at 50 cents the dozen with available supplies being quickly bought up. Fowl sold generally from 38 to 40 cents the pound, with a few capons bringing up to 48 cents the pound.

Hemlock slabwood sawed into stove lengths was offered at $6 the cord, while young pigs ranged from $9.50 to $11 each, according to quality.

Cheque Presented to City



Demonstrating a fine spirit of community effort, the Kinsmen Club of Belleville this week presented to the city a cheque for $2,650 representative of 10 per cent of the purchase price of the artificial ice plant for the Hume Arena. The cheque was officially presented to His Worship Mayor Frank S. Follwell by Newton Wilbur, president of the Kinsmen Club. Above, reading left to right, are Alderman Wilbur, Alderman Chas. Hyde, Alderman Lorne McDougall, and Mayor Follwell. The money presented to the city represented the proceeds derived from the Kinsmen summer carnival.

REPORT OPPOSES

2. Mixed Marriages: He read an excerpt from the report which stated: "Similarity of cultural background and harmony in spiritual outlook are essential to marital and family happiness . . . when young people contemplate a mixed marriage, the minister should counsel most serious consideration of the issues involved and should seek complete agreement before marriage concerning religion in the home and especially in relation to children.

"When impossible conditions are imposed, especially that requiring a pledge for the children to be brought up in a faith in which one parent cannot share, those contemplating such a marriage should be advised not to proceed."

Closer Understanding

"As soon as it may become practicable," it was added, "conference between clergy and various communions, and especially between, Roman Catholics and Protestants, should seek closer understanding and the reconciliation of their conflicting viewpoints."

3. Birth Control: Reference was made to statistics in the report which stated that in 1921 the birthrate in Canada was 29.4, it was 23.4 in 1942 and 24 in 1943. Of the some 2,500,000 families in Canada, 31.4 per cent were stated to be childless.

"Many young people who would make ideal parents, delay the rearing of children in order to establish themselves in business or to secure more advanced education," the report added.

Mr. Justice McRuer commented: "One cannot entirely accept the view that this is entirely from natural causes. If this is true it is a matter for the church to consider seriously."

4. Marriage Preparation: "I do not think that the Protestant church is taking marriage seriously enough in that when young people enter the holy bonds of matrimony, many are permitted to do so without the teaching, the warnings and the counsel they require."

An important phase of marriage was the welfare of the child and he felt that in the Protestant Church the same attention was not given to the family and the home by church and clergy as in the Roman Catholic church.

Among the recommendations on which discussion was deferred was one advocating provisions for civil marriage where such did not exist.

Rev. C. A. Cowans of Toronto said the council had been asked to exert every effort to bring people into the church, and proposed marriages provided a fine opportunity. Why drive people from the church by making available a civil marriage?

Tweed Council Buys Pumper

Tweed—A new fire pumper has been purchased for the fire department from the LaFrance Fire Equipment Company by Tweed Municipal Council at a cost of $1825.00.

The old machine an antiquated model had been in service for many years.

The pumper which will be delivered in about two weeks has a capacity of 500 gallons per minute and it may be hooked up to a hydrant to create additional pressure. It is equipped for a fog nozzle if required in cases where smoke and flames have made considerable headway in the interior of a building. The new pumper is an up-to-date model and the purchase will mean that Tweed volunteer brigade should be able to cope with a most serious blaze.

Fire in Dundas St. Apartment Bldg. Drives Five Families to Street

Five different families, totalling in all 19 persons, were forced to leave their homes at nine-thirty Friday evening when fire starting in a downstairs apartment at 178 Dundas Street swept through partitions, upper floor and attic to make the building unlivable.

Two of the families were able to get household furniture out of the building before dense smoke made further entry impossible, but three of the families lost practically all of their household possessions.

One family was able to get out only a baby's crib and carriage, while the father, suffering from a heart condition, collapsed on the scene and was taken to hospital in Martin's ambulance with Dr. Miles in attendance.

Families residing in the large brick structure which has entrances both on Dundas Street and on Foster Ave., behind the Supertest gasoline station, were Mrs. Trusdale; E. Fenn; B. Hyderman, his wife and three children; Russell Mountenay, his wife and four children; Sam Woodcock, with his wife and four children.

Started in Trusdale Apartment.

According to firemen the fire started in the Trusdale apartment on the ground floor. A tenant of only two days, Mrs. Trusdale had gone out for the evening and is thought by the fire department to have left a coal oil lamp burning in the apartment. A dog and cat were in the apartment. There is no electricity in the building.

The blaze was discovered by the Hyderman family residing in an upstairs apartment with Mr. Hyderman calling to Mr. Woodcock from an upstairs window. Mr. Woodcock then turned in the alarm but when firemen arrived the Trusdale apartment was all ablaze and before it was brought under control the blaze had broken through the roof in several places.

Three lines of hose totalling approximately 1,200 feet, were run by firemen in order to get sufficient water onto the fire to bring it under control. Firemen worked under difficulties of darkness to fight flames in partitions and in the floor between the first and second storeys.

No Estimate of Damage.

Extent of the damage to the building which is owned by Mrs. Keck, Dundas Street, was not estimated by firemen.

The Woodcock family, residing in an east wing of the building were fortunate in that fire was brought under control before it reached this part of the house and they were able to return to their home.

Temporarily three of the families were housed in the Shell Oil service station on Foster Ave., with neighbors gathering up blankets to provide makeshift beds.

While the peak has been passed, many tourists are planning trips to Canada during the fall and Mr. Dolan said the total may be 20,000,000 when final figures are compiled. By July 31, the number of cars from the United States was 2,762,418, compared with 1,870,555 in the same period last year.

Ontario's thousands of lake resorts attracted more tourists in July than in any other month in history — and government officials said they are sure the August record was even greater. Department stores in cities throughout the southern part of the province were besieged by tourists, many of whom found Canadian supplies more plentiful than at home.

With the improvement in gasoline and rubber supplies, many of the tourists who in previous years went to Kingston by boat or train made the trek this year by car. The demand for overcoats, sweaters and socks was heavy, merchants said. Big steaks were the favorite food.

Broke All Records

At Brockville, highway, ferry and bridge traffic from the United States broke all records. The Thousand Islands bridge revenue was $68,030 during August, compared to $50,737 in the previous peak month, August, 1939.

In the Kawartha Lakes, resorts still are filled with duck-hunters. A survey showed the fishing catch below average, however.

Throughout Western Ontario hotels, restaurants and stores reported a marked increase in business. In cities and towns near the border, hotel accommodation has been at a premium most of the summer, particularly at week-ends.

The North Bay Board of Trade said the influx was at least 35 per cent greater than last summer. One brief decline — June 29-July 3 — resulted from reports in Southern Ontario that the north had no accommodation, the Board said.

Church Societies Hold Luncheon

Tuesday afternoon at one o'clock in the Sunday School room of the Tabernacle Church a joint meeting of the Woman's Association and the Women's Missionary Society was a far cry from the usual routine of the business period, program and afternoon tea, when tables made attractive with snowy cloths and autumn flowers were set for a pot luck luncheon, to which all the ladies of the congregation were invited.

Following the meal, Mrs. G. Gorseline, vice-president, of the W.A. welcomed the visitors and Miss Ethel Horton read portions from St. Paul's letter to the Ephesian church and from the Gospel by St. John as the Scripture Lesson.

Two outstanding contributions highlighted the program for the afternoon. Presenting the speaker, Mrs. Gorseline said Rev. D. C. Amos really needed no formal introduction to the ladies after his pastoral association during the month of August; and replying Mr. Amos said he was very happy to be a guest for this occasion but that he had almost forgotten he was to be the speaker during his full enjoyment of the luncheon delicacies provided by his hostesses.

Speaking of and for The Crusade for Christ being sponsored by all United Churches across Canada, Mr. Amos said "there is a feeling that we cannot be a series of little glass churches, leaving untouched the sores of society, for having no contact with outsiders we miss the spark and friction of some who have very definite, though not always complimentary, ideas of the church as a whole. For this reason a skeleton program has made for expansion and development by four steps, namely—education, enlistment, stewardship and consolidation".

He said: "This Crusade will not mean much to any church body until the man and woman power consolidate for some one project. Through education along one line they become Crusaders with a special objective. Other denominations are also working along these lines, though different methods are used in different localities, but one thing is true, that the Spirit of God is moving in all church people and we are set to provide a program to interest folk without church affiliations. One such experiment is the Cavalcade ex-army truck which will arrive in Belleville next month, bringing a pictorial exhibit to demonstrate the work of The United Church in all its phases, and with the truck a team of real speakers to tell about all avenues of church life."

Mr. Amos recounted some personal experiences he had during his holidays in July, when he was privileged to accompany the Cavalcade truck on two initial trips; to Wasaga Beach and to Hamilton.

Mrs. J. Ross, president of the W.M.S., voiced the appreciation of all present for this inspiring address.

The second highlight of the afternoon was the rendition by Rev. J. W. Houston of the solo, "I Walked Today Where Jesus Walked", and a negro spiritual "I'm on the Way Up There". The program closed with the Mizpah benediction.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED!

The passage of time has brought many changes in the instrumentation, the skills, and the techniques which are used in the examination and analysis of human eyes and visual functions.

An estimated five million modern Canadians have received the benefits that Optometric science offers to all. But hundreds of thousands of these seem ignorant of the forward strides made in the past twenty years.

Eyes which have not been examined in ten years — glasses which have not been changed or checked for changes in five years, are outmoded and far behind the changing times.

ALL EYES CHANGE WITH TIME.

Optometric science is prepared to do more good for you and your eyes than ever before. Take advantage of modern improvements and give your eyes the benefit of modern technique and instrumentation.

INVADING TRUCKS SHATTERED QUIET OF TINY ISLAND

But Sark Fishermen Hid Their Resentment Against Germans During Occupation

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Sark, Channel Islands, Sept.—(CP)— When the German Commandant first landed on this craggy sea-battered island of 400 inhabitants in 1940 he made a bad mistake. He called for a taxi.

Instead he got a horse—with a hansom behind.

Hansom cabs were the very latest thing in transport here before the occupation, for motor engines were banned by law. But the Germans soon changed that. They brought tractors, trucks and jeeps to shatter the centuries-old quiet of the shady lanes, leafy gorse-covered valleys and rocky sea-swept bays that were the joy of visitors.

The Sarkees—sturdy fisherfolk who speak an old Norman patois— hated motors even more than they hated the Germans, but the majority were too canny to show it.

Sark's largest hotel became the German Army headquarters and its proprietor, Albert Falle, whose family have lived here for generations, had to satisfy large appetites and large thirsts.

"At first," he said, "the Germans paid rent for staying in the hotel but later, when conditions became more difficult, I received nothing. They had the best of everything and shortly before the war ended they took most of my furniture and livestock.

"But the German commandant was more indulgent than most. He never stopped me from operating my radio and I listened to the BBC news bulletins from London without interference."

Fisherman Informer

One night a Sarkee fisherman, believed to be collaborating with the Germans, came to the hotel and told Mr. Falle the German harbormaster wanted his private electric power plant.

"Who told him I had one, you rat?" he said, and knocked the fisherman down. The man returned with German military police and pointing at Falle said: "Protect me from that man."

"I was already to be taken away and perhaps sent to Germany when the commandant himself intervened. He told the police the incident was just a family quarrel and sent them away. Actually he lied to save me from arrest."

Although all firearms were supposed to have been handed over the day after the Germans took possession, Mr. Falle kept his sporting rifle by hiding it in a cupboard.

"I lost my head when the German surrender was announced over the radio, dug out my rifle and rushed out of the hotel firing shots into the air. At first the Germans thought I had gone mad but they weren't surprised by the news. They had been expecting it for weeks and didn't seem to care much one way or the other."

Mr. Falle worked night and day for six months to prepare his hotel for this year's tourist invasion. He has almost more guests than he can handle, all other accommodation on the island is taken for the summer.

Now the Germans have gone, the Dame of Sark (Mrs. Hathaway, who lives with her American husband in the picturesque Seigneurie, is once more hereditary ruler of the island, presiding over the miniature parliament which meets twice weekly in the local schoolroom.

BARRELS OF EXCITEMENT!

Secretary E. S. Denyes is on the lookout for twelve old, light wooden barrels for the "Lucky" Lott Hell Drivers to smash to bits in one of the hair-raising stunts on the 12 event program "Lucky" Lott Hell Drivers day at the Belleville Fair. This stunt has proven fatal to a number of daredevils, most recently, Tommy Marcus was killed at the Arena in St. Louis while attempting to drive his old jallopy automobile through a stack of blazing waste oil barrels. Along with the blazing barrel crash, these daredevils will attempt to leap an automobile over the top of a Transcontinental bus, roll an automobile over and over, smash solid brick walls, and one daredevil lies on the hood of a car and lets another of his fellow men pilot him through a blazing board wall. Shows are at afternoon and evening on "Lucky" Lott Hell Drivers Day, Sept. 23, at the Belleville Fair.

GETS $5,000 BACK

Chicago, Sept. 13—(AP)—Sol Gertz lost $5,000 in a gutter today but got it back from a "careful" woman.

A clerk at his liquor store who saw Mrs. Clara Ashley pick up something from the street outside the store steered Gertz to her rooming house.

"Did you find my $5,000," Gertz asked.

"I found $5,000," Mrs. Ashley replied calmly, "but how do I know it's yours?"

"Honest, I lost it. Just got it out of the bank—"

"Prove it."

Six Years Ago

Six years ago Sunday September 15th, 1940, was fought one of the great battles of history, the battle in the air over Britain, when the R.A.F. shot down 185 enemy planes in the climax of the defence of Britain to guard herself and the world from German aggression. From that day Hitler's strength ebbed away. His Luftwaffe had tried and failed. The Hun could not dominate the skies of Britain, he could not invade that free land. Heroism of the air defenders and the people in the Battle of Britain is an epic tale to the glory of the spirit of a free people.

This epic date will be marked this year by the unveiling of a new inscription on the Royal Air Force Memorial on London Thames Embankment. Cut near the base of the memorial, it reads:

"This inscription is added in remembrance of those men and women of the air forces of every part of the British Commonwealth and Empire who gave their lives 1939-1945."

Television has been installed in St. George's Memorial Chapel at Biggin Hill, Kent, for a special commemorative service and on Saturday pilots who took part in the Battle of Britain will tell their own stories of their air flights six years ago. Up and down the country R.A.F. stations will be "at home" to the public. Visitors will see much to interest them and will live again those stirring days.

Nearly one hundred and forty years ago Napoleon assembled a great army by the standards of those days, 155,000 men and 2,293 transport vessels mustered for its conveyance for the overthrow of England. That plan went awry. Six years ago an army ten times as great with 98 divisions (including 9 panzer) of the German army in France and the Low Countries was to be drawn upon by Hitler for the task that baffled Napoleon. It had 3,000 self-propelled barges alone with capacity of about 1,000,000 tons, and vessels whose tonnage was four times as great had been raked up.

"It was a terrific gamble, that intended invasion but it might have succeeded," says Stanley H. Nelson. "More than half of the total equipment of the British army had been left in France. There were plenty of troops in Britain but they lacked essential arms and artillery, without which panzer divisions once they landed could not be stopped.

"The great expeditionary force of the enemy never started. Bomber Command played a great part, bombing German barges and ships concentrated on the south side of the English Channel. The port of Le Havre never recovered from that early bombing.

"It was, however, the defeat of the Luftwaffe over England that was the chief cause of the wrecking the whole plan of conquest. That happy band of brothers saved Britain and the cause of civilization by what they did above the harvest fields of Southern England."

The Battle of Britain lasted from the eighth of August to the end of October of 1940. In that time the enemy suffered the loss of 2,375 aircraft with the British losses at 733 aircraft and 375 pilots killed. On the fifteenth of August 181 enemy planes were shot down and on the fifteenth 185. Over one hundred Nazi aircraft were shot down in a single day on five separate occasions during the period of August and September. The enemy had spent the first three weeks of the period trying to smash the R.A.F., but the R.A.F. had three advantages which together counter-balanced the numerical superiority of the Luftwaffe. These were the great superiority of the R.A.F. morale and training, the technical excellence of the Spitfire fighter and radiolocation. As the enemy bombed day after day, their losses mounted and proved quite disproportionate to the damage inflicted. The damage proved too much for the enemy to be borne. The loss of 185 Nazi planes on September 15 led them to abandon the daylight skies to the R.A.F. though their attacks by night grew in intensity.

Well might Prime Minister Churchill exclaim in his now immortal words, "Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few."

The Battle of Britain taught valuable lessons, it saved Britain from invasion and so weakened the German air force in numbers and experience that it was just insufficient to prove decisive in Russia in 1941," says Peter Masefield. "As a result of the Battle of Britain the Allied attack on Europe advanced from strength to strength without falling into any of the pitfalls that beset the Luftwaffe in 1940. In North Africa, over the Mediterranean, over Holland, Belgium, France and Germany itself, the experience gained over the woods and fields in Southern England was turned to good account."

Who can forget those days when the British were successfully defending Britain and permanently sapping the strength of the Luftwaffe and through it the whole German military machine!

The Viscount of Alamein

Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery of Alamein, Chief of the British Imperial Staff, is touring the United States this week as a guest of the United States War Department. We are hosts to one of the great generals of the war. Like him or dislike him, think him a poser or what you will, the record is too clear to deny him his standing as a great tactician. A point that is too often overlooked is that he won two of his greatest victories — both at El Alamein — without the superiority of airpower and gunpower and manpower that the Allies had in the later stages of the war.

Perhaps because he has become such a controversial figure, little public ceremony has been planned for his visit. What entertainment is scheduled is largely by the War Department: visits to military camps, inspections, staff talks in Washington and elsewhere. Because he is essentially a shy man, or so his friends evaluate him, this is probably as he wishes. But it is not the sort of welcome which we are accustomed to give war heroes or which has been extended to others. So far as New York City is concerned, under present plans, Montgomery might as well have visited us incognito.

Montgomery has made only fragmentary answers to his critics. Or, rather, he has attempted to explain the strategy and tactics of only some phases of his military campaigns. He probably does not consider it a defence. The time is not yet, he says, to publish his memoirs, which, presumably, will tell the whole intimate story. Judging him as a general strictly on the basis of the results obtained, no one can deny him his standing. The two El Alameins, Tripoli, the Mareth Line, Normandy, the Seine, Antwerp and the Ardennes have given him a reputation that cannot be more than momentarily tarnished. In the history of the Second World War the name of Viscount Montgomery of Alamein—the title he took when raised to the peerage by King George VI—will rank at or near the top among the generals of the United Nations.

—New York Times.

Nickel History

Back in the eighteenth century the miners of Saxony in their efforts to smelt copper ores had encountered a reactionary element and produced only a worthless alloy, says the Ontario Road Bulletin.

To this ore they gave the name "kupfernickel" after "Old Nick," the devil himself.

But what the Germans scorned as "Old Nick" the Chinese had for centuries exploited commercially, a shiny white metal that they called "Paktong." And in 1851 a German scientist isolated this metal and gave to it the name of nickel.

It is by the benefit of letters that absent friends are, in a manner, brought together. — Seneca.

Originality was the keynote for British newspapers during the blitz as shown by the Coventry paper that had its type set 18 miles away in Birmingham but printed the edition in rubble strewn buildings.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

DISAPPOINTMENT

Once I heard my father say
When it rained on picnic day:
"Disappointment, you will learn,
Comes to every one in turn.
This is part of life, my boy,
Just as much a part as joy.

"Hopes are often unfulfilled.
Little goes as men have willed.
When denied is all you've planned,
This I'd have you understand:
No one always has the sun.
Rain is sent to every one.

"Missing goals you'd hoped to win,
Shrug your shoulders; set your chin.
When your fondest dream is wrecked,
Know 'tis something to expect.
How so greatly you have cared,
For your losses be prepared.

"Life's a blend of good and ill.
Face them both you surely will.
Light of heart be while you may;
Strong of heart when skies are gray.
Never show too much regret
When you've disappointment met."

This Treasure

By Colin Wills in London Calling

(By Colin Wills in London Calling)

The secretary to the Duke of Buccleuch was doing some tidying up the other day in the library, when he found an old leather writing case. In it was a part sheet of forty-eight twopenny stamps.

It is always pleasing to find a stamp, stamps being among those things that are never there when they are wanted; but this time His Grace had even more cause than usual to be pleased, since he promptly sold the eight shillings' worth for 6,000 guineas. You see, they were twopenny blues of 1840, which may not mean much to you, and certainly means nothing to me, but which is enough to give any stamp collector a dangerous temperature.

The mysterious passions of philatelists are always unpredictable to the ordinary man, but even the experts in this particular pursuit are mildly surprised at the enormous popularity among amateur collectors of any German stamps bearing Hitler's head. Surprised, because these stamps are far from rare. 'Their popularity, it seems, comes from the fact that they have 'a high curiosity value, especially among peoples of former German-occupied countries.' I should have thought those folk would have seen quite enough of the Fuehrer's face, but it shows you never can tell.

I wonder how many Hitler stamps are being bought up by collectors whose fancy is other than philatelis—such as those who paid some hundreds of pounds recently for the bust of Hitler from the former German Embassy in London. You never can tell about that, either.

A long-lost treasure of much more widely-and wisely-appreciated value than the Duke of Buccleuch's twopenny stamps turned up in Suffolk during the winter of 1942-1943, but the discovery has only recently been made known. 'Turned up' is literally what it did.

Hoard of Roman Silver 2,000 Years Old

A farmer was ploughing a field near Mildenhall when the ploughshare grated on something metallic. The farmer stopped his plough and examined his find. It was a hoard of Roman silver, 2,000 years old. Not silver coin, but plate —dishes, bowls, cups, and spoons; the household treasure of some Romano-British family.

No doubt the family buried it there, on the edge of the lonely fen, in some time of alarm—perhaps at the news of a coming barbarian raid. No doubt they hoped to retrieve it when the danger had passed—but dangers do not always pass. Only time always passes, and nearly 2,000 years had rolled over the fens before the chance ploughshare unearthed the Roman's hoard.

The antiquity of the objects alone would make them precious but, when they had been cleaned, they were found to be of extraordinary fine quality and great beauty, decorated with sculptured figures in relief, and in almost perfect condition.

It was not far away, in the same county of Suffolk, that one of the most remarkable of all buried treasures was found a few years before the war—the Saxon burial ship discovered at Sutton Hoo, filled with Byzantine silver and Saxon gold, ornamented with garnets.

But anywhere in Britain, at any time, some modern may stumble on a curious relic surviving from the past. And intrinsic value has little to do with the importance of these finds.

A short while ago, at Canterbury, the curator of the Public Library realized a long-deferred ambition and opened a sealed cupboard behind the strongroom in the basement. His ambition had been deferred in a curious way. When he first took over his post, just before the war, the basement was so crammed with books and documents that he could not get at the cupboard to open it. Then he went to the war; the basement was cleared, but only to be refilled with art treasures stored there for safety from bombing.

At last these were removed; the curator got to the cupboard, forced it open, and found a vast mass of ancient archives of the city, ranging from law reports of cases tried in Canterbury 600 years ago down to documents about the first railways built in Kent about 1830.

For many years, antiquarians had been puzzled that such an historic city as Canterbury had so relatively small a library of records. The lost key to the mystery was simply the lost key to the cupboard.

Another treasure hunt is going on in Shropshire, at the 1,200-year-old Much Wenlock Abbey. Somewhere under the Abbey ruins, the antiquarians believe, lies the treasures of the monks, buried there centuries ago.

Ordinary searches failed, and a diviner was called in—a lady named Miss Doreen James, who hails from Birmingham and usually seeks to divine the presence of water for folk who want to sink wells.

She claims that the supple twig she holds will also respond to the presence of buried metal, and during her two hours' exploration of the abbey the twig several times moved violently. So far, her findings have not been confirmed, but in this Treasure Island you never can tell.

Stolen Wood Given Reason for Fleeing

Peterboro, Sept. 14—(CP)—An 80-mile-an-hour chase through city streets and for more than 5 miles along highway 28 ended yesterday when Constable Clare McGillen and Sergeant John Naples arrested Felix Laroach, Peterboro. Several shots were fired in the chase.

In court Friday, Laroach was charged with dangerous driving and attempting to escape police and was remanded until Sept. 18.

The chase started when the officers spotted a car without proper lights. Finally, when the driver was stopped, police said he told them he had stolen a few sticks of wood and did not want to be arrested.

Capital Closeups

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 14—(CP)—One day soon a little old lady will come slowly out of the grey, stolid county court house with her stoop and with her cane and will walk slowly up Nicholas Street and return no more to the court house, except possibly to see how things are getting along without her.

Miss Minnie Sager will no longer be the official court reporter for the county of Carleton. After 26 years and many trials, including three murder trials but no sex trials — from the start she would take no sex trials — and after being probably the first and one of the few Canadian women to be a county's court reporter, she will be through.

She will be through after one last strange experiment by circumstance.

It was only after you got to know Miss Sager that you realized how strange it was that in her last days of court reporting she should have to do with Canada's spy trials. Not merely because she was old but because she lived in another world where this should never happen and could never happen.

For Miss Sager comes of that seemingly distant world when men built homes to last 100 years, when there were Grits and Tories and nothing else, when Loyalist blood was proud blood and heeded blood.

Not in three murder trials and in all the spy trials has she found anything to usurp as her greatest story that of her great grandfather who quit his Massachusetts farm and fought the Revolutionaries "over there" — nodding towards the United States — and nearly starved to death at the hands of his Yankee captors.

From that man and from his Loyalist blood stem all her basic thoughts.

She still thinks William Lyon Mackenzie was wrong in 1837, essentially because he sullied the inviolability of the Union Jack. She still thinks the greatest peril in international affairs is the danger of union with the United States — "If that ever came to pass I'd go overseas or I'd jump in the canal." She still likes to remember her mother telling her that Queen Victoria was her mother, too, and for her never to forget it.

So, being all of this and out of all of this, she found it hard to understand someone like Mary Kathleen Willsher, the little London woman who became deputy registrar in the office of the British High Commissioner to Canada and admitted in court that she gave away confidential information off and on for 10 years.

"I couldn't understand," she said, "a woman who was British-born and educated in one of their best universities and living in the very atmosphere of British loyalties, I couldn't understand what she did. It's beyond me. I couldn't understand it."

She lived in a world of standard orthodoxies and paternal loyalties, of Union Jacks and Yankee perils.

You asked her how it was going to be to leave the courthouse after 26 years and she admitted that she was afraid that life might seem pretty empty.

But she had plans. "First I'm going down to Peterboro to see my niece married," she said. "Then I'll be coming down to see some more of these spy trials. And I'll be free-lancing as a reporter. If they ever need me for some more reporting they know where they can get me."

At the time the Germans spilled into France around the Maginot line a newsphotograph was published in the papers that I still see in mind whenever I think of those sad days—a French woman and her child dead beside the road—a picture of the awful brutality of war.

Then not very long afterward another news picture was published in the papers—showing the last parade of the flag as the French evacuated Paris—and the people standing there with tears streaming down their faces. I think of that picture whenever I hear "The Last Time I Saw Paris".

Browsing in the bookstore the other day I came upon an item I'd hate to have missed. It is a book by Page Cooper, entitled NAVY NURSE.

The author, Page Cooper, is so modest that it is difficult to make sure she wrote the book. Her name appears just once, but it is not mentioned in the foreword by Admiral McIntyre nor in the preface by Capt. Sue Dauser, commander of the Navy Nurse Corps, whose picture appears in the frontpiece.

Nurse Cooper's story of the nurses' part in the war begins at Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, 1941, and ends at Oak Knoll, California, where plastic surgery is reconstructing so many of the wounded.

On P. 168 of Navy Nurse is a photograph of the first Navy flight nurse to set foot on any battlefield. She flew in over Iwo Jima while the battle for the island was still in progress and evacuated wounded marines. In the photograph the nurse is leaning over a marine she has just bandaged, while three other marines with wounds, men showing the strain and fatigue of battle, sit waiting their turn. If ever I saw anything beautiful, there she is.

That navy nurse at work on Iwo Jima makes still another picture which I'll see in mind whenever I think of nurses in the war. It is a picture that should be hung alongside of the picture of Florence Nightingale.

As a picture it seems overexposed or something—I do not know the technique of photography—but for the great story it tells this picture should inspire thousands of girls who may have in them what it takes to become a nurse.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

INSANITY IN FAMILY

It is wise for the offspring of a family in which there is insanity to have children? (Mrs. C.J.)

Answer—If you ever find a human being in whose family thre is no insanity, no cancer, no tuberculosis etc. be sure to tell some physician about it. It would be an extraordinary case. The question of fitness for marriage should be answered for the prospective husband and wife by a physician who knows one or both families.

NO GHOST

you write and our family owes a great deal to the understanding I agree with most everything of health and hygiene questions we have acquired from your column, albiet some doctors here declare you died long ago and that your name is now used by a syndicate. (M.H.)

Answer— Thank you. If you can nail down any one who says that, I'd like to bet him any amount he cares to bet—proceeds to go to any local charity you may select—that this column is still written and conducted by the original Dr. William Brady. Anyway I can line up a score or two of witnesses who will testify that I am no ghost when I throw my weight about the bowling green.

GLANDULAR OBESITY

I'd like to have your suggestions on reducing. I believe my extra poundage comes from glandular trouble. ..(J.W.A.) ..

Does lightning really zigzag?

The sharp zigzags in the path of lightning, often represented in conventional drawings, are purely imaginary.

Lightning curves, twists, meanders and branches like the limbs of a tree or the tributaries of a river, but it does not turn in acute angles or travel in a zigzag combination of straight lines.

In 1856 James Nasmyth, a Scottish engineer and the son of a landscape painter, called this fact to the attention of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. After making observations over a period of years and comparing notes with his artist father the engineer concluded that the zigzags of lightning existed only in the imagination of artists. His opinion has been confirmed by photography and accepted generally by science.

An occasional sharp angle in a photograph of lightning is believed to be due merely to improper perspective.

Nasmyth suggested that probably the zigzag conception of the path of lightning originated with the ancient Greek sculptors who so represented the thunderbolt in the hands of Jove. Joseph Turner (1775-1851) a noted English landscape painter who preceded Nasmyth, had correctly observed the path taken by lightning and in some of his pictures it is scratched with a penknife in short surved dashes.

Do birds sleep with the head under the wing?

Contrary to a common notion, birds rarely if ever sleep with the head under either wing. Many species do, however, place the bill among the feathers between the body proper and the butt of the wing while sleeping and this posture gives the casual observer the impression that the head is under the wing. The shoulder feathers under which birds often put their heads are known to ornithologists as "scapulars." For some unknown reason birds that sleep in this posture generally turn the head to the left.

In "Two Years Before the Mast" Richard H. Dana describes an albatross "asleep upon the waves, with his head under his wing." It is very doubtful whether any bird, wild or domestic, ever sleeps in that fashion and the author probably was guilty of careless observation. Unfortunately many people received their knowledge of the sleeping habits of birds from the old nursery rhyme, which says:

The north wind doth blow,
And we shall have snow;
What will the robin do then, poor thing?
He'll go to the barn
And keep himself warm,
And put his head under his wing, poor thing.

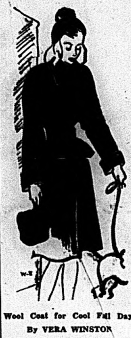
V.O.N. News

Safeguarding the health of children by immunizing them against contagious diseases, which years ago, caused innumerable deaths in a community, is the constant advice of health authorities. In this district the advice takes a practical form as each year toxoid clinics are held at the Kiwanis Community Centre for pre-school age children.

The clinics begin this year on Sept. 26th., with Dr. G. S. Cronk, Medical Officer of Health, in charge and will be held at four o'clock in the afternoon when both toxoids will be administered.

Another part of the health program for children which the Victorian Order of Nurses sponsors is the Dental Clinics, the first of which will also be held on Sept. 26th., at three o'clock in the afternoon. For some years Dr. Jack Marshall has been in charge of these dental clinics and he will be in attendance at the clinic as in former years.

Early Autumn Coat



Wool Coat for Cool Fall Days

By VERA WINSTON

THE DRESS that looks like a coat and the coat that looks like a suit turns up almost every season. Culled from the latter group is this attractive design, a smart coat for early Autumn wear. Made of black wool, it has the high closing and the neat club collar that mark so many of the newest designs. Snugly belted to show off a slim waistline, it uses a flared peplum that extends from the back to either side to give a suit look. Easy sleeves and the perennially popular turned-back cuff complete a wearable coat, that is different from run-of-the-mill general wear designs, yet not too radically different to be extreme.

The Maynooth "Community Mixed"

By TOMMY STUART

In Canadian National Magazine

It's always a nice feeling to get off a big mainline train, jammed to the vestibules, and get on a nice little mixed train. For a guy in a high-pressure job, getting on 'the mix' means that you're getting close to hunting country—even if you've just come 100 miles in a couple of hours and are going to need eight hours to go the next 100 —to Maynooth.

From Toronto, there are two ways of getting to Bancroft, before you go on to Maynooth, and both of them require rides on old branchlines. Heading east from Toronto, on No. 14, the International Limited, to Montreal, you get off at Trenton Junction. Last time I went up that way, the conductor said if he were to be late, he'd wire Trenton and hold 'the mix' for me. I said thanks, but there likely won't be any need to hold it. It's Friday, and that means 'the mix' has got an extra big train. Why? Well, it's got to go right through to Maynooth tonight.

You get into Trenton on time and climb down a flight of steps to wait for No. 315. You can hear it coming up through the town, out to the mainline, blowing for crossings. It comes on through the station, the engine going away around a bend out of sight before the coach-express combination pulls up. You've counted 24 cars, all loaded.

• • •

Rob Simpson, the rear-end brakeman and expressman, is leaning out the door flagging the engine. "Hallo, there!" he greets a former passenger. Five passengers climb aboard while express is loaded. There is the nice sound of something frying as the passengers pick their seats.

The Trenton-Maynooth line, with another line down to Picton, is the old Central Ontario Railroad, which was later taken over by the Canadian Northern and then absorbed by the present Canadian National System.

Last time I was up, the conductor was Ernie Barr, a Belleville man who was pinch-hitting for the regular conductor who booked sick that morning. Barr joined the Grand Trunk in 1918. He hadn't been up the Central Ontario as often as this passenger. Bob Simpson joined in 1910 just about the time the Northern was taking over the Central Ontario. He was out on the mainline a few years ago, but prefers the old Central Ontario.

Irving 'Greg' Gregson, brakeman, is another Trenton man who hired on with the Canadian Northern in 1920, and the Bancroft and Maynooth run is still his favorite. The engineer, the last time I was up, was Ed. Hardy, of Trenton. He's been running out of here for quite a while now, but not always on the Bancroft run. He gets his firemen from Belleville.

The run nowadays is primarily freight, because the line drives straight north, skirting towns, sometimes by two and three miles. The first stop north of Trenton on the passenger schedule is Frankford. It's only about six miles—but it takes about an hour and a half. The reason? Glen Miller station wants freight, and the engine runs in with three or four cars to spot them. It's about five miles in there off the line. There is another cutoff, at Batawa, to take some cars into the shoe plant. Then, there's express and wayfreight to load and unload at Frankford station, and a couple of passengers get off.

That frying sound you heard is Simpson getting lunch ready for the rear-end crew. Barr, the conductor, doesn't know about lunch arrangements for the passengers, so you ask Simpson. "Bob, that woman at Bannockburn still put up lunches? "Yes, how many you need?" So we take a census of passengers going to be on the train long enough to get hungry.

At Frankford, Bob calls to the agent as the train pulls out: "Tell Bannockburn four lunches for No. 315."

At Bannockburn, 45 miles up the line, the train drops just a little way-freight, and the passengers hustle into what used to be the waiting room. There are lunches on trays. You take them on the train: the crew drops off the dirty dishes coming down, the next day.

• • •

After several stops up the line, the engine cuts off at Marmora, to run into the town, three miles away, or to spot some cars at Deloro, a silver and cobalt refinery, about five miles from the station. It gives a passenger a chance to chat with Guy Winters, the Marmora agent, and discover that Marmora station produces about $300,000 revenue annually. Guy, incidentally, comes of an old railroading family and one of his prized possessions was a picture of the first train to arrive in Sutton. His wife's uncle was in the picture, assisting in the welcome.

Next time you get a chance to talk to an agent is at Gilmour, a country town supplying a farming district, 15 miles further along. Mort Baker, the agent, tells you he's been right there 33 years.

Somewhere about 8.00 p.m., the crew will be getting hungry. We are now about Bancroft, just 100 miles from Trenton. There's a lot of work in Bancroft, and the crew have another two, or three hours' work before they hit Maynooth, 16 miles away, at the railend,—the one trip a week past Bancroft. So at Detlor, the engine cuts off and comes back down a siding to stop alongside the express-coach. The club bags of food are broken open and the whole crew is fortified for the remainder of the trip. So, on to Bancroft!

It's at Bancroft where a passenger can learn how to turn a locomotive around by hand, in addition to learning more about how important these little, back-country railways are. Bancroft is one terminus of the old I.B. and O., sometimes called the I.B. and Slow. The I. stands for Irondale and the O. for Ottawa, though the road never got built that far.

The I.B. and O., was a little private lumbering road when the Canadian Northern had ideas of operating into Ottawa The Northern had no right in the Capital, but the building of the lumber road envisioned the shipping of timber right into Ottawa, so the charter read that way. Mackenzie and Mann laid down the cash, bought the I.B. and O., and secured the right to operate into Ottawa.

Long before this, the Grand Trunk had taken over the Midland Railway, with its spurs into the timber country around Kinmount and Haliburton. There's a switch now at Howland, just outside Kinmount, connecting the I.B. and O., with the Lindsay Haliburton line.

To a passenger who's checked his dog with Floyd Thomas, the agent at Bancroft, there is quite a difference in the I.B. and O. train from the Trenton Maynooth drag. First of all, there is a full coach, with an express-baggage car ahead of it; then, ahead of that, leaving Bancroft, are just a couple of freight cars, not 24. The schedule calls for leaving Bancroft 8.30 a.m., three days a week, arriving at Howland about 1.00 p.m. It's a distance of 51 miles.

• • •

The crew on the I.B. and O., come from Bancroft, and they operate this train by choice. The three days a week there's no I.B. and O., operation; they do way freight and yard engine work, up to Wallace, in Algonquin Park, or down the Central Ontario a little way.

Russell Jenkins, the conductor, replaced Clarence Smith, who, in May last, was made conductor on the Central replacing the late Fred Barry, the regular conductor who joined the Central Ontario in 1902.

Mr. Smith moved from the Central Ontario to the I.B. and O., run a few years ago, when the Central crews were cut to one. Clarence, as a boy, in Trenton, was running parcels for the old Canadian Express, in 1904, and joined the C.O.R. in 1906.

"Chad" Stoughton and Bob Ferguson, the brakemen, are just about brothers in service. Bob joined the Canadian National, at Belleville, in 1927, and Chad hired on at the same place, the next year. Chad knew the country from his lumbering operations earlier, and settled down in Bancroft as soon as the I.B. and O., run was his. Ferguson is one of the leaders in the Bancroft Branch of the Canadian Legion.

George Cherry, the engineer, is a veteran of more than 20 years with the Canadian National, operating out of Belleville, until early in 1945. He has seniority enough to hold the I.B. and O., run, and moved with his wife to Bancroft. Jim Walton, his fireman, is another Bancroft man.

This crew has an extra man—a train agent. For some years now, the I.B. and O., has operated with caretakers in the stations along the way, connected with Bancroft and Kinmount by telephone. Over this phone they can order cars for sawmills in their neighborhood, and the odd car for livestock. However, the business arrangements for these, as well as express and wayfreight, are all handled by Frank Sprung, the travelling agent.

As the train goes along, shippers bring their cans of cream, bags of potatoes, or what have you, down to the station on train day. Frank makes out the bills and collects accounts in places with names old-timers know—Baptiste, Highland Grove, Tory Hill, and other historic designations. The engine crew, of course, does all the switching and shunting needed at each siding.

By the time you get to Gooderham, its about 11.40 a.m. The engine needs some water and the passengers are hungry. The coach pulls up to the station and everybody gets out, everybody except the engine crew. They back the train down, uncouple the engine and give it a drink through a sort of Rube Goldberg device that siphons water out of a river. I suspect that the system takes almost as much steam as they get water, but it work eventually.

The engine crew eat with their charge. In the station, meanwhile, passengers are seated at one table, while another is reserved for the conductor, perhaps one or two of the crew, and a favored passenger. Then the conductor calls "All aboard", and you go on through a few more stops to Howland.

Howland is just 53 miles from Bancroft and is just a switch out in the middle of nowhere, with a station and turntable in the angle. The caretaker's house is across the way a bit, with signs saying "Canadian National Telegraphs and Cables". Howland is the place where the I.B. and O., train meets the train up from Lindsay, and the last time I was over it, I was disappointed. They weren't going to turn the engine round. The system used to be that the trains went through, although both engines were turned around by hand, with assistance of able-bodied passengers welcome. Now, the Bancroft crew just take over the new train and run it back to Bancroft, while the crew from Lindsay pick up the I.B. and O., train and haul it to Lindsay.

• • •

In the Fall and Winter, most of the I.B. and O., business is freight; but in the Summer, even without gasoline rationing, there is plenty of passenger business. The conductor often drops 40 to 50 people at each of several stations east of Gooderham. Baptiste Lake is fast developing as a Summer resort, and a new hotel being built there won't hurt the I.B. and O., at all.

Communities are small in the territory served by the old Central Ontario and the I.B. and O., but the trains are important to those communities. In turn, the feeder business, all added up, make a real contribution to the whole Canadian National System and to Canada, at large.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

This Girl is Involved With a Married Man

It is hard to understand how a girl of 23 can be sincerely puzzled about whether or not she should give up a married man who obviously intends to give up nothing for her. Yet, here is the astonishing story of a girl who has been carrying on an affair with such a man since she was 14.

Here is what she says:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I have been going with a married man for 9 years. I started going with him when I was 14. He is 10 or 12 years older than I am. I have never really gone out with anybody else but him, because he never wanted me to. I like him a lot, he is so good to me. He gave me a car and has also given me a big diamond ring, and gets me anything in the world I want.

"For the last 3 or 4 years I have been after him to get his divorce, but he always has some excuse. He has a nice wife and 3 children and is living with them. He told me it was because of the children and that he didn't like his wife, but people who know them say that he is good to her and gets her everything she wants and denies seeing me to her.

"I met a boy some time ago and have been out with him several times. I like this boy. He is nearer my own age and all that. Now he wants to buy me a ring. What should I do? Should I tell him about this married man? My parents are against my going with the married man and have tried everything to break it up. I have to slip out to see him all the time. I have to give one of them up and I can't decide which one.

"G. D. M."

For a girl to say that she can't decide whether to continue an illicit affair, or to break it off and accept the friendship of an apparently respectable boy whose intentions seem honorable, makes about as much sense as if she said that she had a choice between eating a good apple or a rotten one and didn't know which to choose. There certainly can be no doubt in this girl's mind that she is doing the wrong thing, but she has evidently been so dazzled by the expensive gifts this faithless husband has given her, that she has been willing, not only to ruin herself, but to help him betray his wife.

If she is lucky enough, after carrying on this disgraceful affair for years, to have a decent boy want to go out with her, I should think she would be glad and thankful, but, probably, this boy is not in a position to offer her the presents she is accustomed to receiving. If he were wealthy, I am sure she would lose no time getting away from the married man and taking on the boy who seems to want to marry her.

Nothing good is going to come married friend, G.D.M. Any man who would take advantage of a 14-year-old girl, as this man did with you, is a very low character indeed. Any man who would double-cross his wife, in the way he has been doing for years, is not likely to give you of your relationship with your any better deal than he has given her. The sooner you pull yourself together and decide to see no more of him, the better off you will be.

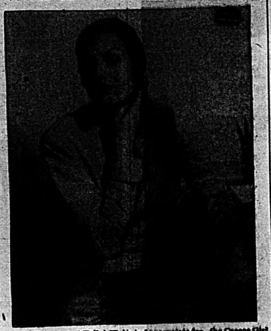
What to Wear and When!



A Faint Fragrance of Toilet Water is Appropriate for the Career Girl

By HELEN FOLLETT

GOOD APPEARANCE is a must with the career girl. How she looks, of course, depends upon what she believes is good appearance. Her ideas on that subject may be a bit sketchy, not according to sartorial Hoyle.

If she is the fluffy type, loves sloppy hats, long bobs and silly shoes, she will have to do a turnabout. She must not only be capable and efficient, but she should look the part. The baby-doll type does not make a hit.

Trim and Neat

Clothes should be trim and neat, never fussy. Hair should be smartly arranged, the style not too youthful. A faint fragrance of subduel toilet water will go well with her appareance.

It won't do to go the limit with make-up. The lipstick has become an institution, is accepted. But bright, red-blooming cheeks, mascared lashes and even the faintest eye shadows are too much.

The caller at the office, seeing a bedizened young lady at the information desk or telephone, is likely to wonder why the boss employs a woman who "looks like that." She does not belong to the business scene because she looks light-headed, anything but business-like.

There's a vast difference between complexion artifice and lithographic effects.

For the office work during this season of the year there's no outfit smarter than the tailleur worn with a chic little blouse. Blouses may mean that time must be spent in the evenings laundering them but they're cool and sweet, always becoming. The shops offer charming models.

Clothes do proclaim the woman, no doubt about that. They tell the world whether or not she has good sense and good taste. One should not only know what to wear but how and when to wear it.

The fastidious woman will never display conspicuous dry goods. Those who do it to attract attention.

Fat Legs and Spindle Shanks

Until the day comes—and heaven forbid!—when Madame Fashion orders us to trail around in long skirts all the day long, leg shows will continue on every street and boulevard. That feminine underpinnings come in infinite variety is apparent to any observing eye.

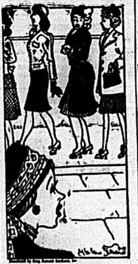
There are thick and thin ones, long and short ones, those that are bowed, those that are knock-kneed. What is to be done about them? Instructors of physical education claims that contour can be changed, that pitno legs can be trimmed down, spindle shanks made plumper. That is, if the supplicant for remodeling is in good health, willing to undergo a muscle workout each day.

Strangely enough, the same exercises that annihiliate fat cells will do good by the skinny lassie because they strengthen and fill out the muscles.

Try this one it's fun! Stand tall, hand extended to the sides at shoulder height, feet ten inches apart. Lower the body until the buttacks rest on the heels. No fair touching the floor with your fingers. Up on the ttoes, down again, up again. Take it slowly. Oh, yes, my child, you'll probably take a tumble or two, but what's that in the great and glorious cause of beauty? Nothing at all.

If you are a woman of great patience, you can massage large ankles and fatted calves with gratifying results. You'll have to literally squeeze, pummel and break down stored pads of adipose upholstery. Give feet and legs a warm bath, using a heavy brush to stimulate the blood streams, bring a glow. Rinse, dry with a coarse towel.

Anoint the hands with a heavy massage emollient. Cold cream won't do; fingers can't get a firm hold. Stroke the flesh firmly from the toes up to the knees, as if you were smoothing on tight gloves. Use plenty of pressure. You're going to send fat cells away with the circulation.



Feminine underpinnings come in Infinite Variety

Clasp your hands around an ankle and wring it. Send the fingers of one hand to the left, fingers of the other hand to the right, as you do when you wring clothes out of the washtub. Repeat this movement up to the knee, spending a little extra time where the calves are fullest.

Grasp the flesh at the back of the leg and pinch it. Roll it between your fingers. This movement will crush adipose tissues.

Don't expect a change in a hurry. Before beginning, take careful measurements of ankles and calves. That's the only way you can tall whether or not you are making progress.

If you can spare ten minutes night and morning on the business of leg molding, and continue this routine for two months, there's a grand chance that plump legs will be on their way to normalcy

What's for Supper

What is there for supper? That question is asked by members of the family probably more often than any other. When the homemaker has a collection of attractive and popular supper dishes to draw on, this question need not call forth a monotonous reply.

Many homemakers dislike experimenting with new dishes. However, using tested recipes eliminates the chance of cooking failures. Failures are something no one likes to risk these days with food still so precious.

The home economists of the Dominion Department of Agriculture's Consumer Section, are constantly testing recipes to help keep homemakers supplied with attractive new ideas. With the markets still showing a wide selection of vegetables, the recipes they offer today take advantage of this variety.

The following recipes for supper dishes are built around plentiful vegetables available now. They make attractive, colorful and inexpensive main courses. The "Corn Moulds" may be made long after fresh corn is just a pleasant memory, since it is equally good with canned corn.

The baked "Stuffed Cucumbers" may be varied with different fillings, such as creamed meat or vegetables.

CORN MOULDS

2 cups corn cut from the cob (cooked or uncooked) or drained canned corn
2 1-2 tablespoons fat
4 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
1 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons chopped onions
1-4 cup chopped green or sweet red pepper
2 eggs

If corn is uncooked, parboil in boiling salted water 5 minutes. Melt fat, add flour, salt and pepper. Gradually add milk and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and add onions, chopped pepper, corn and slightly beaten eggs. Mix well together.. Pour into greased custard cups, set in a pan of hot water and oven poach in a moderate oven, 350 degrees F., until set, about 10 minutes. Six servings.

STUFFED CUCUMBERS

8 medium cucumbers
1 cup sausage meat
1-3 cup finely chopped celery leaves
3 tablespoons chopped onion
3-4 teaspoon salt
1-2 teaspoon sage
1 cup soft stale bread crumbs

Cut cucumbers in half lengthwise, remove seeds and soft portion with a spoon. Cook in salted boiling water for 5 minutes. Drain well. Cook sausage meat, add seasonings and crumbs and mix well together. Pile stuffing in cucumber shells. Place in a greased baking dish and bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees F., for 25 minutes, or until cucumbers are tender. Six servings.

EGGPLANT PATTIES

1 large eggplant
1 egg, slightly beaten
1-2 cup chopped onion
1-2 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
1-2 teaspoon sage
1-2 teaspoon savoury
1-4 cup flour
2 tablespoons bacon or sausage drippings

Slice, peel and dice eggplant in small pieces. Cook in slightly salted boiling water, until tender. Drain and cool slightly. Place in mixing bowl, mash slightly and add egg, onion and seasonings. Sift in the flour and blend thoroughly. Melt drippings in frying pan, drop eggplant mixture in by spoonfuls. Brown patties on both sides. Serve at once with strips of bacon or sausage, corn on the cob or a tossed salad. Makes about 12 medium patties.

GOOD MANNERS

Notes to Thank For Messages of Sympathy

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My mother has just died after a long illness and friends have been most kind in sending flowers for the funeral, and notes of sympathy. Will you please be so kind as to suggest several kinds of notes suitable to thank for these kindnesses?

P. N.

To thank for flowers, this note would be appropriate:

Dear Mary,

We appreciated so much your warm words of understanding and sympathy, and we thank you for the beautiful memorial roses you sent for Mother's funeral. Your dear understanding and your abiding friendship and kindness have been a great comfort to us, and we are deeply grateful.

Affectionately,

Or—

Dear Mrs. Adams,

Our family deeply appreciates your kind message of sympathy and we thank you for the lovely lilies that brought your message of remembrance.

Sincerely yours,

Or: for a message of sympathy

Dear Mrs. Foster,

Thank you for your kind message of sympathy. Your friendly words of understanding were a great comfort to all of us.

Sincerely,

Thank-you Notes for Presents for the Baby

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter is a month old, and as yet I have not sent out the thank-you notes I should write to acknowledge gifts received for her. Will you please give me some general suggestions for these, and a sample or two of what should be written?

J. M.

Here is a good basic recipe for this kind of note: thank for the thought that prompted the sending of the gift; then, mentioning the gift specificially (not saying only "your gift"), comment enthusiastically about its attractive and useful features. Perhaps something like this:

Dear Emily,

How kind you were, and how generous, to send such a lovely gift to my baby! The beautiful pink sacque is a delight to her, a snuggy comfort, and I'm sure she already knows how becoming it is to her. As I am writing to thank you, my Joan is wearing your wonderful gift, and is waving her little fist as if trying to thank you too.

I do hope that you and Jo are coming this way soon so that you can come to "meat" this new member of our family.

Dearest love and appreciation to you both from Bob and me . . . and from our new daughter.

Affectionately,

BABY SUFFERED WITH ECZEMA

Wild Post-Bout Melee Seen After Whipper Watson Defeats Krippler Davis at the Arena

Referee Attacked by Davis and Crowd Joins in the Proceedings

Police, spectators and wrestlers piled into the ring in one of the wildest post-bout melees ever witnessed here following Whipper Billy Watson's third-fall victory over Karl Krippler Davis at the Hume Arena Friday night.

It happened after Watson had "whipped" the Krippler into submission in the third fall after losing the first and taking the second, and the Krippler promptly attacked Toar Morgan, 236-pound wrestler who had been brought here in a special referee role.

Previous to his attack on the official, Davis stood in the ring while a yelling, shrieking crowd milled around outside. Came a swing to the Morgan jaw, and the post-bout series was on. The two swung at each other for a few seconds then irate spectators piled into the ring to get at Davis. Mike Sharpe, and Jim Dobie and other wrestlers raced in to separate the contestants and then police joined the fray.

The crowd battled around the ringside with women and girls and men and boys screaming their approval of the attack on Davis. It was quite some time before the police restored order and the wrestlers escorted to the dressing rooms.

A Capacity House

The card on the whole was one of the best seen in years and it attracted a capacity house. Over two thousand excited spectators yelled and screamed delight or disapproval as three bouts provided some of the fastest, most interesting action seen here in some time.

The main bout between Watson and Davis gave the faithful exactly what it wanted, and there was not a dull moment from the time the two contestants entered the ring until the bedlam had subsided.

Davis expressed his disgust of Morgan and Watson in no uncertain manner before the bell rang for the opening fall of the no-time-limit bout. He refused to accede to Referee Morgan's requests and the official had to threaten him with a fast count before he finally went to his official corner.

Hands Out Punishment

Davis handed out some stiff punishment to the British Empire champion in the first fall despite Watson's agility and brilliant footwork. The "Krip" used all his bag of tricks in an effort to subdue the "Whip" in that first eight minutes and he finally fell on him for the count after the two had slugged it out for a few seconds and Davis had slammed the champ to the mat.

Watson came out fighting in the second fall and it lasted about 9 minutes. He was given the "eye" treatment and other unorthodox methods of punishment but Referee Toar Morgan stood for no nonsense and on several occasions resorted to rough methods to pry the "Krip" loose from the champion's hair or to make him behave himself as a wrestler in the ring. His "quick count" method had remarkable effect on the erring "Krippler". Watson took the aggressive early in the second fall and had the Krippler in a bad way with his elbow smashes and punishing armlocks. Finally he brought his famous "whip" into play and pinned the foe while the crowd roared and stamped its approval.

Third Fall Brief

The third fall was as brief as the first two and was a practical repetition of the second tiff. The Krippler "cobra'd" the champion several times and on occasions appeared to have him a trifle groggy. Watson's remarkable ability at recovery stood him in good stead and after being booted out of the ring two or three times, his temper flared and he tore into Davis like a wild-cat at a sick rabbit. He finally softened the "Krippler" with a series of savage flying tackles and then fell on him for the fall and victory. And then the ring pyrotechnics started.

The villainous Lee Henning, fully recovered from the neck injury suffered at the hands of Toar Morgan a few weeks ago, took on capable Jim Dobie, a newcomer to Belleville fans in the semi-go and it was easy to see he has forgotten none of his bag of villain's tricks. He won the semi-final bout after twenty-one minutes of milling, but the decision was far from popular.

A Fast Bout

One of the cleanest, most scientific bouts seen here in many a pachydermic moon was the preliminary between handsome Mike Sharpe and dashing Pat Flanagan. Both these men are favorites with the fans here and they lost none of their popularity with their display Friday night. The bout was fast, aggressive and full of action from gong to gong. Both lads held the whip-hand on numerous occasions, but nimble footwork, agility and their knowledge of the various holds stood both in good stead. There was not a dull moment in the bout and both wrestlers received a fine ovation as they shook hands at the expiration of the time limit and Referee Cliff Fox held high their hands in token of a draw. The management can bring this pair back any time.

Prior to the main bout, Lee Henning formally challenged Toar Morgan in the ring, and from what happened a few weeks ago, if the challenge is accepted as no doubt it will be, the bout should be a rousing one, for there is no love lost between them.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 14 (CP)—Somebody once tabbed Jockey Gordon Richards as "God's gift to backers," and the first persons to agree with the description are the unfortunate bookies.

Richards, one of the great jockeys of the world, is past 40 but he's still astride winning mounts with an almost uncanny regularity. The "wise" boys search for his name in racing programs, bet their shillings in the firm belief their returns will be in pound notes.

Gordon, who has passed the 1,000 mark in winners in 20 years of riding, just keeps rolling along. A London sports writer kept a check on the "old timer" in the first half of August and came up with a tally of 29 winners in 58 mounts.

The same sports writer has hounded Richards for the secret of his success and each time Gordon has refused point-blank.

"But I really knew the answer before I put the question," the writer said. "So do we all. Here's a horse and there's the winning post. Put one past the other in front as soon as possible."

It's all very elementary, but it takes a Gordon Richards to show how easy it can be done.

There may be many easier ways of earning a living, but £1 ($4) a minute seems attractive enough, whatever the method. The catch in this "easy money" racket, however, is to act as sparring partner to Bruce "Woodcock, British heavyweight boxing champion whose punch couldn't be called a powder puff.

Woodcock, preparing for his Sept. 17 meeting in London with Gus Lesnevich, finds he can well afford to pay that amount just to take a few socks at some unlucky pugilist. He has been touring the Continent and at Stockholm 13,000 persons paid to watch the former railroader ride roughshod over his $4-a-minute victims in three-round exhibitions of three minutes sometimes—each.

The gate receipts in Sweden prompted Bruce to extend his sparring tour to Denmark.

The obvious crack is to say Charlie Briggs is a handy man to have around.

Charlie, who can throw the 27-inch-round football just as easy as if it were a cricket ball or baseball, is goalkeeper for Clyde football club in the Scottish league.

But the biggest hands in Scottish football are a handicap to him in his spare-time job. He's a barber.

SLASHED FOR WRONG MAN

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 13—(AP) — James Alston, 32, was slashed three times in the head and neck last night — by mistake. Alston told police an assailant in front of his home whipped out a knife, and cut him in the scalp, eye and neck. The man then took a closer look, Alston said, and said "I'm sorry. You're the wrong man." The assailant fled, and Alston went to hospital where the cuts were stitched.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

It seems unfortunate, or a stray glance of that gal, Lady Luck, that both junior aspirants for Ontario baseball and softball titles are scheduled to play home games here next Wednesday. Kiwanis Juniors meet Ottawa Wrightvilles here at 8 o'clock and the Goodman Softball Juniors tangle with a Toronto team at the Fair Grounds at 5.45.

• • •

But it cannot be helped—and all angles of the situation have been studied. What looked like a break for the softball squad came yesterday morning when the OASA secretary announced that the game scheduled for Toronto today for Goodmans had been laid over until next week. But—the Wednesday date still stood as scheduled.

• • •

Both teams have good followings and the lads would have attracted record gates if their dates had not fallen on the same day. However, nothing can be done about it and both squads are taking the unfortunate break in their stride.

• • •

The baseball tidbit for local fans this afternoon is that Port Hope-Batawa tilt scheduled for the Shoemen's diamond at 3 o'clock. The Bata squad defeated Port Hope in a thriller the other night by a 2-1 score right in Tommy Pointer's backyard—and they tell me it was one of those you seldom see but sometimes read about. Port Hope will definitely be out to even the series while "Smoky" Smith and his sole-making buddies will be equally determined to take the Lakeshore crew in two straight.

• • •

Manager Bill Easton will likely start "Smoky" at the foe in an effort to end the series agony. The thirty-one year old southpaw still throws a wicked smoke-ball as many city league teams have discovered to their dismay. And behind that smoke ball is a wealth of flinging experience.

• • •

You may not know it, but "Smoky" was born with the moniker "Devert" tacked in front of the "Smith". He played three years with the Canadian-American pro league, two with Rome and one with Oswego, N.Y. It was during this part of his pitching life that he flung three innings against the Pittsburg Pirates in an exhibition tilt and struck out besides other major league sluggers, the great Paul Waner.

• • •

"Smoky" played for Collingwood and last year for Thornbury. Then he switched his affections to Batawa and you know the rest. He is one of the best fielding pitchers in these parts and is no slouch with the war-club. Besides that he is coach of the Batawa club and teams up with Manager Bill Easton in the general supervision of the Shoemen.

With that Joe Louis-Tami Mauriello fight — pardon — workout coming up on September 18 — and with the ballyhoo boys strangely quiet (oops $33) Jack Dempsey comes up with his usual prediction. And this time he's more than likely to be right. He picks Louis, thereby dispelling any rumors that the Manassa Mauler is going mentally wacky. There were some doubts last June when the former champion chose Conn to sweep the crown from the sepia dome of Louis.

"Mauriello" says Dempsey, isn't the type of fighter likely to beat Louis. A peculiar thing about Tami is his bum right ankle which forces him to fight with a partial limp. It's a permanent injury to his tendons and he can't move backward effectively. (Comment: He will, Joe will see to that). Tami likes to fight and likes to punch but he's as wide open as a barn door. Louis will hit him all right. (Comment: Not necessary).

• • •

"Tami has been down many times, but he gets up and keeps right on punching. Jimmy Bivins had him on the rug, but Tami bounced up fast, kept slugging and went on to win. The same thing happened when he fought Savold and Oma. He got dumped but he got up and won. Anybody can hit him. an unknown named Johnny Thomas put him down in the first round of a fight not so long ago, but Tami as usual, scrambled to his feet and took the fight."

• • •

"All of which proves a couple of important things to me: He's got a lot of moxie and that comes number one on my list. If a fighter hasn't got it, he'll never get anywhere. Tami has courage, lots of it. Another thing I like about him is his hitting ability. He can punch with either hand and he's dangerous at all times. Now he's no Joe Louis, who punches travel so fast they show up as a blur on a photo, but Tami throws them in there pretty fast, especially when he has his man in trouble."

• • •

"As his fifty-one kayoes out of seventy-seven fights show, he's a good finisher. When he fought Bruce Woodcock, for instance, things were fairly even until the fifth round. Then, in the middle of the ring, they went into a hot exchange and Tami had the Britisher backing away. He piled on top of him, kept whaling away, and suddenly finished him off with a left hook. You've got to like him for the way he goes after a man when he's got him in trouble."

• • •

"His weakness, as I see it, in his defence. He's got a big head and a big square body and he walks in with his hands apart offering a wide target area.

Against the type of boys he's met, he's been able to get away with it, but he can't move in that way against Louis unless he wants to get his head torn off."

• • •

"Tami—his square name is Stefano—is one of a large brood of Italian-American kids who all came up the hard way. The father of the family died when Tami was a youngster, leaving him on his own. One day the kid drifted into a Bronx gym and put on the gloves. A good street fighter —and that's what he is today, by the way—he did well from the start and when he was sixteen he won the 147-pound Golden Gloves championship of New York. That was in 1939."

LATTA DEFEATS NAPANEE 13-9 IN FIRST GAME

Contest Free-Hitting and Loosely - Fielded Affair With Winners in Charge

In a free-hitting loose-fielding affair that saw twenty base hits crash off the bats of both squads and ten errors all told committed on the field, the Latta baseball squad won the first game of the second round O.B.A. Intermediate "B" series from Napanee at the Alemite Field Friday night. The score was 13-9. Both teams used two hurlers and the fielding of both squads could have been improved upon. Both broke out in batting rashes and hits and runs came in clusters at various parts of the game.

McTaggart, tall righthander, started on the mound for Napanee and he went well for three and one half innings. Then the Latta bats connected for three solid clouts, he walked two men and his mates erred twice in the fifth and he was taken out for Coathup. Latta got to McTaggart for five hits for seven runs during his sojourn on the mound.

Coathup fared little better and he was nicked for six hits for as many runs over the four and one-half innings he worked. He walked one and struck out four while McTaggart walked eight and whiffed 1.

Relieved by Hall

Chunky Joe Marsh was assigned the starting chucking chore by Manager Jack Carson of the Latta squad and he worked for five and two-thirds innings. Marsh was touched for six hits for eight runs, three tallies coming in the fourth off one hit, two walks, a hit by pitcher and an error. Napanee pounced on him again in the sixth for three hits for four runs and that was the end of Marsh. Lefty Hall relieved him and held the visitors to three hits for one run over the remainder of the game. Marsh struck out six and walked two while Hall whiffed and issued two free tickets to first.

The teams battled on even terms for the first innings then Latta scored a single run in the second. Napanee tied the count in the third but Latta forged ahead when they scored another single in the same innings. The visitors shot into a three run lead in the fourth but the homesters exploded with five runs in the same innings to virtually put the game on ice. They scored three more in the next innings but the Gibbardville lads came back strongly in the sixth to notch a quartet of markers that brought the score to 10-8.

Only One Run in Rally

Latta got two in the seventh and one in the eighth with Napanee attempting a rally in the ninth that ended with a single run.

Tim Williams was the big gun with the hickory for Latta getting four hits for five. "Red" Carson celebrated his return to baseball, after diving off the dock of bachelordom, with a couple of clouts, one a two-bagger. Vick clouted two for Napanee with the remainder being singly scattered throughout the team.

The second game of the series is scheduled for Wednesday, Sept. 18 at Napanee at 4.30 p.m.

Testifies Canadians Bayonetted by Japs

London, Sept. 14-(CP Cable)-Maj. Cecil Boon told a court-martial trying him on five charges of collaboration with the Japanese at Hong Kong prison camp that during the battle of Hong Kong the Japanese bayonetted and shot some Canadians who "resisted."

Tracing the background of his appointment as liason officer between the prisoners and the Japanese camp staff after the fall of Hong Kong Dec. 25, 1941, Boon said the bayonetting occured in St. Stephen's College which was being used as a hospital.

"In one case they gouged out a man's eye, raped nursing sisters and in the course of the battle some Canadian soldiers who surrendered were bayonetted and shot," he said.

Boon showed signs of strain as the trial entered its 16th day.

Auction of Vehicles Realizes $1,6000,000

Bordon, Hampshire, England, Sept. 14 — (CP Cable) — The auction of 10,000 Canadian Army vehicles, now in its third week, has realized £400,000 ($1,600,000) for the British Treasury.

Prices are reported "holding their own" compared with the first days of the sale, averaging between 115 and 130 guineas — ($483 and $546) for three-ton trucks with four-wheel drive. Jeeps sold last week averaged upwards of 150 guineas each.

Eighteen civilian guards have been arrested on charges of stealing parts and tools in the 300-acre park where the auction is being held. Some already have been dealt with by civilian courts.

SPORTS FALLACIES
By Margery Miller

Overwork has been blamed for ruining many a pitching arm. But expert opinion contradicts this theory.

Branch Rickey, for example, declares he never heard of an arm's being hurt by overwork. Injuries to arms, he says, are caused by trying new trick deliveries, favoring a leg, slipping off the patching rubber, or similar unorthodox actions. Pitching, he maintains, never hurt an arm when it was done right.

Experts point out that a pitcher must work fairly often in order to keep in top shape. Men who don't pitch regularly lose their best form on the mound.

VISITS SICK WIFE

London, Sept. 14 -(CP Cable)- Arthur Henderson, 24-year-old former Canadian Army private and now gold miner at Duparquet, Que., arrived today by air from Canada to visit his wife, Margaret, who is critically ill in Brighton.

He rushed through the customs and left London airport immediately by automobile for Brighton Sanitorium.

"I have no plans, I'm just going to stay in Brighton until she gets better," said Henderson.

Hospital attendants said the woman's condition was "very weak."

DID NOT WALK OUT

London Sept. 14 -(CP)- A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, denied today he had walked out of a session of the Paris Peace Conference Military Commission yesterday.

"It is quite untrue to say I walked out," Mr. Alexander said as he arrived in London for the weekend.

"I was called away to keep an appointment and left the debate in the ordinary way."

(In Paris it was reported Mr. Alexander conferred with Mr. Byrnes shortly after the British delegate left the session. The meeting was not scheduled until an hour before Mr. Alexander departed from the conference.)

Toronto, Sept. 14-(CP)-Father's who plan on their young fellows growing up into an athlete, big and strong, who'll turn pro and make enough money to lift the mortgage on the old family farm should listen well to Fausto Ponce.

Fausto, a wiry little writer of "exclusive" dispatches on sport for Mexico City's big daily, Excelsior knows where the big money lies in sport. Really big money, that is.

With Mexico's baseball man, Jorge Pasquel, maybe? "But no," says Fausto. "Eet ees weeth the Bools."

So ther you have it--bullfighting.

Fausto, whose has already been almost exhausted in this story, visited Toronto with the Mexico City jockey club fastball team recently and he said all top bullfighters in Mexico are millionaires. In dollars, mind you, not pesos.

He named one who gets $12,000 for evry bull he kills. Some Saturdays this fellow puts in about 30 minutes actually work and kills two bulls--$24,000. But of course there is a lot of technique and artistry, too.

A telling lead can be deadly. It will often kill a slam that had a chance to make. Yes, indeedy. The opening lead against a slam has a great influence on the final result.

Timing has a great deal to do with it. That means the quickness with which one side or the other develops their chances. Very often the defending side can get defeating tricks only by fast action.

The opening leader's side is not always able to hold the lead or quickly regain control of the lead. So, the leader should start a suit that is most likely to develop a trick or more in a hurry.

Against only a game contract, the quick development of a trick may not be so important. But a slam contract usually finds holdings that are more or less freak. Time permits declarer to save losers.

That is why, against a slam, a trump lead is seldom if ever a desirable lead. It gives over the control to declarer. He thus gets the timing on developing side suits.

The opening leader may have no ace to lead. Nor a sequence to lead the top from. If so, he should prefer to start with a lead in some suit that has a high card of some kind.

This has its dangers, too. So, it is difficult to announce any hard and fast rule for a lead against a slam. But it is well to have the various possibilities aired now and then as reminders.

The contract is a slam in spades. Lead from this hand:

♠7 5
♥Q 7 4 2
♦J 8 6
♣Q 9 8 4

You should not start out with the lead of a trump in this case. If you do, you may never get a chance to develop a trick in hearts or clubs.

Prefer to lead a club or even a heart here. If partner has the king, you have a quick chance of developing a trick in that suit. Stick your oar in there fast.

In Manhattan

By FRANK HINDS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Sept. 14 —(CP)— Gotham gulped when it learned that thrifty Billy Rose was shelling out $1,300 a week to be a columnist.

Now after a few weeks of footing the bill and putting in his two-bits'-worth on a bewildering variety of subjects, flamboyant Billy announces signing of a year's syndicate contract for $5,000 a week to renew his boosters' faith that anything Midas Rose touches just pays off.

The column started out as a chatty paragraph or two over an advertisement for his Diamond Horseshoe, one of the more stylish Manhattan cellars. Nearly 100 papers subscribed to it while it was for free—or rather while Billy was paying for it. Just how many will keep it up when his paying contract starts at the year-end depends largely on Billy's success in maintaining its present breezy appeal.

In any event Billy won't have to worry. "Chasing after the hot buck," as he puts it, long had kept the millionaire gnome from indulging the journalistic yen which dates from his career's start as stenographer to Bernard Baruch, adviser to presidents.

His personal gold mine, the musical "Carmen Jones", now on tour in the United States, is scheduled to play a second New York engagement before going on celluloid. Then it's slated tentatively for a year's tour of Britain, starting in the fall of '47. the horseshoe pub rings the cash register to the tune of more than $250,000 annually. Rental for his Zeigfield theatre in any body's guess now that the hit revival of "Show Boat" is hholding forth there. His song hits bring in $20,000 annually in Royalties if he never writes another note. Let's not worry about Billy.

Richard Tauber, famed baritone, made his broadway debut last week in a warmed-over of his great musical hit, "The Land of Smiles." This one is called "Yours is My Heart" and features the maestro singing that song in four different languages.

While the critics welcomed back the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur oldie, "The Front Page," they were not so kind to Hecht's "A Flag is Born," A pageant plea for Zionism. The production and acting were praised, but Hecht's lines were deemed overwrought and preachy.

Dominion export: A Canadian receiving favorable note on Broadway is James Hawthorne, Peterborough baritone, who is holding down a part in hit revival of Victor Herbert's "The Red Mill." Hawthorne was seen by Canadian audiences in "The Navy Show."

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Sept. 14—(AP)— Twenty-six years ago this mohth, Mary Astor started in the movies, playing a mother. Today she is again playing a mother, but a new, streamlined kind.

"People must think I'm 80 because I've been around so long," she told me on the "Desert Town" set, quickly adding, "But I played my first role as the mother of a two-year-old when I was 14." I started calculating hurriedly but she obligingly supplied her age — 40.

"I didn't mind playing mothers then and I don't now, as long as the part has character," she said. "I can't stand the role where I either encourage my child or am shocked by her, and that's all."

In recent movies Mary has mothered Esther Williams, Kathryn Grayson and Lizabeth Scott. "It amused me to watch how polite they are for the first few days giving me their seat and so forth," she laughed. "They soon get over that."

Mary observed that movie mothers have changed a lot since the silent days. "They used to be aged and retiring. Nowadays they can be glamorous and active. There's no reason for a woman to go to seed just because she has grown children."

I asked Mary, who has a girl, 14, and a boy, seven, how she managed to stay so youthful.

"I don't give it a thought. If I grow old, okay; but I'm not going to worry about it."

Cornel Wilde will definitely do Lord Byron after "Forever Amber." It's his own story . . . Governor Warren of California turns comedian on Edgar Bergen's show Sept. 22 . . . Ray Milland shipped his trunk to England and hopes to follow it soon.

Woman Patriot Visits Relatives of Canadians She Aided in Belgium

Clinton, Sept. 14 — (CP) — A woman worker of the Belgian underground, now a government official touring America on a lecture tour, stopped off in this Western Ontario village Friday to visit the aunt and uncle of one of the Canadians she risked her life to save.

Miss Raymonde Rocke, touring Canada and the United States to tell her country's wartime story to schools here, was warmly welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McGill when she arrived.

It was their nephew, Alex Nethery Hamilton, who she harbored for four months after the Royal Canadian Air Force flying officer was shot down over Belgium. She helped in his escape shortly before the Nazis were routed.

Miss Rocke had another call to pay here — to Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Corless. Their son, Alvin, also shot down over Belgium, lies buried there and she brought photographs of his carefully-kept grave and the government-appointed caretaker who tends the burial plot of Canadians.

She brought, too, a souvenir for his parents — a small cross among their son's possessions that a policeman's wife uncovered before the Nazis got there.

Syracuse Chiefs Defeat Orioles

(By The Associated Press)

Syracuse Chiefs joined the International League pennant winners, Montreal Royals, as the choices for the finals when they defeated Baltimore Orioles 13-6 in the third game of the Governors' Cup series last night.

The victory gave the Chiefs a 2-1 edge in their best-of-seven series. The Royals, idle last night, hold a two-games-to-none advantage over Newark Bears.

The Chiefs, led by Ay Rubeling, banged out 14 hits against five Oriole hurlers with the game called at the end of eight innings because of an agreement to start no inning after 10:45 p.m. (E.S.T.)

Rubeling batted in six runs and scored two with a single, double, triple and home run. His four bagger came with the bases loaded.

The heavy hitting enabled Earl Harrist to coast to victory, the Chief southpaw yielding eight hits. Ray Flanigan was the loser.

Weekend Dedicated To Remembrance Of Flying Corps

By RUSSELL C. LANDSTROM

London, Sept. 14 (AP) — Throughout the British Isles this weekend is being dedicated to remembrance of the R.A.F., which six years ago tomorrow challenged the Luftwaffe in a patch of sky some 80 miles long and 40 wide to win the Battle of Britain and smash enemy hopes for an invasion of England.

In chapels and churches, tribute will be paid in memory of that historic Sunday in 1940, when weary pilots, out-numbered 10 to 1, rose for the decisive encounter and shot down 185 German planes during an aerial battle lasting throughout the day over southeast England. Against the German's staggering toll, the R.A.F. lost 25 planes, but 14 pilots were saved.

From the ground, the peril of that day could not be appreciated by Britons, who went to church, chated over cups of tea, dieted on the Sunday roast.

CHAPTER THREE

When Isabel packed a hamper to take to Sausalito, she packer it just as the older woman had done.

"Butter and French bread and bacon for breakfast," Isabel would check it off. "We need soap flakes and steel wool—don't you think it's a reflection on Dennis, Mrs. Hardisty, that his women have to buy steel wool? Walking round that factory out in San Francisco, wouldn't you think he could pick up enough for a two-year supply?—I've a dozen new dish towels, I'll leave them over there. I saw flour sacks in a shop, and grabbed them. There's nothing like them for dish towels."

"I'm so glad you love the Sausalito place," old Mrs. Hardisty said more than once. "I might have been afraid that Dennis' wife would think it's a good deal of work to go over there."

"Ah, because you have been raised in the lap of luxury, Mrs. Hardisty. You were telling Dennis and me about the saddle horse you used to ride, and about Cassie, the crazy little Negress who helped the cook. It sounded very high-hat!"

"I don't think I'm going to like you calling me 'Mrs. Hardisty' very long," Dennis's mother said, when Isabel had been married come months. "You wouldn't want to call me 'Aunt Mary'?"

"Well, I'll tell you," Isabel answered. "Suppose we wait a while—say a year— and then change it to 'Gran'?"

Mrs. Hardisty put her arm about her daughter-in-law, drew back to face her. Over her handsome, thin, middle-aged face a flush of youth suddenly ran.

"Isabel," she said.

"We think so," Isabel said, laughing, her own face radiant with color.

"Well, God is good," said the other woman simply.

"I agree," Isabel admitted." "But—when I first smell coffee in the mornings—I"

That was the way Mrs. Hardisty learned that there was to be a child, and Isabel was touched and sometimes amused and sometimes a little impatient at the change it made in the older woman's life.

A christening robe appeared, a porringer, old books with the book plate of "John D. Hardisty" in them. The first John Dennis had been Dennis's grandfather; he had had a stately old law library. Dennis's father had been a distinguished attorney, Dennis's son—Isabel saw the dreams for Dennis's son brighten and soften his mother's fine serious dark eyes as the months went by.

"It's a quite a simple thing to be regarded as a favor, Aunt Mary," she said. I couldn't live without a baby. This isn't heroic self-sacrifice."

"You love her, don't you, Mom?" Dennis stated rather than asked. He knew the answer.

Life was quiet, but Isabel was keen enough to know that socially she had made an advance. She and Dennis went to pleasant, long-established homes to bridal dinners; homes where good talk went on over unpretentious meals, and festivities ended at a decorous ten o'clock. They went on weekend trips to the Sausalito house and came home weary and happy, laden with ferns and wild flowers. Weekdays meant marketing and cooking, and planning for the baby. After Pussy—named Mary for both grandmothers, was born—Isabel stayed for a while with her mother-in-law. Pussy was a funny little gypsy of a baby; and Catherine, who followed her in eighteen months, exactly like her.

"They're part gnome," said Isabel. "I don't know where people as beautiful as we are ever got such babies, Dennis! I let you down. What I ordered was Dennis the fourth, and what I got was this pixy!"

"It suits me." Dennis had a small girl in the curve of each arm as he spoke. "I like a house with quiet little women in it. If we have ten I want 'em all girls!"

"If you just wouldn't put such thoughts into words." Isabel was compounding a cheese souffle'. Motherless from her twelfth year, she had been trained by her father's sister, Aunt Mansie; to Dennis her quiet sureness in the kitchen was an unending miracle and delight. "If we had ten girls, Dennis," she said, "weddings would break us. Between—let's see, nineteen fifty-six and nineteen sixty-five your expenses would stagger even a great bridge engineer."

"I wouldn't call myself that yet," Dennis said modestly.

"I would. Haven't you just been three weeks in Guatemala? Weren't they going to send you to Norway if this war hadn't broken out? After this war we'll be going to China or Africa or Alaska—you'll see. I'm studying Spanish in case it's Spain, but I certainly will take up Portuguese if it should be Rio."

"We've got to finish this war first, darling." Afterward she remembered the odd tender look in his face, the odd tender tone of his voice as he said it.

"You won't have to go, Dennis. You're overage."

"They'll need me," he said.

"They'll have all the engineers they want," his mother contributed.

"And you have small children," Isabel reminded him.

He did not answer. The women knew he had not really heard them. An odd look was in Dennis's brown eyes, those serious black-lashed eyes that were the color of dark amber.

It was immediately as if he had heard some sound that was too fine, too high, for their hearing, like a dog who picks up his ears as he lies on a hearthrug and whines eagerly and pitifully in answer to some summons meant for him alone.

Dennis did not look happy, nor sad. He looked profoundly absorbed, abstracted, thoughtful. Whatever emotions he might have had five minutes earlier, of love for his wife and children, of their need for him and his of them, of private ambition or personal dream, were gone. He was looking beyond them now, into a world of strangeness and loneliness. He was eager to be gone.

"Yes, I'm an engineer, of course. They'll need me," said Dennis. And once, vaguely, to Isabel when they were alone, It's all been building up to this."

"All what?"

"Oh—school, studying history. Washington and Yorktown, and Gettysburg and-everything. The Louisiana Purchase and Alaska—California gold, everything."

"It sounds like a brief course in American history," Isabel said.

"Of course, that's what it is. American history," Dennis had answered. "We've made it and it's made us. We have to see this chapter of it through, too."

Dennis was in uniform a few weeks later, and off with the engineers to the South Pacific. And if life had been quiet almost to dullness to Isabel before this, it was now almost insufferably monotonous.

Day after day she heard only the chirping babble of her daughters. She had no close friends in the city; she could not take Catherine and Pussy shopping or to theatres or movies. A cheerful young Fanny came in as a "sitter" occasionally, otherwise Isabel had no help.

On pleasant days they washed breakfast dishes, made beds, wrote lists and went out to market, and to the park. On rainy days they stayed at home, and Catherine fretted and Pussy coughed. Over and over and the small coats were buttoned on the small rubbers tugged into place at a fearful cost to fingernails. Over and over the woolly nightwear was laid out, the slippers and robes, and the bath water was run while Isabel arranged little dishes of cereal, fruit sauce, rusks.

That women—hundreds of thousands of them—were doing the same thing all over the country, suffering the same monotony of loneliness, facing the same difficulties, didn't make it easier. A sense of frustration began to posses Isabel, and it was followed by a vague resentment. Of what use were beauty and wits and ambition if this was all they brought?

Dennis had been gone for only two months when she was evicted. The apartment in which she had lived since her marriage was a roomy one; the owner now had a plan of turning it into two or even three separate flats. Living space was scarce everywhere, evictions a daily occurrence. Isabel moved with her little girls into the old Laguna Street house where Dennis's mother lived alone.

There was less responsibility and more leisure here; here was a good Chinese cook in the kitchen, and Mrs. Hardisty, who adored her granddaughters, was always there in the evenings, if Isabel had an engagement.

Isabel had a few evening engagements, but she had an amusing acquaintance, a rich divorced woman, Nancy Strait, who liked to pick her up in the late afternoon and do the rounds of the smart hotel bars and lounges. This was a new world to Isabel; she rapidly came to feel that Nancy was her one intimate friend, and that a day that did not see them laughing and idling over a little table somewhere, in a softly lighted club or lounge, was a lost day. Nancy knew everyone; they were sure of good company. Isabel was fascinated by her easy arrogance, her careless waste of money, her sureness of her own position.

Coming home late and flushed and full of amusing chatter, she would find the small girls already settled off for the night, and their grandaughter about to descend for her own dinner. It didn't matter. Isabel was too much carried away by the novelty and pleasure of her own experiences to notice the anxiety in the older woman's eyes, and old Mrs. Hardisty never criticized her.

On a certain languid April day Nancy asked Isabel to go with her for a three-weeks visit to New York. Nancy wanted clothes, there were some good plays, why not? Isabel's breath came short; New York! She stammered that she hadn't ever dreamed ofgoing to New York—wasn't travel awfully difficult—the war and the service men and everything? But of course of all things in the world that would be the thing she longed to do!

Nancy swept objections aside. She'd arrange everything. Isabel went home feeling wings on her feet to talk to her husband's mother about it.

"But you want to go so soon, Nancy, and it'd be a sin to leave right now... Of course I might get Fanny to come in every day and help Mom... I know Dennis didn't want me to feel tied down."

"The only sins you're going to regret," said Nancy, "are the ones you didn't have the courage to commit."

"Horrible idea!" Isabel protested. But she laughed. One always laughed at Nancy; she expected it. More than that, the mere idea of New York excited Isabel so much that her laughter was always ready, and had in it a note of hysteria.

To go to New York with Nancy meant the best hotels, everything done a scale of luxury and expense very intoxicating to a woman first twenty-one years had been spent in Sutro's Mill. Isabel began a series of half-hearted protests to her husband's mother.

"I couldn't possibily leave the girls, it's ridiculous. Unless of course Fanny'd come right here and live," she said. And at another time, "About this silly New York idea, of course I wouldn't entertain it for one moment if Dennis was coming home or likely to come home."

Mrs. Hardisty said very little. She listened with obvious sympathy to the idea of a New York visit, but Isabel knew that she didn't like Nancy. Isabel in her heart didn't like Nancy; she was obliged to defend Nancy. Nancy was a little wild, but she had such a good heart. Nancy was always doing things for people.

Dennis's answer came back presently to an interrogative letter. Sure she ought to take a vacation and skip to New York, he said. It was all very well to say that Mrs. Strait was generous, and she and Isabel hit it off marvelously, but Isabel had better take along her checkbook. Sometimes it was nice to be able to break away. And keep those letters coming!

So Isabel started off, in a flutter of delight for herself, and a hard tug of heartache for her babies; Catherine was down with a heavy cold, and Pussy cried at parting.

"I'll be back on the twenty-seventh day," she promised in parting, "and settle down to the best daughter-in-law there ever was in the world."

"You're that now," said old Mrs. Hardisty. But she said it uneasily, and thought, of the first time, of the waste and danger of war. Partings were dangerous for wives as beautiful as Isabel.

In Chicago— the marvel of being in Chicago!—Isabel had a wire: "Catherine sitting in sunshine today, Pussy lovely, much love, Mary Hardisty," and in a very rapture of gratitude and relief wired back, "Everything wonderful, thanks, you are an angel."

Nancy got through the transcontinental trip with much cold-cream, much sleep, some boredom, and some gin rummy with three hard bitten young British officers who happened to be on the train. Isabel reveled in every mile of it as only the unaccustomed traveler can do.

She loved the train; the bright dining room with tables lighted and white-clad waiters busy; the dark night rushing away outside. She loved Drawing Room D, made up freshly for sleep; she loved to dream at the window, and see the strange-looking little towns go by.

In Chicago she peered with undiminished enthusiasm from the bus. Grimy great buildings shut the railway stations in, but that didn't matter—there was an el train-there was Marshall Field's! She and Nancy lunched at a restaurant window that gave them the view of the museum and the wide parkway and the lake, and Isabel ate delicious food and listened to soft music and drank in delight with every pore of her body.

So the miracle trip began, and presently Avery was a part of it. Isabel came home from her first visit to a night club with her senses spinning. The suddenness of him, the audacity of him, taking possession of all her time, crowding the thought of him in between her and every other thought.

"What are you doing tonight? Have you seen it? Do you want to see it? Do you gals want to on a yacht party—two days? You'll love it. Here—this bag is for you. Picked it up, thought you might like it."

"I'm supposed not to take anything but candy and flowers from a man until I know his intentions," Isabel said on the third day, snapping on an exquisite clip of dull blue stones and dull green stones and hammered lusterless gold.

"Oh, it came, did it?"

"It came tied tight to the orchids."

"I found the earrings to match.'

"I haven't any doubt you did. Right at the same counter at the same time."

"Wear them, will you? To remember the man who committed suicide the day you started for home."

"Avery, whatever the significance of them is, I'm wearing them."

"Someday I'll be dressing you from head to foot."

"Are you an undertaker? I don't think I ever asked what you did." Nancy laughed abruptly, her deep hoarse laugh, too.

"He shoots things," Nancy volunteered. "He kills things."

"Shoots? Rapids?"

"Deer," said Avery. "Doves, down at San Juan. Marlin at Avalon and ducks at Stege. Steelhead in the Rouge. I keep the world from being overrun with wild animals."

Vets Turn Rangeland into Co-opFarm

A new kind of Combined Operations for 15 veterans is Matador Co-operative Farm, 45 miles north of Swift Current, Saskatchewan. Ex-gunner George Lacy drives a tractor. Like others, he pooled resources voluntarily to work for profits of large-scale farming. Houses, made from dismantled R.C.A.F. buildings, were hauled 40 miles from airport. To seed first crop, members worked 24 hours daily in shifts, used tractor headlights at night. Approximately 2,500 acres have been ploughed on the 15 sections of land. Flax crop of 365 acres was pronounced A-1 by government inspector Ron Hardy (above at right bending.) Washing after work, Harold Heath(left), Bill Zazelenchuck (centre) and Ernie Monson discuss future crops which will repay provincial loan that helped start community.

History of Madoc Public School

The following is taken from an article prepared by Miss Mary Mackintosh and used by Mrs. Mc Caffrey, when former pupils gathered at the Public School during the Old Boys' Reunion and reprinted from the North Hastings Review.

Mr. Fredrick E. Seymour of Madoc in a letter to the Editor of the Documentary History of Education says:

The first school ever taught in the Township of Madoc was at a spot about two miles from the village of that name—now known as O'Hara's School House or School Section No. 2. The first teacher was Mr. George Ryan, who began to teach in 1830 He was succeeded by Mr. Jeremiah Vankleek. A private school was taught in 1837 by Miss Davis. In the Public School there was a considerable hiatus between these two teachers and the next that came. From about 1838, at intervals, for seven or eight years, a school was kept up by private subscription, of which Miss Emeline Olmstead, an American, was the teacher. In the meantime a school house was built and for a time—less than a year— a teacher named Mr. Duncan Cameron was employed. He was a young man of some education and culture. After his departure Miss Olmstead kept the school open for several terms gratuitously.

In 1842 Miss Olmstead re-opened the school in a log house owned by Mr. Percival Seymour and continued to teach until 1844, when a Public School was opened, the first teacher being Mr. Donald Cameron. The school books used for the most part American.

There was a school on Durham street about where Dr. Eagleson or L. Reeves live. Perhaps this was the one mentioned by Mr. Seymour as being opened in 1844. This was burned. The School Section No. 1, Madoc, was preparing to build a new school. A load of lime was deposited against the old building. During the night this heated and fire resulted, burning it down. There seems to have been schools held in different places-some of them were likely private schools. One of these was where Blue's store is, another where Mr. Hulin lives and still another where Mr. C. Whytock lives. School was held upstairs in a building where Mr. Brett is. This was after the log school burned.

The next public school was built, as nearly as can be found out, about 1855 on the site of the present school. It was a brick building divided into two rooms by a board partition The door into the principal's room was on the north side and that into the other room at the rear of the east side. There was no door between. A block of Madoc marble was placed over the north door. One of those who helped build it was Mr. Embury's grandfather, a carpenter.

Some of the teachers were Miss VanTassel, who later married Rev. Mr. Jackson, a missionary and died in India; A. C. Dafoe, later a lawyer; Mr. Mowat and his sister, Miss Mowat, who was here many years until she was superannuated.

Miss VanTassel was very popular that so much so that more than one baby was called after her. Miss Mowat apparently did not mind noise—the school room as the pupils studied outloud and making so much noise that the principal would rap on the partition to get them to be quiet. In the winter time, big boys, indeed young men would attend school.

In 1870 a new School Law came into effect. By it County Inspectors were to be appointed to take the place of the superintendents. The Superintendent for North Hastings was Mr. Thos. Agar, a very mild and and gentlemanly man who continued in office until the Fall of 1873 when he went to Thunder Bay. An inspector was not appointed until February, 1874, when Mr. Wm. Mackintosh was which Mr. A.F. Wood was the Warden.

In 1875 a third teacher, Miss Clark was engaged and taught in part of the barracks, a building used by the Mounted Police at the time of the gold excitement and situated on the hill about where Mr. Irwin's house is. This same year the school grounds were closed by a fence.

In 1875 after several years discussion, at a school meeting, two trustees Dr. Loomis and Mr. John Dale, signed an agreement to build a new school but the third, E. D. O'Flynn, refused to do so. At each annual meeting the matter was brought up until the annual meeting for 1877 when Mr. O'Flynn seconded the motion of Mr. Thomas Cross to erect a new school.

The Board of Trustees in 1878, was increased to six members as the village was incorporated. The six were Messrs. E. D. O'Flynn, Wareham Tuller, A. F. Wood, A. B. Ross, F. E. Seymour and Jas. Caverly. Mr. Seymour was made secretary and held the office for many years.

In April of the next year, the old school was torn down to make way for the new one.

During the erection of the school the senior classes were held in a building which had been a carriage shop owned by Bristols on the land now owned by Mrs. Harrison. One class met in the Masonic Hall and the third which had been in the barracks was in the Town Hall as the barracks had been burned on March 1st. (One student who was to have taught the class in the barracks a geography lesson said, "I am like the little boy who said, 'I'm glad the old thing burned down for I don't know my geography lesson no how."

This new school is the west part of the present school and is described in the County report for that year as "A" handsome and commodious building.

It is a two-storey brick structure with a Mansard roof and cupola. The interior contains, on the ground floor a large assembly room, furnished with folding seats and desks, a gallery room and three lobbies. The second storey has two class rooms, furnished like the assembly room, a gallery room, a library and apparatus room and two lobbies. There are 3 entrances—a front entrance for teachers and visitors and two side entrances for boys and girls respectively. The whole is heated with hot air. This school was felt to be an honor to the village and county. This report also states that in Madoc, 'an excellent commencement has been made in the planting of trees and flowers.

At first, the downstairs partition was to the west of the door from the boys' hall—that is the three doors opened out of the assembly room. In a few years this wall was moved over to east of the door into the boys' hall and a door into the primary room at the rear was opened. Miss Woolton was teaching there then.

The formal opening of the Model School was held October 3rd, 1878, at the time of the Teachers' Convention, though it was not ready for pupils until the 22nd. The Minister of Education Hon. Adam Crooks, was present and Dr. McLellan, senior inspector, was also there. A special train brought Adam Crooks to the end of the rails which was near Crookston, hence the name.

Dodgers Come up From Floor To Narrow Cards' Lead And Stay in National Loop Race

Score Four Runs in First Frame and Hide Behind Their Lead for Rest of Game

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

One of the reasons Brooklyn has taken the Dodgers baseball team to its heart is because those delightful bums never know when they're licked.

Sent reeling all over Ebbet's Field by St. Louis Cardinals the previous day, the Bums came back swinging yesterday to punch out a 4-3 victory, narrowing St. Louis' lead to 1½ games.

They rapped across four runs in the first inning and hid behind their lead for the rest of the afternoon. It was a five-run St. Louis first inning that doomed the Dodgers Thursday.

In today's renewal, Brooklyn's Vic Lombardi is primed to match lefthanded slants with St. Louis' Harry (the cat) Brecheen.

Although southpaw Joe Hatten the starter, was credited with the victory, it actually was reliefer Kirby Higbe, Thursday's "goat," who preserved the win for Brooklyn. The unpredictable righthander replaced a wobbly Hatten on the mound in the seventh with the tying run on base and forced pinch hitter Harry Walker to crack into an inning-ending double play.

Race All Over

Kirby gave up no hits, struck out two with a blazing fast ball and walked none.

Unlike the National the American League flag race is all over with Boston Red Sox the official 1946 champions. The Red Sox "dood it" yesterday when they eked out a 1-0 win over Cleveland while the second place Detroit Tigers were beaten by New York Yankees 5-4.

Ted Williams, Boston's great slugger, provided the margin of victory, an inside the park home run, while Tex Hughson, another pre-war favorite, doled out three hits for his 18th mound triumph.

The Yankees nosed out the Tigers on Joe DiMaggio's two-run seventh inning homer off Hal Newhouser.

In other American League games, Chicago White Sox took both ends of a doubleheader from Philadelphia Athletics 3-1 and 4-2 while Jack Kramer hurled the Browns to a 7-0 shutout victory over Washington in St. Louis.

In the National, Pittsburgh scored a double win oved the Braves in Boston 4-2 in 14 innings and 10-1. Cincinnati Reds downed New York Giants at the Polo Grounds 4-1 and the Phils beat Chicago in Philadelphia 4-1.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

Two United States tennis players made comparatively short work yesterday of Swedish opponents in singles matches of Davis Cup competition at Forest Hills, N.Y. Jack Kramer of California, new American champion, disposed of Torsten Johansson in three sets while Frank Parker, also of the west coast, turned back Lennart Bergelin, champion of Sweden, in four sets.

The winners of the five-match inter-zone finals will qualify to challenge Australia in December for the trophy which has been held by the Commonwealth since the last cup contests in 1939.

The appointment of Johnny Neun yesterday to succeed Bill Dickey as manager of the New York Yankees marked the fourth managerial change in the American League during the season. Dickey, former catcher, had replaced Joe McCarthy early in the campaign while Chicago White Sox and St. Louis Browns also switched pilots.

Tippy Larkin retained his world junior welterweight title last night at New York by giving Willie Joyce, Indiana negro, a 12-round boxing lesson to gain a unanimous decision. Larkin weighed 139 1-4 pounds and Joyce 139.

Jackie Robinson Wins Batting Title of Int.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP) — Jackie Robinson, star negro infielder of Montreal Royals, won the 1946 individual batting championship of the International League, according to the unofficial figures released today.

Robinson, the first negro since 1900 to play organized baseball, smashed 155 hits in 444 trips to the plate to post a .349 mark. Five points more than rookie Bobby Brown of Newark Bears.

Among Robinson's 155 hits were 25 two-baggers, eight triples and three homers. The second sacker also batted in 65 runs and stole 40 bases.

Trailing the leaders are Danny Murtaugh, Rochester .325; Ed Robinson, Baltimore .322; Tom Tatum, Montreal .320; Coaker Triplett, Buffalo 310 and Marv Rackley, Montreal .306.

Howitzer Howie Moss of Baltimore smashed the most homers, 38 while Rackley led in triples, 13 and stolen bases 63. Brown led in hits, 176. And Ed Robinson drove in the highest number of tallies, 121.

Montreal led the clubs in batting with a .291 mark. The 1,019 runs scored by the Royals established a league record by 15 runs for a 154-game schedule.

Montreal also led the league in double plays, 147, and was tied with Buffalo for fielding honors with a .968 average.

Barrel-chested Steve Nagy of the Royals took the individual pitching honors with a 17 and 4 record for a .810 percentage.

Art Houtteman of Buffalo, a 16-game winner, led the league in strikeouts, 148.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

Springfield, N. J., Sept. 14—(AP)— If Smiley Quick, the "people's cherce" of the United States amateur golf tournament, should win the title today, a lot of folks are wondering what they'll do about the next Walker Cup team. . . . There never has been a public links golfer on the international team. . . . And it also is a well-known fact that many members of the executive clubs are inclined to look down their noses at the common people who play golf just because they like the game and who pay a dollar or two as they go — and that's Smiley all over. . . . Quick probably has done more to popularize golf with ordinary people than anyone who has come along in years. . . . He's the only player who has been in all three big tournaments — publinks, open and amateur — and he's been at or near the top in all. . . . He's got the kind of personality that has the gallery rooting for him.

Wonder?

After he dropped a shot right in the middle of Baltusrol's water hole — a 120-yard affair that even a duffer could kick the pill across — Quick was asked how come? . . . "Well," Smiley explained, "I had played four rounds with that ball and it needed washing."

End of the Line.

Golf finalist Ted Bishop, who has been underweight ever since he was in the army, figures its inconsistent when Frank Stranahan lifts bar bells in his spare time, Dick Chapman does push-ups and "here I am eating vitamins."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was reeding his paper and ma was reeding hers, saying, William, do you realize there never was such a time in the histery of the werld as right now while we're sitting here?

Maybe we ought to have our pictures snapped, pop said, and ma said, All the way from pole to pole and equater to equater the countries of the earth are banding together for the peace and security of the intre globe irrespective of color or creed or pollitics. Isn't that an inspiring thought, William? she said.

By gollies, it is, pop said. Let's drink a toast to the good new werld, he said, and ma said, Ever since the dawn of recorded time, mankind has believed in the survival of the fittest and the law of might and the rule of blood and thunder, and now low and behold we've lived to see the day when pure justice will prevail over brute strength, and the people of the earth will settle their differences by law and order and the vote of the majority and not by riot and blood shed and unmittigated force.

It seems hard to believe, but that's what the papers say, pop said, and ma said, It just goes to show that arbitration is mightier than the sword, and when the strong and the weak agree to the principal of fair play for all, there's no more need for armies and battle ships and concentration camps. But there seems to be just one misterious thing, she said.

What one is that? pop said, and ma said, Well, why do the biggest and strongest of the powers insist on having secret weapons and other peoples' millitterry bases and no interference of any kind under any circumstances?

My dear, you better stick to your radio misteries before you get in over your head, pop said.

The result being ma terned on the radio and listened to the end of the Babble Hour, and then she listened to Collusion, and then she did the bridge problem in the paper.

That seems to be the question in the eyes of John Joseph Correll, whose father, Charles Correll, is known to millions of radio listeners as "Andy" in the "Amos and Andy" program. John is pictured with his parents in Hollywood, Calif., as he makes his camera debut on the fourth week of his initial appearance.

20 RCAF Pilots, One Mechanic, Die In Plane Crash

Accident Occurs During Landing Attempt at Estevan

By DAVIS McQUEEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Estevan, Sask., Sept. 16. (CP)—Grim-faced Royal Canadian Air Force personnel today picked through the fire-blackened wreckage of a twin-engined R.C.A.F. Dakota Transport plane which crashed, exploded and burned while attempting to land at the air field here yesterday.

Twenty pilots and one ground crew died in the accident, one of the worst in Canadian aviation history. Only one of the victims, FO. H. H. Cowan, D.F.C., of Ottawa, was immediately identified.

The plane crashed at 10.20 a.m. (C.D.T.) near a ravine at the west end of one of the runways, a place that had become known by local residents as "Death Valley" because of the number of R.C.A.F. accidents which took place there during the war.

R.C.A.F. personnel here were instructed not to divulge any information regarding the disaster. However, it is known that a party of high-ranking officers from Western Air Command headquarters at Winnipeg paid a two-hour visit yesterday to the scene of the crash, some five miles south of this lignite coal mining centre.

Eye-Witness Description

Only eye-witness description of the crash came from Jake Flower, part-owner of a farm near the west side of the field.

Flower said the plane came in low, with landing gear down. "Suddenly it shot almost straight up, stalled, spun around once, and crashed to the ground. It exploded with a loud roar."

A huge pillar of smoke and flame, visible for miles around, shot into the air as the gas tanks blew up, but at least two men were thrown clear of the plane and were still alive when rescue squads reached the scene. One died in a few minutes. The other said "I'm hurt" before he too became unconscious and died.

By the time the flames had been extinguished, the only recognizable part of the plane was the frame of its stabilizer, which somehow survived the fire.

All Ferry Pilots

The 20 pilots aboard the plane were engaged in flying lend-lease Cornell aircraft from Estevan to Fargo, N.D., they had spent the night at Minot, N.D., and were being flown in so that they could take another consignment of ALTA. FARMERS AWAIT WORD ON MEETING IN SASK.

Directors of United Farmers Considering What Further Action Needed

Edmonton, Sept. 16 — (CP)— The Alberta Farmers' Union today awaited word from Saskatoon where the Saskatchewan section of the United Farmers of Canada is holding a directors' meeting to consider further action to strengthen and develop the Alberta non-delivery strike.

The Alberta Farmers' Union, whose 20,000 members are on strike for higher produce prices, last night announced it would attempt to get harvesting employment for 1,200 Edmonton packing-house workers who are being laid off because of sharp declines in livestock deliveries.

Meanwhile the picture in rural areas showed continued tension. A report from Cando, Sask., 30 miles northwest of Saskatoon, said women pickets had been on duty there during the weekend, and on Friday had turned back one grain-laden truck while their husbands were busy completing harvesting.

Edmonton headquarters of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police announced Saturday that eight more arrests were made. For the first time, pickets appeared on highways leading into Edmonton, and early yesterday police reported milk deliveries on a highway south of the city were being stopped. A patrol sent out to investigate the report said "nothing happened."

Deliveries of livestock in Southern Saskatchewan dropped 35 per cent during the weekend. Lay-offs totalled 100 in Saskatoon and 20 in Regina. Shortages of eggs and other dairy produce except milk were felt in Alberta. Reports from Winnipeg said beef and lamb shipments from Southern Alberta had ceased completely.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Sept. 16—(CP)—Synopsis at 7:30 a.m.—Generally clear weather prevails over Eastern Canada and the Eastern United States. Temperatures in the Great Lakes region are near normal whereas further west over northwestern Ontario and the prairies temperatures are much above normal. Cooler air has moved over Alberta and Northwestern Saskatchewan dropping temperatures about 10 degrees. This cooler air is expected to cover Manitoba tomorrow.

Bridgend Arsenal With 30,000 Workers Never Bombed in War

Bridgend, Wales, Sept.16-(CP) It's still an unanswered question why Bridgend Arsenal, one of the mighty munitions plants of the war with 30,000 employees, was never bombed.

Ack-ack guns in and around the arsenal never fired a round. Cardiff less than 20 miles away, took heavy pastings, clearly visible from Bridgend. The occasional bomber which came into killing range of the arsenal's guns was never molested for fear the tracer bullets would reveal the military nature of the area.

Berlin had perfect aerial photographs of its plant and knew its British ordnance survey maps.

One theory is that the Germans hoped some day to capture the factory intact and use it for production of supplies for captured British equipment which they would turn against defending troops in other parts of the country.

POLICE SEEKING BOMB-CARRYING SABOTEUR BAND

Attack Police Station And Wreck Power Lines in Daring Raid In Sarafand Area

Jerusalem, Sept. 16 —(CP)— Palestine police, forewarned by a new threat of intensified terrorism in the Holy Land, searched the Sarafand area today for a bomb-carrying band of saboteurs who attacked a police station and wrecked power lines in a daring raid.

The warning of new violence came from the secret radio of Irgun Zvai Leumi, Jewish underground organization, after police announced the arrest in Haifa of 23 Irgun leaders, a number of the "high" on Britain's "wanted list."

The broadcast said that Irgun, which has claimed responsibility for many of the recent outbreaks of violence in Palestine, planned renewed and almost continuous acts of terrorism. The announcer did not state whether Irgun was responsible for the recent bank holdups in Tel Aviv and Jaffa, in which three Arabs were killed, but he did declare that the secret organization was in need of funds.

Fifteen persons were "detained" in the Jewish district of Zinchron Joseph, Reuters News Agency reported.

Previously, police had indicated that another Jewish organization, the so-called Stern gang, was responsible for the bank robberies.

It was not immediately clear what organization was responsible for the attack last night in the Sarafand area, approximately 15 miles south of Haifa. Official sources said merely that a Jewish band attacked a police station and was driven off after an exchange of shots. Power lines were wrecked by a bomb blast.

London, Sept. 16 —(CP)— Foreign Secretary Bevin today told the Palestine conference that the British-American experts' plan for federalization of the Holy Land into four provinces with limited autonomy was "workable" and could lead to a "final solution."

The text of Bevin's speech was not made public, but conference sources said he made no new proposals.

Three members of the Jewish agency executive flew to Paris today for a meeting of the committee. Jewish sources said the discussions might result in Jewish participation in the London conference.

Their departure followed what one source described as "informal contact" between British and Jewish leaders during the weekend.

The executive members were Prof. Selig Brodetski and Beryl Locker of Britain and Dr. Nahum Goldman, Washington representative.

Soon after they left, delegates representing the seven states of the Arab League resumed their talks with British representatives at Lancaster House.

Conference sources said that the unanimous Arab League rejection of four-way partition, as urged by the British-American committee, had prepared the way for Jewish entry into the conference; now, they said, Britain appeared to be convinced finally that no party to a settlement in Palestine really wanted federalization as announced by the deputy prime minister, Herbert Morrison, in the House of Commons July 31.

AIR COMMANDER KILLED

Brevard, N.C., Sept. 16—(AP)—B-25 bomber flying through pea soup fog crashed into Cold Mountain near here Friday smashing to bits its five occupants including Maj.-Gen. Paul B. Wurtsmith, temporary commander of the 8th Air Force, it was learned last night. William Huber, district Ranger for the Pisgah National Forest, in which Cold Mountain is located, visited the crash scene yesterday. The plane burned after crashing, he said.

No Let-up in Controversy Over Wallace's Speech

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, Sept. 16 (AP)—Every sign pointed today to a hot dispute between Henry A. Wallace and the State Department over future foreign policy speeches by the Secretary of Commerce. Apparently a full-scale cabinet crisis would develop, and, hinge on whether President Truman's stated approval of Mr. Wallace's right to deliver his New York speech last Thursday cleared the way for Mr. Wallace to carry on his fight for what he considers a "more realistic" attitude toward Russia.

If so, a showdown is in the making over the current "tough" policy of State Secretary Byrnes.

No one in either the Wallace camp or at the State Department appears to consider that Mr. Truman's statement Saturday resolved basic policy differences between the two cabinet officers.

The President made these main points:

1. His approval of Mr. Wallace's speech at a press conference last Thursday was intended to cover only Mr. Wallace's right to make the speech, not what he said.
2. The belief that he had endorsed the speech was a "natural misunderstanding" due to the fact that he had not said what he intended to say.
3. There has been and there will be no "significant" change in American foreign policy without consultation with Mr. Byrnes and congressional leaders.

While Republicans assailed the President's "mistake" and questioned the wisdom of letting Mr. Wallace criticize administration foreign policy, Democrats generally hailed Mr. Truman's explanation and expressed hope the incident would be considered cleared up.

RATIONING IN AUSTRALIA TO CONTINUE A YEAR

Will Send to Britain Supplies of Meat, Butter and Sugar

By JACK HOLDSWORTH
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Canberra, Australia, Sept. 16 — (CP)— Prime Minister Joseph Benedict Chifley has announced that rationing of meat, butter, sugar, tea, cotton and other clothing materials in effect in Australia for four years, is almost certain to continue for another year.

Earlier expectations were that the rationing scheme, under which Australians get up to two pounds of meat, six ounces of butter, two pounds of sugar and two ounces of tea a week, would end this year. But the Prime Minister said it may have to continue so that Britain can get much-needed supplies of meat, butter and sugar.

Rationing of tea, cotton and other clothing materials, he pointed out, may have to continue because of world shortages. Tea supplies are insufficient to meet world demand and Australia is receiving about 34 per cent less cotton and linen, and 41 per cent less rayon and silk than before the war.

Final decision on rationing will not be made until the end of the year but, in the meantime, Commonwealth Rationing Commission is arranging for printing of new ration books to replace the current books, which expire at the end of the year.

Egyptian King Shows Friendship To Turkish People

Cairo, Sept. 16. (CP)—King Farouk, of Egypt, whose country probably is the best military base in the Middle East, has underlined his friendship for Turkey at a time when Turks and Russians are at odds over control of the Dardanelles.

The king's informal visit to the Turkish port of Mersin seems significant. King Farouk hardly could have picked a moment when more political significance would have been read into the call.

Now that Turkey is no longer the heart of the Ottaman Empire but an uneasy neighbor of powerful Russia, Arab factions see no danger of Arab states being dominated by the Turks. One factor helping the movement toward co-operation is the common Moslem religion of the Arabs and the Turks. The trend also has the blessing of a good many Britons who would like to see a strong regional defence system friendly to Britain in the Middle East.

Those who favor some sort of Union of Turkey and the Arab states also have been encouraged by recent visits to Turkey of other Arab leaders.

Some Arab leaders, however, contend that any political alliance with Turkey would serve only Britain and Turkey. They argue that Britain is trying to create an eastern bloc to check Russian moves toward the Mediterranean.

STRIKE IN THREE STEEL PLANTS NO NEARER SOLUTION

Union Officials Willing to Have Govt. Mediator on Non-Wage Issues

Toronto, Sept. 16 (CP) — The strike in Canada's three basic steel plants at Hamilton, Sault Ste. Marie and Sydney today entered its 10th week with fresh statements from union and company but no official signs of settlement of the wages-hours dispute.

The United Steel Workers of America (C.I.O.) on strike at the Hamilton plant of Steel Company of Canada, the Sault plant of Algoma Steel Corporation and the Sydney works of Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation, has called its National Advisory Committee to meet at Toronto Tuesday.

The Union's National Director, C. H. Millard, said at Toronto last night that the union is not departing from its claims for an increase of 15 1-2 cents an hour "as the minimum that will meet the situation."

He said however that if the companies would agree to arbitration of non-wage issues it would "make the wage issue settlement easier."

Millard's statement added that the union will not accept proposals by H. G. Hilton, President of the Steel Company of Canada, that the question of a check-off for union dues of Hamilton works employees be put to a vote of all company employees.

Agreeable to Mediator

"We are willing to leave the question of union security to an impartial, government-appointed mediator," said Millard. "If he wishes to take a vote, that is up to him. The settlement of the strike will be by a vote under union auspices and among union members."

This brought a statement last night from Hilton that union security had been the union's aim from the beginning. He termed it "union security—the security against any employee refusing to pay tribute to it, or once having agreed to do so, exercising his right to stop."

Hilton's statement added: "The union obviously is afraid that it will be repudiated if employees of the Hamilton Works are given opportunity to express a majority opinion by a ballot free from coercion or intimidation on whether or not they will pay the C.I.O. for the kind of representation and bargaining which has brought about this disastrous strike."

The company head's statement claimed that "production of coke, pig iron and steel has been maintained with no interruption, and continues."

Passenger Killed As Cars Collide

Toronto, Sept. 16 — (CP) — Raymond Roberts, 47, of Saint John, N.S., died in St. Joseph's Hospital, Toronto, early today from injuries suffered in an accident last night involving four automobiles on the Credit River bridge near Port Credit. Five other persons hurt in the accident are reported by Toronto hospital officials to be in "fairly good" condition.

Ontario Provincial Police said today charges will probably be laid against Charles Burgess, 24, of Toronto, driver of the truck which they had crashed into the coupe in which Roberts was a passenger.

Burgess, his wife, Ruth, 23, and his brother Mark Burgess, 21, all of Toronto, were passengers in the truck.

Roberts and his wife, Jean, 42, were in the coupe driven by Edgar Primmer, 43, of Toronto.

U.S. SENATOR DEMANDS TRIESTE "BE TRULY FREE"

Connally Wants City Symbol of Peace And Security in The World

Paris, Sept. 16 (AP)—Senator Tom Connally of the United States, replying to Foreign Minister Molotov of Russia, today demanded that the peace conference establish Trieste as a truly free state, independent of both Yugoslavia and Italy.

Citing the principles on Trieste agreed upon by the Foreign Ministers Council, Connally asserted these agreements should be honored for the sake of peace.

"Let us make Trieste the symbol of peace and security in the world," the Texas Senator urged.

Earlier, in an hour-long speech to the Italian Political Commission, Deputy Premier Edvard Kardelj of Yugoslavia declared the western powers were attempting "to draw a heavy iron curtain around the Mediterranean Sea."

Continuing the Slav bloc campaign for a dominant Yugoslav position in the projected free territory of Trieste, Mr. Kardelj said Britain and the United States were opposing Slav demands simply to protect their rights and privileges in the Mediterranean.

Speaks His Mind

"They are inspired neither by concern for the population of Trieste, nor for the peoples of the interior, nor for the people of Italy."

Kardelj spoke in support of Yugoslav proposals which would place Trieste within a Yugoslavian customs, monetary and diplomatic union, while its government would be established by an international "Big Four" commission.

The United States reply had been expected to clarify United States foreign policy for the remainder of the conference, dispelling some of the confusion arising from the recent New York speech of Commerce Secretary Henry Wallace.

Some western delegates privately expressed surprise that Mr. Molotov had suggested that an Inter-Allied Commission of the Big Four nations appoint the governor of Trieste. They said that the Big Four foreign ministers council had agreed that the governor should be appointed by the United Nations Security Council.

TERMED PRELUDE TO VICTORY

Dieppe, France, Sept. 16 —(CP Cable)—Terming the Dieppe raid of 1942 "the prelude to victory," the Earl of Bessborough, former Governor - General of Canada yesterday placed a wreath of poppies on the Canadian war memorial here and addressed a reception in the town hall. The ceremony was a special tribute to Canada in which the visitors and local citizens jointly participated.

Duck Season Opens in Northern Areas But Mild Weather May Reduce Bags

(By The Canadian Press)

Duck hunters invaded blinds along Northern Ontario lakes as the season opened today but bright warm weather was expected to reduce their bag, a Canadian Press survey showed. Old timers said it usually takes cold and rain to drive ducks close to shore and within range of hunters' guns.

Hunting of ducks and geese (other than Brant) started in the area north of Southern Bruce county, Lake Simcoe, city of Peterborough, No. 7 Highway and southern Prescott county, and continues until Nov. 29. South of those sections the season runs from Sept. 25 to Dec. 9.

Few geese have been sighted so far. Hunters say they do not expect to shoot any until cold weather in the north sends the black v-shaped flights down from Hudson Bay.

They say more ducks will be available then, too. Most of the ducks shot today spent the summer on the hunting grounds.

Unseasonably warm weather prevailed as numerous hunters journeyed to lakes in the Owen Sound district. Hunters said they believed the number of birds killed would be small until fall migrations started.

Despite the weather numerous hunters were out on the many little lakes dotting territory. Hunting for the first two weeks will be confined to "natives," ducks which spent the summer around Owen Sound. Natives appear as numerous as in other years but bags are rarely large until later in the season.

Reports from North Bay indicated ducks are as plentiful there this season as they have been in the last few years. Geese are scarce. Few bird guns are available but hunters can obtain more ammunition than during the war years.

Few Sudbury district hunters took to the blinds and several said they planned to wait until birds were more plentiful. Black Mallards which spent the summer in the area were the only ducks seen on Nickel Belt lakes. Outfitters said 12-gauge shotgun shells were plentiful but .410-calibre cartridges remained scarce.

Hundreds of duck hunters started out at dawn along Pigeon, Buckhorn and Chemong Lakes in the Peterboro area. Low water kept ducks in open water or close to the rice beds and there was practically no shore shooting except from blinds. The summer hatch of blacks, mallards and blue bills was reported better than last year's but so far hardly any ducks have moved in from the north.

Scores of hunters found lodges in the Bobcaygeon area still filled with United States fishermen and many nimrods spent the night in tents.

4 Firemen Injured, Two Seriously In Toronto Fire

Coal Oil Blast Hurls Men Into Air, Enveloped in Flames

Toronto, Sept. 16—(CP)—Four firemen were injured two seriously, when hurled into the air and enveloped in flames by a coal oil explosion as they fought a fire in a Canadian National Railways storage building in east-central Toronto early today.

Captain Clarence Watson, 52, and fireman Walter Darnborough 26, are in grave condition, hospital attendants said. The other injured are firemen Peter Dawson, 24, and George Bradley, 51.

The four were fighting the blaze from the door of the one-storey stone building when a drum of coal oil exploded inside. They were thrown off their feet and their clothes set ablaze.

Another fireman said they were "like balls of fire." Their companions cut off, the burning clothes of the four men and applied first aid until ambulances arrived.

Firemen said the drum which exploded was the only one in the building. The fire was extinguished within half an hour.

Search for Lama Renewed In Cornwall Area

Cornwall, Sept. 16 —(CP)— The search for William Lama, district farmer wanted for the slaying of his wife and daughter a month ago, took on fresh impetus today following the escape of a man last night from an empty house at nearby Moulinette, where he had apparently been living a week or more.

A man identified as Lama ran across the fields after he was seen by Harry Johnston, a Moulinette resident whose home is directly across the road.

Behind him the man left a long note which told of his movements for the past three weeks and began with the statement: "I, William Lama, did not kill my wife and daughter." Farther down in the note, it said "you will never take me alive."

When he left the house, Johnston said the man was carrying a butcher knife with a 10-inch blade.

The search for Lama started on Aug. 16 following the discovery of the bodies of his wife and nine-year-old daughter, on a lonely farm at Harrison's Corners, 10 miles from Cornwall. Police had almost decided Lama was dead or had left the district until last night's discovery.

Police reached the scene a bare half-hour after the man disappeared into the bush a short distance north of his hide out. A posse combed the district last night, but discovered no trace.

Pontiac Voters Go to Polls In By-Election

Rouyn, Que., Sept. 16—(CP)— Voters in the widely-scattered Pontiac constituency were to vote today in a by-election regarded as the first test for the Dominion government's legislative record since the 1945 general election.

The candidates: Lucien Labelle, Liberal; Hector Belec, Progressive Conservative; Bernard Molloy, C.C.F.; Oscar Roy, Labor Progressive, and Real Caouette, L'Union Des Electeurs De Pontiac.

Campaigning ended Saturday night. For the Liberals, Defence Minister Abbott came to this centre of Northwestern Quebec's gold-mining area to defend the government's policy toward the mines.

He replied to a Progressive-Conservative contention that Canada's gold should be sold in a free market with the statement that "the government has investigated these markets and there is some demand for our gold in Egypt, India, South America and some other countries, but there is only a small demand."

"The United States has the only market which will purchase gold in the quantities that we produce," he declared.

At Noranda a week ago, the Progressive Conservative leader, John Bracken, charged the government had made "clumsy and partial" attempts to compensate the gold mining industry for losses suffered through the revaluation of the Canadian dollar.

"I stand on very simple ground that the gold mining industry in Canada must be kept in a prosperous condition," he said.

Mr. Belec in his campaign contended that unless the government changes its mining policy and relaxes its tax controls a number of mines in Northwestern Quegec will have to close down.

The by-election was made necessary by the death of W. R. McDonald, Liberal, who had held the seat since 1935. Since 1867 the Conservatives have won the seat 11 times and the Liberals 10. In the last general election the Liberal candidate carried the riding with a plurality of more than 7,000 votes.

Sixty Arrested As Police Break Up Looters' Gang

Frankfurt, Sept. 16—(AP) — United States troops who raided a Polish displaced persons camp at Wetzlar has broken up a gang of looters, black marketers and bootleggers whose leader alone is suspected of killing 43 Germans and three Americans, the United States constabulary announced today.

Sixty persons were arrested. The leader, identified only as a police named Balloon, was said to have sworn vengeance on Germans for the slaughter of his parents and three brothers by Nazis in Poland, with an announced goal of killing 10 Germans for every member of his family.

Balloon tried to escape by leaping from a second-storey window, but was recaptured.

Among the others arrested were two fugitives from jail and a suspect in a $50,000 fur robbery in Frankfurt last April.

VETERANS TO RECEIVE PIPE FOR HOMES

The city will receive delivery of sewer pipe, for veterans' houses to be erected in the city, on October 1, City Comptroller Harold Bateman said today. Previously officials here had been informed that no pipe was available and the National Sewer Pipe Company stated that no supplies were in sight.

When informed, however that the pipe was needed for veterans' house the manufacturers stretched a point on their priority list and acceded to the request.

SIXTEEN PIKE HAULED FROM BAY

A party of four Clevelanders, headed by Jim Tossman, had a fine haul of pike while fishing in the bay between here and Point Anne on Sunday. The quartet took sixteen beauties from the water which averaged from three to five pounds each. A number of the fish will grace Cleveland dinner tables this week.

President Gets Tough With Boys Who Jump School

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 16 (AP)—President Truman is reported to have ordered the induction into military service of football stars who have left West Point and Annapolis to play at old home schools, the Commercial Appeal said today in a copyrighted story.

It is understood, said the paper, that Mr. Truman has become pretty irked about the departures from the academies and has ordered his military aide, Maj.-Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, to do something about it.

"This 'something' is reported to be a series of phone calls to the Selective Service officials of States which are harboring 'escapees'—phone calls suggesting that draft boards immediately induct football stars who have left West Point and Annapolis to play at the old home schools."

Such action, the story added, would affect Thomas (Shorty) McWilliams of Mississippi State, Clyde Scott of Arkansas, and Notre Dame's Bob Kelly.

planes back to the United States today. They were attached to No. 124 communication Squadron, Rockcliffe Airport, Ottawa.

Condition of all bodies was described as "pretty grim". With the exception of FO. Cowan, names of all victims were withheld pending notification of next-of-kin.

Local civilian pilots could only guess at the cause of the accident. Some thought it just possible that the plane had become caught in a downdraft of air, thus causing it to undershoot the field.

Names of Six Released

Ottawa—(CP)—Air Force headquarters today announced the names of six more R.C.A.F. personnel killed in the crash of a Dakota transport yesterday at Estevan, Sask.

Names of the remaining 14 personnel are being withheld pending confirmation that next-of-kin have been notified.

SWING IN DARK

Meadville, PA., 16-(AP)- William Hughes heard a scratching noise in his sleep last night.

Thinking it was a mouse, he reached for a club and took a swing in the dark.

He flicked on the lights to find he'd knocked out a burgalar, about to climb out a window with $100 from Hughes' billfold.

Hotel Bars Passed Into History 30 Years Ago Today

Thirty years ago today, September 16, 1916, bartenders in city hotels polished their mirrors and glasses for the last time; the "boys in the back room" left their cribbage boards and other games, and said farewell to the "wet days" of the bar.

For the barrooms closed that day when the Ontario Temperance Act came into force and Belleville with other "wet" communities renounced the brass rail, the sawdust floor and other things familiar with the days when a fellow could drop in a hotel for a quick one.

There were seventeen hotels in the city in those days and these included the Ferry House, the Canadian Hotel, Queen's, Victoria, Balmoral, Quinte, Windsor, Anglo - American, City, Crystal, Ontario, Hastings, Belvedere, O'Brien House, Kyle House, St. George's Hotel and the Docter's Hotel.

Of this number ten have closed their doors permanently and have been converted into shops and stores and dwelling places. Of the seventeen that took down the bar mirrors and fixtures three decades ago, the Quinte, Queen's, Crystal, Canadian, City, Belvedere and Docters still remain hostels.

The day passed off uneventfully, according to oldtimers, and although many of the boys shed a tear at the passing of the good old days, it was done in a quiet manner.

Unusual Number Of Foxes Reported In Rural Areas

Whether due to favorable living conditions or to the absence of extensive hunting operations during the past few seasons, farmers in practically all parts of Hastings County are reporting unusual numbers of foxes in the rural areas.

Farmers in the Foxboro area report it nothing unusual to see two or three foxes slinking around the knolls and fences during the evening hours, apparently looking for some stray fowl. As consequence farmers are keeping a close eye on their fowls and are seeing that they are properly housed each night.

Fur buyers report that fox skins this year are expected to net the trapper and hunter up to $5 each for prime pelts. This was the top price paid last season.

The hunting season for foxes does not start until November with buyers stating pelts are better if the hunter waits until near the end of the month.

Scotch Dance Centre Of Attraction At Shannonville Fair

Bonnie Marie Nash, ten-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Nash, Turnbull Street, was one of the centres of attraction at Shannonville "World's Fair" on Saturday afternoon as dressed in colorful Highland fashion the little girl delighted her admiring audience with a series of Scotch dancing numbers.

Miss Nash accompanied members of the Belleville Kilties band to the fair and with well-known "Jamie" Clark as her piper, danced the difficult Scotch numbers.

A dancing pupil of Barbara Diment, Miss Nash has received tutoring in Scotch dancing by "Jamie" Clark and during the past summer the two have given freely of their talents at local charity shows. The little girl has been making a name for herself in the entertainment field and recently was heard over the Kingston radio station in a song and dance number and is scheduled to appear soon on a program at the Belleville station.

Mr. Clark recently celebrated his 78th birthday.

Shannonville Fair Attracts Crowd of 5,000; Fine Program Of Many Features Presented

Favored by perfect weather, by ideal ground conditions and with a crowd estimated in the neighborhood of 5,000 enjoying to the full a fast moving program of sports, contests and horse racing, the 1946 edition of the Shannonville "World's Fair" was voted a splendid success on Saturday afternoon by President Syd Fitzgerald and his board of directors.

Long before noon and the scheduled opening of the fair program the crowd began to gather and until mid-afternoon long lines of fully laden cars streamed into the grounds to make the turnstiles click merrily. With a brief respite during the supper hour activities again surged forward as a fun loving crowd gathered for old time fiddling and step dancing contests, while dancing continued until the midnight hour. Rhythm Ranch Riders of radio station CJBQ provided the music for the dancing.

Great Day For Kiddies

All the atmosphere of a much larger provincial fair was afforded by the barking of concessionaires on the fair midway with the kiddies having a big time riding the merry-go-round and enjoying the many sweets and different drinks offered.

A parade of township school children, headed by the Belleville Kilties Band and the Trenton Boys' Band, scheduled the opening of the fair program shortly after the dinner hour. Six different township schools, the children gaily decked out for the occasion, marched in the parade. Marysville school won first prize with Shannonville taking second and Melrose winning third prize.

Participation in the parade was not the full extent of the Kilties band activities and throughout the afternoon the skirl of the pipes could be heard as the pipers entertained a large crowd of spectators partial to the accepted mode of Scotch entertainment.

Fine Produce Exhibit

Despite the dryness of the summer which definitely was not conducive toward ideal gardening, Shannonville farmers demonstrated that good grain and vegetables could be grown. The agricultural hall was literally "jam packed" with products of the farm and home with the ladies' department taking up considerable space in the building. One of the features of the agricultural building was the cheese show with Alva McAllister, R.R. 4 Belleville and Clarence Mastin sharing honors in prize money.

The cattle exhibit, while not large, compared favorably with other years as Holsteins were shown by Dave Hollinger of Stirling; Ayrshires by Elmer Woods of Crookston and Jerseys by George Jarrell of Corbyville. The horse show also provided its customary interest as general purpose teams and other classes were shown.

Horse exhibitors were John Maracle, Leo Welsh, Jack Farrell, John Green, John Black, D. E. Bonisteel, and Howard Lewis. Specials winners were Leo Welsh, heavy draught; John Black, general purpose; John Maracle, mare and foal; best halter broken colt; and best 1946 foal; Erle Bonisteel, best mare or gelding; Jack Farrell best two-year-old colt shown.

15 Entries in Baby Show

There were fifteen entrants in the baby show which provided its share of interest. Tommy Mason acted as master of ceremonies for this popular event and held the interest of his audience with that gift of voice for which he is well known.

In the under six months class of the baby show Linda Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Johnson of Shannonville was adjudged the winner with other winners being Bobby Brant, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brant; Stanley Uens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Uens, and Kenneth Vesterfelt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Vestervelt. Six to twelve months winners were Franklin Reid, Deseronto; Richard Cook, Shannonville; Dale Reid, Belleville R.R. 4, and Jeremiah Brant, of Shannonville. Ten-months-old twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Walsh of Corbyville won the admiration of the crowd and were awarded a special prize.

Largest Family.

Mr. and Mrs. Manson King of Enterprise were just about the proudest and happiest parents on the grounds when they were declared the winner of the "largest family" contest. Mr. and Mrs. King had nine of their children at the fair and admitted there was one son who did not make the fifty-mile trip to the fair. The oldest couple on the grounds was Mr. and Mrs. Fred Davis of Melrose.

A county fair would not be complete without a ball game and Shannonville was no exception. On a rather rough diamond the Read nine proved their ability afield and at bat as they downed a team of volunteers. Oh, yes, the score. Some said it was 10-1.

In the step dancing contest Harry Loft was best followed by Luke Murphy and Roy Watts. The old-time fiddlers' contest was won by Jerry Clement and Roy Watts and Thurlow township defeated Tyendinaga in the tug-of-war in two straight pulls.

Sawing Contest.

The log sawyers also had their innings with the team of Charles Bradshaw and Roy McLaren sinking their crosscut saw through a hefty black oak in 42½ seconds. Charles Bates and William English were just one half second behind as they finished in 43 seconds.

Another contest which evoked considerable interest was the ladies' nail driving competition. The current nail shortage was made just a little more acute as Mrs. Jean Miller, Mrs. P. Weese, Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Duncan finished in that order.

Horse racing enthusiasts also had their innings and throughout the afternoon the pound of hoofs on the dry track could be heard as the different heats of harness and running races were run off.

For the first time since before the war farm machinery dealers were on hand with displays of different types of machinery. Bateman Motors of Belleville exhibited threshers, tractors, electric fences and other farm equipment, while Bonn Motors of Belleville demonstrated jeeps and various types of power driven equipment.

VOICE RESTORED BY DRUG

Goldendale, Wash., Sept. 16 — (AP) — Mark Smith, 51-year-old Klickitat county farmer, today credited sodium pentathol, the so-called "truth serum," with restoring his voice, lost 28 years ago in a German artillery barrage in France. Doctors confirmed that sodium pentathol was administered — first case in this knowledge of its use in restoring speech. Smith said he knew his vocal cords had been all right during his speechless travail, because "I've been known to talk and sing and cuss in my sleep."

IN MEMORIAM

BLACKBURN — In loving memory of Mrs. Elizabeth Blackburn, who died September 16th., 1942.

As I gaze on your picture that hangs on the wall,
Your smiles and your welcome I often recall;
I miss you and mourn you in silence unseen,
And dwell on the memories of days that have been.
Dear is the grave where mother is laid,
Sweet is the memory that never will fade;
Flowers may wither, leaves fade and die;
If some do forget you, never will I.
—Greatly missed by David.

LEWIS — In memory of our brother, F/O. Duncan Hamilton Lewis, who was killed in action, September 13th., 1943.

His charming ways and smiling face
Are a pleasure to recall.
He had a kindly word for each
And died beloved by all.
—Deeply mourned by Donald, Lenyeen and Roddy.

LEWIS — In loving memory of Duncan, dearly loved son of Laurie and Edith Lewis, killed in action, September 13th., 1943.

His charming ways and smiling face
Are a pleasure to recall.
He had a kindly word for each,
And died beloved by all.

Wage-Hour Disputes Will Be Top Subjects at Conventions

By JACK WILLIAMS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 14 — (CP)—Current industrial wage-hours disputes are expected to be among top subjects at conventions of Canada's two major labor organizations — the Trades and Labor Congress and Canadian Congress of Labor — which get underway within the next two weeks.

The conventions are the first to be held in two years. The Trades and Labor Congress will meet in Windsor starting Sept. 18 and continuing until probably Sept. 27. The Canadian Congress of Labor will meet in Toronto Sept. 23-27.

One of the most contentious items likely to come before the T.L.C. meeting is the position of the International Association of Machinists. The Machinists Union has been expelled from the American Federation of Labor for non-payment of dues. The A.F.L. promptly called on the T.L.C., with which the Machinists Union is affiliated in Canada, to take similar action but Percy Bengough, T.L.C. president, opposed the suggestion.

Big Topics

The T.L.C. convention will get underway with Mr. Bengough's presidential address and the meetings will be attended by C. John Jarman, general secretary of the British Seamen's Union who will attend as a fraternal delegate.

While wages and hours will be a big topic at the T.L.C. meeting, the C.C.L. discussions on this subject are likely to be even more interesting. A majority of the unions involved in present disputes are affiliated with the C.C.L., including steel, electrical and rubber workers.

The question of just how far the unions involved in negotiations or disputes should depart from their original demands — which have gone as high as 25 cents an hour — is likely to be one of the hottest topics.

Speakers at the C. C. L. convention will include Lord Addison, British Secretary of State for Dominion affairs and Sir Godfrey Inch, parliamentary secretary to the British Ministry of Labor.

Nine Fatalities During Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

There were nine fatal accidents reported in Eastern Canada during the weekend, three of them motor mishaps and two shooting accidents but only one drowning.

At Toronto, police investigated the death of Frederick Clack, 49, in a hospital Saturday as a result of head injuries, apparently suffered in a fall. The injuries were discovered after he had been taken to a police station.

Other Toronto fatalities: Sam Thompson, 45-year-old window cleaner, killed Saturday in a 35-foot fall; Alex Curts, 28, fatally injured Sunday while cleaning a .22 rifle in the basement of his home, and George Allbright, 13-year-old suburban East York boy, who died Sunday in hospital after suffering a heart attack while practicing rugby football.

Near Delhi, Edward Halpin, 28, was burned to death Sunday after his car overturned and burst into flames, Norman Hart, 38, was killed Sunday when his car crashed into a truck at Thorold.

In Quebec, Norman Dumont, 8, was accidentally shot in the head and killed by a six-year-old playmate at Val D'Or. A hunting rifle owned by the victim's father was being unloaded from a car after a hunting trip when the accident occurred.

Alex Nitachkie, 18, drowned while swimming near Poltimore and Monique Hamel, 17, was killed at Granby when his bicycle was struck by an automobile.

Five Communist Leaders Given Eight-day Remand

London, Sept. 16 — (CP)—Five Communist leaders charged with conspiracy in the organization of a squatter invasion of vacant London luxury apartments received an eight-day stay of arraignment today when prosecutor H. A. K. Morgan announced that he did not intend to "go on with the case today."

Counsel for the Communists agreed to postponement of the hearing until Sept. 24.

Arraigned were Edward F. Bramley, 40, secretary of the London district Communist party and a member of the London county council; Joyce Allergant, a Westminster city councillor; Ernest Stanley Henderson, 30, secretary of the Hammersmith Communist party; Morris Israel Rosen, a Stepney councillor, and Gabriel Carritt, a Westminster city councillor.

The formal charge accused them of "conspiring together with other persons to incite persons to trespass on property; and aiding, abetting and directing such trespass against the peace."

Police reinforcements blanketed the whole Covent Garden area in the heart of London shortly before the arraignment.

The government steadily tightened restrictions and appeared to be gaining confidence that it would achieve an early solution of the eight-day-old crisis, although 1,500 squatters still were sitting tight in west-end luxury apartments.

Police confiscated leaflets on "the case for the squatters" and combed the main squatter centres during the week-end, presumably for evidence for more arrests.

British Steamship Services Short of Peacetime Normal

(Editor's Note: The following story, summarizing British Commonwealth Passenger Steamship Company's wartime losses, is the first of two dealing with the outlook for Britain's merchant fleets.

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 16 (CP) —Many months will pass before the British Commonwealth's passenger steamship services get back to peacetime normal.

While airlines expand their trans-ocean services and start new ones, steamship companies are handicapped by continued government control of their best vessels, heavy war losses and overcrowded shipyards.

Only one-tenth of the big passenger ships left afloat are so far being refitted for regular service. New liners will not be completed until 1947, or later.

"Impossible to submit any estimate"; "In all probability not before 1948"; "Unable to give any information at the moment" — these are shipowners' answers to the question: "Can you estimate when your company expects to be back to its pre-war passenger capacity?"

A Canadian Press suvey of major passenger steamship operators with offices in the United Kingdom shows 11 well-known liners are undergoing reconversion, their war work finished. More will likely be released as these 11 leave their shipyard berths.

Provide Only Fraction.

They will provide only a small fraction of pre-war passenger capacity.

The situation of Cunard White Star limits is typical. Its pre-war passenger tonnage of 434,689 has been cut to 345,860 by war losses and permanent acquisition by the British government. The entire fleet is still under government control, except for the 83,673-ton Queen Elizabeth undergoing refit at Southampton.

She starts a Southampton-New York service October 16. Cunard chairman Sir Percy Bates said release of the 81,235-ton Queen Mary and 35,677-ton Mauretania will come "in such a manner and at such dates as will make sense with the real labor situation in the trades that belong to the reconditioning of ships."

Perhaps they will be derequisitioned in the autumn; but in any case they cannot be in service before 1947. There is no hint yet when such famous Cunarders as Aquitania, 33,786 tons and Scythia, 19,761 tons, will be freed.

Canadian Pacific's ocean-going passenger tonnage has been cut from 274,868 tons to 88,010. Gone from its list are the Empress of Britain, Empress of Canada, Duchess of Atholl, Empress of Asia, Duchess of York, and Montrose, lost through enemy action, and the old Empress of Russia, burned out at Liverpool.

Only the 20,022-ton Duchess of Richmond—now renamed Empress of Canada—has been released for refit. The 20,123-ton Duchess of Bedford, 21,833-ton Empress of Australia and 26,032-ton Empress of Scotland (the former Empress of Japan), are still on government service.

TWO BROTHERS DIE QUICKLY

Nauvoo, Ill., Sept. 16—(AP)—Earl Golden, 46, toppled dead off his horse during a street parade at the annual Nauvoo grape festival yesterday. Five minutes later, Martin Golden, 52, a few blocks away among thousands of parade watchers, learned of his brother's death and fell dead. Physicians said heart disease caused both deaths.

The magic circle

1 Producing goods to load the outgoing ships creates more business for all. For instance . . .

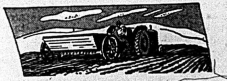
2 Farmers raise more products to be sold in other countries . . .

3 There are more jobs in factories, as more goods are manufactured to sell abroad . . .

4 We get better values at home, too, for it costs less to make goods in large quantities . . .

5 The money we get from our foreign customers helps us to pay for goods they make and we need . . .

6 So our factories get the imported materials they must have : : : like tin, chemicals, fibres : : :



7 Some of these materials become binder twine, bags, insecticides and other items that help our farmers raise and market their crops . . :

8 And we all get a variety of things we cannot grow here, such as tropical fruits, coffee . . : for our tables . . .

9 Or cottons and linens, for our clothes . . . rugs for our floors . . . gasoline for our cars : : :

10 So everyone has better times, more money to spend, and better merchandise to spend it on.

Look at these ships. When both ride low in the water, we have good times. Do you know why?

The Outgoing ship is loaded with goods we make, and production of these goods makes work and wages. The Incoming ship is loaded with foreign goods. These goods also make work and wages; they are either used in manufacturing or retailed in our stores.

This Magic Circle of Foreign Trade pays more than one-third of all the wages and salaries in Canada. It creates work equal to 3 jobs in every 8. This means your pay envelope, your job, or your business profit—not just some other fellow's.

And here's how you can help to keep the Magic Circle producing good times for you: First, be cheerful and patient when you are asked to wait a little longer for merchandise you want. Give the people who produce it a chance to ship all they can overseas, for if we do not supply our foreign customers NOW, we will lose them. Second, put your best into everything you produce, for some of it will find its way into foreign markets : : : where it will either make or mar our future business.

Everyone who buys or sells goods abroad helps create prosperity in Canada. That is why we have a Foreign Trade Service in the Department of Trade and Commerce. It maintains Trade Commissioners in 29 countries, and an experienced export and import staff at head office, to collect the most up-to-date information on foreign markets, and give practical help to every business that wishes to buy or sell in other countries.

New United Church Moderator

The new Moderator of the United Church of Canada, the Rev. Dr. T. W. Jones, minister of Calvary United Church, Montreal, has been described as "a faithful parish minister, an apostle of Christian hope, faith, of charity . . . a simple, ardent, evangelistic lover of our blessed Lord." Dr. Jones has since 1912 been the pastor of Calvary Church, and has won a deep place in the hearts of his people.

The Moderator sees in himself "as the pastor of an average United Church" and is proud of this honor.

Montreal Gazette referring to this remark, comments, "in this humble spirit he himself does honor to all those ministers who are serving the church with faithfulness from one end of the country to the other."

Dr. Jones succeeds to the highest office in the United Church. His devotion and his interest in his people will assure the entire membership of the church a term of office which will bear the marks of his faithful service in his congregation and in the wider field of the entire communion.

Ration Books

Canadians have loyally supported rationing during the war and since the end of the struggle and will gladly continue to do so as long as there is need that the public should be protected from hoarding by some persons and there should be necessity of guaranteeing fair distribution. The people have accepted this condition as their duty to themselves and to others and to the nations of the world, many of whom have been sorely in need of food.

So Canadians were naturally shocked at the thefts of a number of ration books during last week in several parts of Canada. Their hope is that the guilty may be caught and faced with their crimes and receive the penalty for such a crime against the nation and every individual citizen.

Fortunately it is not likely that the thefts will cause any considerable drain upon Canada's stock of supplies. An official in Montreal points out that these thefts in the number of ration books taken amounts to about one-fifth of one per cent of the books to be issued, which is somewhere about 12,000,000. While there is a considerable amount of food involved through the thefts, it is not immediately available in quantity for the books cover a period of about eighteen months.

O. W. Rodomar, Administrator of Consumer Rationing, is of the opinion that the thefts can be laid to the fact that counterfeit trafficking in ration books has been impossible as counterfeiters would be quickly arrested because of their inability to match genuine ration coupons. He also doubts that a nation-wide ring is involved.

Meanwhile the hunt goes on for these thieves who would try to make profit out of the nation's and the world's necessity for rationing of foods. Every true citizen will hope and pray that the culprits are caught and will do everything that is possible to help bring the thieves to justice.

For a week now the people across the Dominion from coast to coast have been attending the distribution centres and receiving ration books in the legal way and sixty thousand voluntary workers have given their time and energy towards this national task for which a profound debt is owing.

The Crab Apple

A writer in the New York Times pays a tribute to one of the products of the orchard and with this everyone will agree for he speaks of the crab apple and the jelly which comes from this fruit. The Times writer knows his rural life and in this article proves how deeply his affections are associated with the life of the farm and nature. He says:

"Crab apples are ripe. They hang like scarlet jewels in the late summer sun on a thousand hills and in the dooryards and along the garden borders; and beneath the trees the windfalls are like a froth of red and golden bubbles in the grass. And on 10,000 shelves are glasses of fresh honey-amber crab apple jelly.

"The crab apple is a venerable fruit still full of the tart tang of the wild. It is the native apple of the North, sturdy and persistent, and it still represents a concentration of elementary sturdy qualities. The fruit itself is small, for quick growth and ripening. The flesh is firm and crisp and full of juice. The flavor has something of late frost and stony hillsides, a concentration that has a kind of acid independence; it has enough flavor for an apple three times its size.

"It's that flavor which makes crab apple jelly so well worth the making. Jelly made from the juice of the crab's big cousins may have the same body, the same general color, but never the same taste. Whoever distinguishes, by name, among jellies made from Winesaps or Russets or Northern Spies? And who ever fails to give crab apple jelly its full title?

"Crabs also make a rather special cider, though you'll almost never find it in the market. Only those with their own trees and their own press ever make it, and they only if they have a discerning palate and the patience to gather a few bushels of crabs at a proper time and put them through the mill.

"You'll find that tang, too, in springtime, when the crab is in bloom. But the blossom fragrance is only a promise; here's performance, here's the fruit itself in full red ripeness on the bough."

A Beef About Beef

Calgary, the metropolis of the finest range country in North America, ought to serve good roast beef in its public eating places. If this city is to have even one distinctive and outstanding dish, it ought to be the very best roast beef in the world.

Has it? Not by a darned sight!

Good roast beef — the best roast beef — is the rolled rib roast nicely permeated by streaks of juicy fat, browned to a turn on the outside, crisp of crust, and full of piping-hot, claret-colored sap when you puncture the pink heart of an inside slice.

Roast beef should be served in slices as thin as a sweetheart's whisper. It should be available well-done or nicely rare. It ought to dissolve without chewing. There should be Yorkshire pudding, with a fine blend of crackling exterior and melting interior, on the side.

—Calgary Albertan.

Cosmic Rays

The scientists are monkeying with the buzz-saw again. Some of the best of them at MIT are going up 40,000 feet in a B-29 gunning for cosmo rays, which, if a layman understands the subject at all, come in from Lord knows where and explode into particles, called mesons, that are millions of times more muscular than aything released by an atom bomb.

We wish the professors wouldn't do these things. If they should get in the way of a meson they would be greatly missed; moreover, they have already given the world more knowledge than it can ever comprehend, let alone use, and, furthermore, there are so many needed things they might be doing right here on the ground.

Let them invent, for instance, the vest-pocket radar the Chattanooga Times is agitating for; a device that will tell a shopper at a glance whether a watermelon is ripe. The deuce with cosmic rays!

JUST FOLKS

LITTLE BATHING MISS

Lovely miss, you're very cute
In your first, gay bathing suit.
You are radiant with charms.
Beautiful those dimpled arms,
And those chubby legs are such
I admire them very much.
This I think when you I see:
Nothing prettier could be.

Dressed to play upon the sand—
Pail and shovel in your hand,
Say it though I never should,
Looking at you does me good.
Hear your doting grandpa sing.
"You are an exquisite thing!
Seeing you arrayed like that Makes my heart go pit-a-pat."

This I think as off you run
Romping in the morning sun:
Men find strength to dare and do
Just for little girls like you.
Just because they can behold
Little maidens, five years old,
Dressed for swimming, now and then,
They are better, braver men.

Vanderwater, Liberal, by a majority of 3768; in Hastings-Peterborough, Dr. A. T. Embury defeated John S. Marshall, Liberal, by a majority of 3450, and in Prince Edward - Lennox, John Hubbs defeated H. H. Horsey, Liberal, by a majority of 781. Mr. Tummon's majority in Belleville was 1296.

There is an abundant crop of mushrooms this year.

It is reported that the G.T.R. stone quarries at Foxboro will be closed today for an indefinite period.

Have all the dogs been registered? Judging from the number of dogs running at large on Taylor's Hill it would appear that there are more dogs in that locality this year than last year.

Yesterday was the opening of the shooting season for small game other than ducks and the parties that went out were generally successful. The largest bag we have heard of was brought in by A. B. Callery and R. Palmer of Cannifton; they shot 41 black squirrels and 7 partridge. Stephen Eustace, of this city and M. Vanderwater of Sidney Township, got 18 black squirrels and 2 partridge. R. Foy and W. Brown bagged 17 squirrels and one partridge. R. Bateman, T. Gay and Hull Austin got 7 partridge. Harry Hamilton got 7 snipe this morning.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

(By the Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Sept. 16 (CP) —While there has been no official word and probably never will be, it is understood that the most important military result of the visit to Canada of Field Marshal Montgomery, is consideration of a plan by which Canadian division chief potential will receive operational training with the British army.

Through the peacetime plan, high-ranking officers of the Canadian active peacetime army would be switched frequently to British operational commands so they could obtain the feel and experience of handling large forces. This has always been a Canadian training weakness as there has never been large peacetime formations to handle in Canada.

For instance, it is understood that the program might be launched soon with some of the more likely-looking Canadian officers going to the British army of occupation in Germany where they could be given commands of large formations and get experience that would not otherwise be available.

It is understood that the Field Marshal and Lt.-Gen. Charles Foulkes, chief of the Canadian General Staff, have agreed on such a program, but final decision on how it will be carried out has not been made.

Meanwhile, a decision will have to be made soon on the disposition of Lt.-Gen. Guy Simmonds of Kingston, who is looked on by the Imperial staff as one of Canada's most promising young soldiers.

At present he is attending the War Staff College in England, but in a few months his course will be completed and a decision will have to be made as to where he will be posted.

Speculation persists that he may go into the British army, where it is known he would be welcomed by the Field Marshal, but there also is a possibility that a special spot may be found for him in the Canadian peacetime active force.

Labor: Date of the proposed Dominion-Provincial Labor Conference has been set for October 7 and both Dominion and Provincial labor departments are busy moulding policies which they will support at the meeting in Ottawa.

Discussions are expected to cover the whole scope of labor legislation, but they will centre on the position of the Dominion in labor jurisdiction now that the war is over and the possibility of establishing a peacetime national labor code.

Labor Minister Mitchell will preside at the meeting which will be attended by provincial labor ministers and members of their advisory staffs.

Lt. Tweed Blamed For Priest's Death And 4 Gumanians

By DOUG LOVELACE

Guam, Sept. 16—(AP)—A group of 100 Guamanians, led by a Catholic priest, demonstrated with boos and placards today against Lieut. George Ray Tweed, the man who eluded the Japanese during the 31-month wartime occupation of Guam.

They blamed Lieut. Tweed for indirectly causing the deaths of a Catholic father and four Guamanians at the hands of the Japanese.

Lieut. Tweed returned with a new automobile as a gift for a Guamanian friend he credited with helping save his life during a precarious existence dodging incessant Japanese pursurers during the war.

As the presentation ceremony opened the crowd marched into the plaza muttering angrily and bearing signs such as: "Our necks for a Chevrolet," and "Be square, be decent, be off."

Lieut. Tweed strode toward the marchers and snatched a sign reading "What about Tweed's desertion in the face of the enemy?" and tore it into shreds, stamping it under foot.

Catholic father Oscar Calvo, explaining the demonstration he led, said Lieut. Tweed in his book "Robinson Crusoe U.S.N." had accused Father Duenas, another Guam priest, of "betraying the secret of the confessional."

Father Calvo said the Japanese tortured and eventually killed Father Duenas.

Lieut. Tweed related in his book that one of his benefactors confessed to Father Duenas where Lieut. Tweed was hiding and the priest told many Guamanians. Eventually word reached the Japanese, who tortured the priest until he told. But word reached Lieut. Tweed in time for him to escape.

Tweed, 43, and from San Diego, Calif., was the only survivor of six Americans who escaped capture when the Japanese seized Guam. Rescued by a warship in July, 1944, he received the Legion of Merit Medal.

Lieut. Tweed said he felt the demonstration inspired by Father Calvo did not denote the sentiment of most Guamanians. Several natives came forward to shake Tweed's hand. The Guam post of the American Legion presented him an honorary membership.

Replacement Of Sidewalks Delayed By Lack of Cement

With the current shortage of cement holding up practically all types of construction there is a possibility that replacement of sidewalks scheduled for Belleville streets this season will not be completed until next year.

This was the information gained by the Chamber of Commerce last week when they investigated complaints of sidewalk replacement contracts not being completed.

"The answer is that there is but little cement to be had and despite the fact that the contract for replacement of sidewalks has been let, the contracts cannot be completed until cement is available," stated a spokesman of the Chamber of Commerce.

According to the spokesman the cement which is available is being released on a quota basis and with the current shortage of housing, this type of construction has a high priority. In view of this fact there will be no effort made by the city to obtain a priority for cement for sidewalk purposes. Consequently work on sidewalks which were scheduled for replacement this year, will be delayed until more cement is available.

Settlement Of Trucking Strike Appears Brighter

New York, Sept. 16—(AP)—Prospects of a settlement of the trucking strike that has shut down many industries and food stores in New York City appeared brighter today despite a breakdown in negotiations between the union and an employers' committee.

The solid front of employers was broken by two large firms which offered the union a reduction in working hours and a $7.40 weekly pay increase and union representatives unanimously agreed to recommend the proposal to their membership at a meeting tomorrow.

Mayor William O'Dwyer's advisory committee reported the offer made by the H. C. Bohack Company, Inc., and Daniels and Kennedy after the unsuccessful ocnclusion of the committee's talk with organized employer representatives and officials of Locals 80, 282 and 816, International Brotherhood of Teamsters (AFL).

ANNUAL POLIO SCARE

The cause of acute anterior poliomyelitis (inflamation of the grey matter in the spinal cord) physicians believe it is an invisibly minute organism or virus that passes thru an unglazed porcelain filler. This virus is given off from the patient, and probably also from some well persons who are in close association with the patient (carriers), in the secretions from nose and mouth (coughing, sneezing and conversation spray) and also in the intestinal discharges.

Infected persons (perhaps not yet ill but about to come down with the disease) and healthy "carriers" (persons who from intimate association with patients acutely ill of the disease have picked up the infective organism or virus and may therefore spread the infection to others, whether themselves susceptible or not) may be the source of a few otherwise inexplicable outbreaks of infantile paralysis, but this possibly hardly warrants the extremes of "quarantine" imposed or adopted in some communities.

If a swimming pool or a sea, lake or river bathing place is used by a large number of people the water is bound to be more or less poluted, infected, contaminated and therefore a potential source of infection to any one who bathes or swims or dives there—infection with typhoid, septic sore throat, sinusitis, ototis media (middle ear inflammation) from invasion by Streptococcus strains,—and perhaps also—we do not know but just believe likely—the organism or virus of poliomyelitis.

Whether children should be denied the privilege of swimming places when there is a polio scare on, depends, I should say, not on the mere possibility that the disease may be so acquired, but rather on the experience of regular patrons of the swimming place—if they have not have more of their share of such infections it is fair to assume that the swimming place is safe.

In any circumstance, whether there is a polio scare or not, every one using a pool or bathing place patronized by the general public should practice these precautions:

1. Never take any water into the mouth.
2. Before entering the water plug both nostrils lightly with some lamb's wool or some oily cotton batting (not absorbent cotton). While in swimming breathe entirely through the mouth.
3. If you have perforated ear drum or any chronic ear trouble, plug both ears lightly in in the same way, before entering the water—especially if the water is cold. Vertigo or disturbance of equilibrium produced by sudden impact of cold water on the sensitive internal ear structure, may cause serious helplessness and even drowning of an expert.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

TWINS

Would it be possible for identical twins of the same sex to be born to a couple neither of whom have any knowledge of twins in their families as far back as three generations? (Mrs. A.H.L.)

Answer—There is no means of predicting whether a couple may or may not have twins, fraternal or identical. Such multiple births seem to occur more frequently in some families, but then; so do politicians.

BRITTLE NAILS

Four months ago I began taking your Iodin Ration. My finger nails were awfully broken and split and I couldn't seem to get them to grow. Now they are long and beautiful, no more broken or split nails. (Mrs. F.J.)

Answer—Brittle nails and dry, prematurely graying, excessively falling hair, and sallow or waxy complextion are common manifestations of iodine deficiency. On written request (no clipping, please) I'll mail you Instructions for Taking an Iodin Ration, if you provide stamped self addressed envelepe.

MYOTOIA

Quinine treatment, as suggested in your pamphlet, is the only thing that has loosened the muscles and prevented cramps in belly, back and chest in my husband's case—diagnosed as Myotonia or Thomsen's disease. Please send information to our physician here. (Mrs.R.M.)

Answer—I'm sorry, I have no further information than that given in the pamphlet—which I'll be glad to send if the physician asks for it.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Do the northern lights make a noise?

Hundreds of competent persons, including explorers, scientists and travellers, have reported that in the far north a faint but characteristic sound sometimes accompanies brilliant displays of the northern lights when they are close to the ground and when great stillness prevails.

Those who have heard the "singing of the northern lights" compare the sound variously to the rustling of a silk dress, the whistling of a sharp squall of wind in the rigging of a ship, the hissing of a sword moving rapidly through the air, the crackling of steel sleigh-runners on frosty snow and the swishing of a whip.

According to many of the reports, the sound increases and decreases as the aurora brightens and fades, and its rhythm is about the same as that of human breathing. It seems that the faint sound is heard only on cold nights when the observer is standing still and listening intently.

This curious phenomenon has never been satisfactorily explained. Whether the noise is actually produced by the aurora is a disputed question.

Most authorities maintain that the northern lights could not produce a sound audible on the ground, because there are always many thousands of miles in the rarified upper atmosphere, where conditions approach a vacuum and through which sound could not travel. They believe that the faint noise attributed to the northern lights is actually produced by the sudden freezing of the moisture in the observer's breath. Roald Amundsen, discoverer of the South Pole, heard the "voice of the aurora" in both the Arctic and Antarctic and accepted the freezing-breath theory.

Others suggest that if a noise accompanies the northern and southern lights, it may be due to small brush discharges of electricity from snow or bushes, somewhat like St. Elmo's Fire, which is sometimes seen on elevated objects when the earth's voltage differs considerably from that of the atmosphere.

YOUTH PROGRAM IS BOOSTED BY HALIFAX MAYOR

J. E. (Gee) Ahern is Veteran Athlete and Sports Columnist Who Starred on Ice and Diamond

Halifax, Sept. 16 (CP) — Halifax youngsters today are enjoying a modern, carefully-planned recreational program for which they largely thank Mayor J. E. (Gee) Ahern—himself a veteran athlete and sports columnist.

With Mayor Ahern in the chair city council recently approved for the first time the appointment of a full-time director of recreation for the city's young athletes. Without a dissenting voice the council's recreation committee approved Roy Smith, vigorous and trained young physical instructor for the job.

Starting in October, Mr. Smith has already laid the ground work for a year-round program which will include swimming, baseball, track and indoor sports "and perhaps some music in band work."

Much of the attention to the youthful sportsmen has come during Mayor Ahern's term. Starring in baseball as a heavy hitter and a competent outfielder, Gee took to the ice in winter with the old Halifax Crescents and held the reputation of being a tricky defenceman in the 1920s.

As sports editor for a Halifax newspaper, Gee became known as a vigorous and outspoken writer and promoter of numerous "first" sporting events including the city's first 26-mile marathon; a 45-mile bicycle race and a swimming marathon.

For some years before the war he managed his own publishing company. In 1942, he returned to sports writing to conduct the colum "Sportdom" in the Halifax Herald. But shortly after his election as mayor last spring he retired from the sports writing field.

Since he became chief magistrate of the city, baseball diamonds on the common have been levelled, grandstands have been erected for the first time and interest in minor sport, from which city athletes hope to recruit future senior squads, has increased.

And, the new recreation director claims, police and juvenile court judges have already noticed a decrease in juvenile delinquency in the city.

"NERVES" She Called It

Losing interest—losing friends—she never went out any more—always too tired. "Nerves", she thought—but it was her kidneys—the filters of her blood—that needed attention. She used Dodd's Kidney Pills at once. The improved action of her kidneys helped to clear away blood impurities and excess acids. Fatigue, backache, headache, lack of energy disappeared. Dodd's Kidney Pills contain essential oils and medicinal ingredients that act directly upon the kidneys—and help restore their normal action. 146

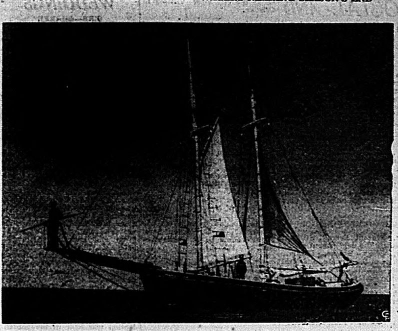
Butter, Cheese Output Declines In August

Toronto, Sept. 14 -(CP)- Production of creamery butter and cheddar cheese in August showed declines of 15.9 per cent and 22 per cent, respectively, from the figures for August, 1945, the Ontario Department of Agriculture monthly dairy report said today.

Butter make last month was 7,531,800 pounds as compared to 8,954,700 a year ago. Cheddar cheese output in August, 1946, was 13,379,400 pounds. In the same month last year it was 17,146,450 pounds.

The butter make for the first eight months of this year was 49,851,900—13.3 per cent less than in the corresponding period of 1945. The eight-month cheddar cheese total dropped 19.3 per cent this year to 66,452,600 pounds.

SWORDFISHING IN NOVA SCOTIA WATERS NEARING SEASON'S END



Typical schooner engaged in swordfishing off the coast of Cape Breton, N.S., is this one which is equipped with both sails and motor. Hundreds of such schooners come from various parts of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland to chase the swordfish. The swordfishing season, which usually lasts until the end of September, is drawing to a close as fishermen make preparations to return to their home ports.

Great Sports Era Recalled by Sale Of Scholes Hotel

By W. M. GLADISH

Passing of a famed downtown Toronto hostelry from the Scholes family of athletic champions has been recorded in nostalgic terms by sport commentators, their somewhat personal lamentations over disappearance of numerous trophies from the taproom walls being described as the termination of an athletic reign.

But the printed heart-burning did not go quite far enough. The sale of the pumproom marked the close of an era during which tavern-keepers, generally, were forthright celebrities of the sports world.

Those were the rugged days when the routine tour by Toronto sport scribes in search of news meant dropping into numerous bars and ante-rooms to interview the ale-house proprietor. Even some of the landmarks have long since disappeared.

To discuss baseball, a visit with the late Jim McCaffery at the old Bay Tree Hotel was a daily necessity; Tom Flanagan at the former Grand Central Hotel always could talk about Jack Johnson, Tom Longboat, Tim O'Rourke and other champions of the day; P. J. Mulqueen was mine host at the Tremont Hotel where rowing was the theme; Bob Falconer, champion cyclist, held forth at his Spadina House on the Canadian Wheelman's Association.

Conversation at the old Queen's Hotel always drifted to horses and hockey because Winnett and Thompson were there; a jaunt to the Empress Hotel to see the Dissette giants was necessary for Ontario Hockey Association matters; the old Rossin House was always good for lacrosse, then over to Scholes Hotel to get the viewpoint of Champion Jack and Champion Lou—by which time your newspaper had already gone to press.

That was the daily "tour de plaisir" of a Toronto sports writer of yesteryear.

It was the sport era when the Toronto baseball team paraded downtown streets atop horse-drawn stages to advertise the big game at Diamond Park, invariably stopping off at the Bay Tree Hotel. It was the time a newly-crowned Scholes — it might be Lou or Tom or Jack—arrived at the old Union Station to be hauled by willing hands while perched on a hook-and-ladder wagon, the destination being Scholes Hotel for acclaim by mayor, civic officials and countless admirers—with business exceptionally good, forsooth.

It was the period of bike contests from Toronto City Hall to Hamilton City Hall and of women's walking races up Yonge Street for 2½ miles from Queen Street when naughty short-skirts were barred. Who said there wasn't some fun back in those days?

As for the original Johnnie Scholes (1845-1918), mention almost any sport and he was it, and with a cap "I". His achievements: world's amateur snowshoe holder 40 years; member of a North American championship rowing crew; champion boxer; champion 100-yard sprinter; Canadian 10-pin champion in 1880; member of the champion Ontario Lacrosse Club; champion weight-thrower, etc., etc.

Following in his footsteps were two sons: Lou F. Scholes (1880-1942) and John L. Scholes, who has just sold the family hotel. Lou's rowing titles included the Canadian junior and senior sculling honors, the U.S. junior association and senior championship singles, member of the championship doubles, and the Diamond Sculls at Henley-on-Thames in 1904.

The honors of John, Jr., included: undefeated world featherweight champion, Canadian featherweight and lightweight boxing titles in 1897-99 and the equivalent-weight title in England, and the American titles of the class at New York in 1900 and at Pittsburgh in 1901. The Scholes added much glory to the athletic honor rolls of Canada.

Five Fossilized Skeletons Found

Berkeley, Calif., Sept. 16—(AP)—Five fossilized skeletons which may yield new clues to the antiquity of man in the new world were studied intensively by scientists today as the result of a discovery by two housewives helping to dig a swimming pool.

Dr. Robert F. Heizer, University of California Antropologist in charge of investigation, said there was no positive evidence as yet to support one unconfirmed guess that the skeletons were 70,000 years old.

The generally-accepted age of man in North America is about 10,000 years.

brings you Tin products

THE FEDERATED MALAY STATES produce a large part of the world's tin. Canada produces about ninety per cent of the world's Nickel.

Only a small percentage of Malayan tin is consumed in Malaya. Less than three percent of the Nickel produced in Canada is consumed in Canada—the rest is exported, and the money received helps to pay for tin and other products necessary to good living in Canada.

Canada cannot keep on importing from other lands unless Canadian goods are exported.

Each increase in the export of Canadian Nickel means more workers employed in the Nickel mines, smelters and refineries, as well as additional workers employed in the production of the lumber, power, steel, machinery and supplies used by the Canadian Nickel industry.

By constantly expanding the use of Nickel at home and abroad, the Canadian Nickel industry brings additional benefits to Canadians.

"The Romance of Nickel" a 60-page book fully illustrated, will be sent free on request to anyone interested.

WEDDINGS

ERB—SHARPE

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding at 2.30 p.m., on Saturday, Sept. 14, when in a setting of Autumn flowers, Dr. Jessie Sharpe, Toronto, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Sharpe, Belleville, became the bride of Captain John Erb, R.C.A.M.C., Kingston, son of Dr. and Mrs. I. H. Erb, Toronto, the Rev. J. Goforth Hornsby officiating. Wedding music was played by Mr. Blair Hanthorne.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a gown of cream brocaded satin, with fingertip veil. Streamers caught with white rosebuds and forget-me-nots fell from the white Bible which she carried. Mrs. W. E. A. Spinks, Toronto, was her sister's matron of honor, wearing a gown fashioned of pink nylon brocaded bodice and white net skirt with matching headdress and carrying a Colonial bouquet. Little Miss Mildred Sherk, Kitchener, was flower girl, wearing a blue gown styled similarly to that of the matron of honor.

Mr. Gordon Erb, Toronto, was groomsman, with Messrs. J. A. Weir, Toronto, and W. B. Erb, Stratford, as ushers.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church parlors where the bride's mother received in a blue crepe ensemble with black accessories, assisted by the groom's mother, who wore grey crepe with wine accessories. Out-of-town guests present were from Kitchener, Fenelon Falls, St. Paul's, Guelph, Toronto, St. Mary's, and Waterloo.

For travelling the bride donned a suit of grey with navy accessories. The young couple will take up residence at the Brantford General Hospital.

Women's Activities

TYENDINAGA EAST W.I.

Members of the Victoria Women's Institute were guests of the Tyendinaga branch, Sept. 13, at the home of Mrs. C. Provins. During the business meeting a quilting was planned for Sept. 24, at the home of Mrs. Percy Kimmerley.

Current events were given by Mrs. R. Tucker. Mrs. P. Kimmerley gave an interesting paper on "Canadian Industries".

The President of the Victoria branch acted as chairlady during the presentation of an interesting program which began with Community singing with Mrs. Graham at the piano; "Up-to-date Events" given by Mrs. Harry Edgar; a skit by Mrs. Cook and Mrs. J. Vankougnet.

Led by Mrs. Merle Denison each one present described a Canadian Industry. Mrs. Ivan McFarland led in a contest "A Surprise Package".

Mrs. F. McFarland and Mrs. Provins conducted contests, the winners being Mesdames Brady, and F. Hutchison, while Mrs. D. Weese demonstrated a cushion cover.

A monologue given by Mrs. Merle Denison was thoroughly enjoyed.

The National Anthem closed an interesting program, after which dainty refreshments were served and a vote of thanks given to the visitors for an enjoyable afternoon, and to Mrs. Provins for the use of her home.

HALLOWE'EN HAT

Actress Madge Meredith models the bewitching headpiece, ideal for Hallowe'en. Its creator threw into the boiling pot such ingredients as night black gabardine and broomstraw yellow feathers (for the crowning feature), and put a swoop into the brim to facilitate easier riding of whirlwinds on Hallowe'en night. Need we say more?

WOOLER W.I.

Wooler.—The September meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. W. Delve on Thursday afternoon with a good attendance.

Mrs. R. Redcliffe rendered a vocal solo and Mrs. P. Gooding gave a reading.

Mrs. W. A. Goodfellow, wife of the Hon. W. A. Goodfellow, minister of Social Welfare, the guest speaker, was introduced by Mrs. P. Gooding. Mrs. Goodfellow gave her experiences as the wife of a politician, giving an interesting and detailed account of the opening of Parliament and the many social functions held during the session. One of the most interesting held during the last session was when Countess Alexander, wife of the new Governor General, was entertained. Mrs. Easterly moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Goodfellow.

Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess at the close of the meeting.

Holds Shower For Overseas Bride

On Sept. 10, a goodly number well over the hundred mark, attended a miscellaneous shower at "The Grange", the home of Mr. Jay Trull, Courtice, with the guests of honor, Jim Sexsmith, Belleville and his newly-arrived bride from Holland.

The lovely old home was decorated beautifully, with pink and white paper streamers and gorgeous gladioli, but unfortunately, this home was in the line of no hydro, due to storm, but the good old coal oil lamps and Coleman gas lamps were hunted out and answered very nicely.

After all were comfortably seated, K. E. Courtice, master of ceremonies, called the company to order, and welcomed the lovely young bride and her husband and asked them to come forward and open their many nice gifts.

Both responded in a fitting manner.

Included in the program were two fine piano solos, given by Ross Metcalfe, two vocal solos given by Miss Dorothy Stevens, accompanied at the piano by Miss Edna Swallow, and two readings given by the old reliable Howard Foley. All these numbers were very much appreciated by the company.

Fruit of all kinds, candies and popcorn and nuts were then served in abundance. Bowmanville, Oshawa, Audley, Maple Grove, Courtice, Whitby, and the surrounding district were among the places with representatives in attendance. The groom is a nephew of the Trull household.—Oshawa Times-Gazette.

Best bottle of milk in all history

NEVER at any time has better milk been available than the bottle of milk that's left each morning at your door. To maintain its uniform excellence requires many highly skilled men and much costly equipment. The farmer, the highway hauler, the skilled dairy worker, the technician who constantly checks purity and quality, and your friendly milkman—all are a necessary part of the system that makes your daily supply of milk what it is today.

As in any other business—the cost of everything that goes to make up that system is increasing constantly. But so far the consumer price of a bottle of milk has been kept the same today as it was in 1942, though the prices of many other products and services have risen far beyond 1942 levels.

Today's low price, plus the highest standard of purity and freshness, plus the always-dependable supply and delivery service you have required over the years, combine to make the bottle of milk on your doorstep the best bottle of milk in history.

GOOD MANNERS

n Elaborate Cake May be Featured at Engagement-Announcement.

ear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to announce my aughter's engagement very soon efore her fiance leaves to comlete his course in a college more an a thousand miles from where e live. She will join him bout the first of next January nd they will be married there. will not be possible for my usband and me to travel so far, nd so we cannot be present at e ceremony, and because for everal reasons it is not practical or her fiance to come here for e wedding, we would all like o have this engagement-announcement party as nice as posible, really to take the place of home wedding reception.

1. We have made arrangements or the service and the menu. ut we are wondering if it would e within the boundds of propriy to have a cake similar to a edding cake, frosted in white, nd have the engaged couple cut e first piece?

2. The engagement will be a omplete surprise to most of the uests. Do you think we should think up" some novel way of aking the announcement, or is e best way introducing the fiance and showing the ring?

— Reader.

1. Yes, very often under these, r similar, circumstances a white ake and white-frosted, similar o a bridal cake, is featured at he engagement-announcement arty. It is (1) not to be decorated with any wedding figures n top (such as a bride and room) and (2) it should not be fruit cake, which is the real wedding cake", that is, not the ridal cake. But the cake itself ay be as elaborate as you wish o have, and, if you wish, it may e made in several tiers, with the op tier heart-shaped. Perhaps ou might like the idea poplar n bridal cakes today, having ouches of pink or yellow or green o accent the white frosting .. his would be particularly approriate for this cake, I think, and very festive-looking.

And yes, it would be all right for the betrothed girl to cut the first piece of the cake and share it with her fiance.

2. While it's entirely proper to have the engagement announced in a novel way, I like best the charming and dignified procedure of having the announcement made by introducing "Jim Hall, Clarita's fiance", and having the girl wear her engagement ring.

Tuxedo at Two O'Clock Wedding?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A friend of mine is being married at a formal church wedding. By "formal", I mean that she is wearing a long white wedding dress and her one attendant, a maid of honor, is also wearing a long gown. The wedding is to take place at two o'clock in the afternoon, and as plans now stand her bridegroom is going to wear a tuxedo. Is this the correct attire for a wedding at this time in the afternoon? L.E.S.

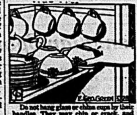
No. Your friend's wedding is to be an afternoon wedding .. and a tuxedo is informal evening attire, not to be worn before six p.m., at the earliest..

Proper to Have Wedding Breakfast

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance's father died two months ago. So now we have changed our plans and will have a very quiet wedding. I am wondering if it would be proper to have a breakfast, after the ceremony, for only the members of the immediate families. Will you please advise me? M.S.

Yes, this is entirely proper.



Do not hang glass or china cups by their handles. They may chip or crack, and finally break off.

Boudoir Beauty

SURELY there are very few daughters of Eve who can resist a really beautiful negligee, one that combines comfort with beauty and glorious color. For an ace in beauty and design here is lovely Sylvia Sidney wearing a negilgee designed by Michael Woulfe. The specifications include pastel pink and violet marquisette over pink crepe with a pink crepe bow-tied neckline of solid bugle beads. The belt is of the beads too. Despite the fabric and the coloring, the negligee gives an air of beautiful simplicity.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her Boy Friend Lost His Interest.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A year ago I met a very nice boy at the church club. He started walking me home from the Club and then he took me for a date. He gave me his school pin and everybody took it for granted that I was his girl. We had wonderful times together and for my 16th. birthday he gave me a beautiful ring.

In the summer I went away with my parents for a month. During that month he turned 17 and I sent him a birthday present. I never heard if he received it until a week before I arrived home. Later, I found out why he didn't write to me more often. He always went to the beach and movies with a group of fellows, to pick up girls.

Please don't get the idea that this boy is a bum, because he isn't. I haven't seen him since I've been home, yet he tells my girl friends that he still likes me. I got out with a boy now who started school with me. He tells me that he likes me a lot, but I can't forget the other boy. What shall I do?

— "Puzzled."

Your boy friend may not be a "bum," but boys who pick up girls at the beach and at movies are not the finest gentlemen in the world. Also, the fact that he has treated you so indifferently, never even acknowledging your birthday gift to him, doesn't speak very well of him. If he tells your girl friends that he still likes you but has not taken the trouble to come around and see you for a year, I would not put much confidence in his feeling for you.

It would be a much better idea for you to go out with the other boy than to waste your time thinking about the first one. You may think you can't forget him but, if you keep on going out with others, you will be surprised to find how easy it is.

The Experts Say

By HELEN BANNERMAN

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 16 (CP) — With peaches so plentiful this year every homemaker hopes to store away a good supply for Winter use. She also wants to find a simple, practical way to do the job well, so there will be no spoilage and so that each sealer will be ready for its special use either as a dessert in itself or in a baked or jellied dessert.

From the agriculture department consumer section's testing kitchen come instructions for canning peaches.

To prepare peaches for canning by the hot pack method, blanch them to remove the skins by dipping in boiling water for 15 to 60 seconds, then dipping in cold water. This sets the color and loosens the skins so they will slip off easily. Blanch only sufficient fruit for two or three sealers at a time. When pealed cut in half, remove pit and drop peaches into a weak brine made by adding one teaspoon of salt to one quart of cold water.

Peaches Hot Pack: Remove the peach halves from the brine, drain well, drop into boiling thin syrup (one cup of sugar to two cups of water.) Simmer in the syrup for five minutes, pack the fruit in clean, hot sealers. Cover with boiling syrup to within ¼ inch of the top. Adjust wet rubber ring, making sure that it is flat. Put the lid in place and partially seal. If using sealers with metal lids, dip the lids in boiling water, put in place immediately and seal. Process 15 minutes in the boiling water bath or 20 minutes in a thermostatically-controlled oven at 275 degrees Fahrenheit.

When the time is up remove the sealers from the processor, tighten the tops on screw and spring top sealers. Cool all sealers right side up away from draughts. Test screw and spring top sealers for leaks when cool by carefully tilting each sealer and revolving it in the hands. Vacuum type sealers with metal lids are tested by striking the top lightly with a metal spoon. There should be a clear ringing sound, not a dull one. If the sealers are airtight, label them and store in a cool dark place.

Peaches may also be canned by the cold pack method.

Test sealers for leakage. Wash, rinse and keep hot until ready to use.

Sort the peaches for size and maturity. A much better pack is obtained if the fruit is uniform. Blanch, peel, halve and remove pits. As fruit is peeled drop in brine (same as for hot pack.) Peel only enough fruit for two or three sealers at a time.

Drain and pack in the hot sealers, cut side down. Fill containers to within ¼ inch of the top with hot syrup if spring or screw top sealers are used and ½ inch of the top if vacuum type. Remove air bubbles by running a knife down and around the inside of the sealer. Adjust wet rubber rings and tops and partially seal screw tops and spring tops. Completely tighten metal band or vacuum type sealers.

Process in a boiling water bath: 20 minutes for pints, 25 minutes for quarts. The oven is not recommended for processing packed cold. Complete the process as for the hot pack method.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

It is a wise girl who is an enthusiastic tubber or shower-taker. The daily bath is a hygienic measure. As a relaxing element for tired bones and sizzling nerves it has no equal. As a complexion beautifier, it cannot be beaten by any toilet-table goodie that comes in jar or bottle. Cleanliness is law number one in the constitution of splendid appearance.

The Daily Bath a Good-Looks Ritual.

A clean skin surface is necessary for health and self-respect. The human hide is constantly exuding waste fluids, throwing off dead scales, collecting atmospheric dust. A film of oil is sent forth by the sebaceous glands, without which the epidermal coat would be rough and sensitive. To remove this debris, it is essential that the body be scoured daily with soap and warm water. A brush makes a more thorough job of this hygienic rite. It should be used with plenty of elbow grease.

A cold shower, beloved by the majority of the members of the stern and surly sex, is refreshing, but isn't much good as a cleanser. If there is oil on the skin, the water runs over it as it runs over feathers on a duck's back, has little effect in removing the chemicals deposited by perspiration.

The ideal bath begins with a soaking in the tub, a warm, soapy scrubbing, a quick, cold shower to bring a reaction of the bloof streams.

Don't forget that soap is a mild antiseptic. Germs thrive upon skin that is not kept clean. When there is an abrasion, they invade the wound. The result may be a flock of pimples, a painful boil or some other form of cutaneous infection. After the bath, have a brisk rubdown with a coarse towel.

After that you can have fun, giving yourself a friction with a fragrant bath tonic that will keep the skin surface smooth and of fine texture. A talcum rub imparts a sense of well-being. After that, it is time for you to take care of your little pink toes. The cuticle surrounding the toenails has been softened by the warm water. Lift it gently with the orangewood stick.

Cut toenails straight across, never down' at the sides. That practice will cause the flesh to thicken there; the first thing you know you will be suffering the torments of ingrown nails.

Don't fancy that you can treat corns safely by gouging at them with a small knife or manicure scissors. A wound may cause pain and trouble. Flesh surrounding finger and toenails is particularly suscetible to infection. The cure for corns is found in suitable, properly fitting shoes.

Tommy Pointer Allows 2 Hits And Port Hope Beats Bata 8-0 In Second Game of Playdowns

Third and Deciding Game of Int. "A" Playoffs Will be Played in Port Hope on Wednesday

(By C. D. T.)

With the good left arm of Tommy Pointer showing the form that featured his play in the C.O.B.L. with Belleville in days gone by the Port Hope squad evened the series in the Intermediate "A" O.B.A. playdowns with Batawa when they defeated that club in the second game at Batawa on Saturday by a score of 8-0, Pointer restricting the losers to two hits. After the game the officials of the club met and on the toss of a coin Port Hope won and the third and deciding game will be played in Port Hope on Wednesday afternoon.

It is true that Tommy Pointer has lost a lot of zip on his fast ball but the old curve is still working and with his knowledge of the years on the mound he simply smothered the bats of the Batawa team. Not once all the afternoon did the losers get a chance at a good ball and most of the time Tommy was on top of the batter and he was ably supported by the team in the field. True the ball took good hops all the afternoon but the team as a whole played heads up baseball and deserved their win. 'Smokey' Smith elected to go right back after his 2-1 win on the previous Wednesday but it was apparently not his day. They blasted him from the mound in the third with a four-run attack and from then on never looked back.

Loose Fielding

The Bata boys did not help their twirlers very much and even with the heavy clouting, Austin at first made two bad errors in the disastrous third, one trying to make a play at home, when he had a sure out at first, and the other when he overthrew the plate in any attempt to catch a runner. The fielders played too deep also in this frame and two hits could have been kept to lower proportions if the fielders had been closer. Muffitt, who relieved Smith in the fourth had two runs scored against him in the fourth and two more in the eighth but while this was going on, Pointer was mowing the boys down with increasing regularity. The Port Hope squad also got some help from Max Hill, when he made two particularly bad calls, one at third on Spencer, who had doubled in the fourth and tried to steal third. He has not been touched yet. The other was on call at first from short.

Allowed Two Hits

Pointer allowed but two hits, one a double and the other a single in the fourth and nobody scored. He struck out seven and had perfect control not walking a man. He also helped and practically won his own game, when he singled home two runs in the fourth after a walk and a hit. Smith in his sojourn on the mound struck out five and walked one, while Muffitt who relieved him whiffed two and walked three. Edwardson at first for the winner showed a nifty shift around the bag and had thirteen putouts, a couple of them of the tough variety. Foote at second played a smooth game having ten chances without a slip. Bata was retired in order in all but two frames and this happened to the winners on four occasions. Only two extra base hits were recorded, Spencer getting one in the fourth off Pointer and Ashby grabbing one off Smith in the fourth.

Mixed His Slants

Tommy mixed his slants all through the piece. When the batter got set for the fast one, which Tommy did not have, the hurler would hook him and when he thought the curve was coming Tommy would straighten the ball out and in this way he had them off balance all the afternoon. Smith started as if he was going to make a record for strikeouts, getting two in the first and two in the second. In the third he was greeted by a double and Dawley walked. Edwardson singled to score Ashby and Douglas hit to Austin who elected to get Dawley at the plate but he overthrew the base and two runs scored. Bateman then cashed Douglas. In the fourth, when Muffitt took over, Foote greeted him with a single and Keller walked and with the aid of a passed ball put them in scoring position and Tommy Pointer knocked them both home with a rousing single to right.

After one was out in the eighth, Port Hope scored two more. Bateman was safe on Watson's error, Zealand singled and both were moved around with a sacrifice by Foote. Keller did the needful with a single to centre to score two and latter went out stealing. Of the play Port Hope fully deserved their win and if they play back to their game of Saturday the Bata team is in for a tough time to take the series and advance in the playdowns.

New York, Sept. 16 -(AP)- "Everybody" knows that Joe Louis will belt the tar out of Maurielle some time Wednesday night...but Tami is an aggressive fighter with a punch. He has to be, because his game leg won't let him run away...Joe has been training almost constantly since last March and probably is a bit bored with the whole thing. He has little to gain—including his share of the gate—and his title to lose...Chances are you won't get rich betting on Tami, but he can't make a much worse showing than Billy Conn did.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Defeated in the first game of the semi-finals series for the Ontario junior baseball championship, by a great little team, the Kiwanis Juniors were far from disgraced and are by no means downhearted. They realize they are up against a tough proposition here when they meet the Ottawa Wrightvilles from Hull on Wednesday afternoon, but that only adds to their determination to win the game and force a third pastime.

• • •

The Hull youngsters are one of the smoothest working teams we have seen in many years. Their infield clicks with the precision of a watch; they know what to do, when to do it and what their team-mates are doing. They should be good, for they have played together as a unit for the past five years. In that time they have won two juvenile titles and two junior championships.

• • •

Laurialt, their ace hurler who flung a three-hitter against our Kiwanis will be in a Montreal Royals uniform next year, so the Wrightville manager informed us, and George Cloutier, the hard-hitting first sacker will go to Spring training with the St. Louis Cardinals.

• • •

They have a quartet of pitchers in whom there is little difference so the Wrightvillers claim, Laurialt is the ace chucker but Duprez, Bertrand and R. Cloutier are flingers of more than passing ability. They are well fortified in this department.

• • •

But our laddies played a splendid game despite the 6-0 score. Bunton's wildness and his weakening in the fourth innings when all the damage was done were the only dull spots to mar an otherwise brilliant display by the local kids.

• • •

Verny Green the dusky second sacker of the Kiwanis played a brilliant game afield. On two occasions he knocked down scorching drives labelled for at least two bases, retrieved the ball and nailed his man at first. "Huck" Reeves starred behind the plate and his peg to bases was deadly. In fact the whole infield worked smoothly.

• • •

Shades of 1920! If the Wrightvilles didn't pull the old hidden ball trick — and get away with it. And on Coach Speedy St. Louis, of all people Huck Reeves was on third with what was a certain Belleville run for Lockyer came through with a single a minute or two later, and the Hull infield was tossing the ball around. Speedy was coaching on third and failed to notice the third baseman secrete the ball. He yelled to "Huck" to take a lead and bingo, he was nailed. There were two scarlet faces along the third base line as the Hull crowd shrieked its delight.

• • •

Reeves and Bunton drove out screaming hits that appeared tabbed for at least triples, but the Wrightville rightfielder, on Bunton's hit went clear to the fence, leaped high in the air and pulled down the ball. The centre fielder did the same thing to Reeves' long drive in the fourth.

• • •

There were some amusing incidents during the game. It was broadcast over a public address system, and the announcer, decidedly French Canadian got excited at times. Occasionally he would forget himself and shriek his encouragement over the microphone, and at others would anticipate the umpire's 'call'. "Bun-tonn" he would say, "is on der bat. Here it comes. She is swinging and it is a hit. Pardnez moi, corecshun, she is an error."

• • •

There was some lengthy delay in getting the game started. Kiwanis had been given to understand that the game would start at 3.30 in fact that time was published in an Ottawa paper. The Hull sheet, however, a French - Canadian organ had the time advertised as five o'clock. The convener did not put in an appearance until well after four o'clock and there were rumors of calling the game off. It was later discovered that the Wrightville team had been notified to change the time of the game in order that some of the 12,000 people watching the Rough Riders-Montreal rugby game could attend the baseball game. There were approximately 1,100 fans present—and approximately 90 per cent French.

• • •

Eddie Schrieder whose knowledge of the French language is on a par with that of this desk—which again is practically nil, did a good job behind the plate. Occasionally the fans would roar at what they thought was a close decision but that didn't bother Eddie any. "Were they yelling for me or at me?" he grinned afterwards. Cam Johnson, a baseball veteran was on the bases and likewise turned in a good effort. There were no complaints on the arbiting.

• • •

Three of the most ardent rooters for Kiwanis were Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lizotte and their daughter who came over from Ottawa to cheer for the team from their former home town. They are now residing in Ottawa. Mrs. Lizotte and daughter recently returned from England.

• • •

De Cosse Stadium, did not prove to be the magnificent grounds its name indicates. Situated in down-town Hull it is a small park with the base lines running roughly ten feet parallel with the grand stand. The distance to centre field via the plate and second base is 377 feet. The outfield was rough and lumpy and the infield was covered with small-stone gravel, which made sliding more or less risky. Vern Green reported a couple of "buttons" on his hips.

• • •

Shades of the good old days when Picton, Belleville, Deloro, Point Anne and others were battling in their loops here. Tommy Pointer, the old southpaw war-horse who flung a mean game for Napanee and Belleville in the days when . . . reached into his war-bag on Saturday and came up with a sparkling 2-hit effort that stood "Smoky" Smith and Bata buckaroos on their baseball ears on Saturday at Batawa to win 8-2 in the second game of the Port Hope-Batawa Intermediate "A" series. Tommy blanked the Bata bats and allowed them but two clouts that came in the fourth when the homesters scored all their runs. The Port Hopers clouted Smith for six hits for six runs and he gave way to Muffit in the fourth with one out. The third game will be played in Port Hope on Wednesday.

BROOKS, CARDS MAY END YEAR IN DEAD HEAT

Dodgers Have Slight Edge by Having Three More Than St. Louis to Play

By JOE REICHLER
(Canadian Press Sports Writer)

For the first time in major league baseball, two teams—Brooklyn and St. Louis —may wind up the season in a dead heat for the flag.

With exactly two weeks of the campaign remaining, the Cardinals possess a 1½-game lead over the Dodgers in one of the tightest pennant races the National League has ever known. With three games less played, the Dodgers should make them up by Friday at which time each contender will have played 146 games with eight to go.

The Cardinals gained a full game on the Brooks yesterday when they defeated New York Giants twice 3-0 and 7-4 while the Dodgers were held to a split by Chicago Cubs.

Murray Dickson, slightly built Cardinal righthander, won his 13th game with a three-hit shutout performance in the opener. St. Louis used three pitchers, including its ace, Howie Pollett, in subduing the Giants in the nightcap.

After dropping a thrilling 4-3, 10-inning decision to the Cubs the Dodgers, behind Kirby Higbe's one-hit pitching, bounced back to win the afterpiece of the doubleheader 2-0. The second game was halted after five innings by a combination of semi-darkness and a swarm of gnats which infested Ebbets' Field, packed to capacity by 32,264 cash customers.

A pinch single by ex-Cardinal farmhand Bob Scheffing scored two runs in the top half of the 10th to win the first game for the Cubs.

Dave Ferriss, Boston's brilliant sophomore, won his 25th game as the American League champion Red Sox split with Chicago White Sox. Ferriss allowed eight hits in winning the opener 4-1 but Chicago came back to blank the Red Sox 6-0.

Bill McCahan, making his first start in the major leagues since leaving Toronto of the International League, bested Bob Feller, 2-0, as Philadelphia Athletics split with the Indians. Bob Lemon had pitched the Tribe to an 8-1 opening victory.

Feller fanned seven to raise his season's total to 315, two more than the best mark ever set in a season by Walter Johnston.

St. Louis Browns won twice from the New York Yankees 1-0 and 2-1.

Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis collected nine hits between them to help Washington outslug Detroit Tigers 15-5. Boston Braves advanced to within two games of the third place Cubs by whipping Cincinnati Reds twice 3-1 and 6-1.

The Phillies defeated the Pirates 6-5, in 11 innings.

Montreal, Sept. 16 (CP) —Latest delightful possibility looming on the sport horizon is the threat of a beakbusters backers' battle between the fair cities of Montreal and Toronto, where as bitter inter-city rivalry usually rages as between any Podunk and Unkin centre you could mention.

The ghastly possibility came to light when Playfair Brown, he of the promoting business from the Queen City, vouchsafed that if the Montreal boys wanted to arrange a scrap between Canadian lightweight champ Dave Castilloux and Willie Pep, Playfair and his partner would have to be cut in on the profits.

According to the cauliflower character collector, Pep's handler wouldn't let his boy fight in Montreal unless the two Toronto promoters were cut in.

That prompted anguished howls and threats of dire vengeance from the promoters in Quebec's population capital.

With Montreal's aforementioned rivalry with Toronto, outside characters would stand a small chance of muscling in on the business here, as Dink (Montreal Gazette) Carroll hastened to point out. Where promoting is concerned, it's strictly knock-down, man-to-man, drag-out where the boys are concerned, but they would like nothing better than to gang up bodily and fall upon the humble innocents from hated Toronto.

Many a wary gaze is being directed at Toronto where reports have it the promoters are licking their chops enviously over the rich gates the ring game has drawn in Montreal recently. The word has gone out, by white charger down St. Catherine St., and the boys are preparing to buckshot and coarse salt for those smart slickers from Toronto.

The wisdom of any opening lead against a slam is shrouded in doubt. Circumstances have a great deal to do with it. With these in mind, the best you can do is select the lead that seems best.

It is quite different when it comes to a lead against a bid of less than slam. There, the general rule will usually be your best bet. The lead against a slam, however, is usually a gamble.

With a choice, the lead of an ace or the top of a sequence has the preference. So, the rules of leads for other contracts are good enough for these. The guess comes when you have no top card lead.

Without a top on tap, perhaps the best choice is from a suit in which you have a high card. This may turn out badly. But it offers a better chance than the lead from a worthless suit.

With no top card lead and no suit with a high card in it, you really have a toss-up. Even then, almost any lead is usually better than starting out with a trump.

The lead of a singleton against a slam is very tempting. If the ace happens to be with partner, you get an exhilarating glow. If it happens to kill his king or queen, the depression is on.

The contract is a slam in hearts. Your partner has made no bid. You have no other dope to guide you. As the opening leader, pick out the card to lead from this hand:

♥6 5 2
♦7
♣9 7 4 3 2

Any lead you start from that hand is a guess. No matter what you lead in spades or clubs may wreck good cards in your partner's hand. And a trump lead is like giving up before you start.

So, you may as well gamble with the lead of your singleton diamond. It may be to your advantage. It may be to your distress. If it works, you are a hero. If it does not, you are a bum.

Hollywood Column

Hollywood, Sept. 16 (AP) — Victor Borge, who as a penniless refugee almost took a service station job six years ago, is now selling gasoline—but at a few thousand dollars a week on a big radio show.

The Danish comedian-pianist's careers reads like an advertisement for the freedom of opportunity in America. For in six years he has risen from poverty to a position of distinction in the entertainment world.

Borge had been the highest paid performer in his native Denmark. All would have gone well for him except the one failing—he hated the Nazis. As early as 1934 he attended Hitlerite meetings and ridiculed the hate mongers. He was playing in Sweden when the Germans marched into his native land, and a friendly police official sent a courier to warn him not to return.

The performer landed in New York with the ability to say only "Yes" and "No" and "What time is it?" in English. His American wife translated his comedy routines word for word and Victor learned them in English. But producers seemed unwilling to take a chance on this fresh material.

The Borges came to California, and when they were unable to meet the rent on his one-room apartment, Victor was about to take a job filling tires and checking oil.

He was brought to the attention of Rudy Vallee. The Vagabond Lover had no spot ready but referred him to Bing Crosby. Borge went to the Crosby show for a one night performance and stayed 56 weeks.

The Borge home now has considerably more than one room and rests on an 18-acre ranch in the San Fernando Valley. He has a radio program with an odd billing designed to please everybody — the Victor Borge show starring Benny Goodman.

19 Feared Dead As Norwegian Tanker Founders

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 16—(AP)—The Norwegian motor tanker Marit broke in half 148 miles off the North Carolina coast, and Coast Guard headquarters here quoted 18 survivors today as saying they believed three others were afloat on a raft, but that the remaining 19 crew members had perished.

The survivors told the Coast Guard in a message that their ship broke in half about noon Friday, and that after they abandoned her both halves seemed to remain afloat. The message did not say how the 7,417-ton vessel came to grief, but she was in the general area where gales had been forecast.

18 Picked Up

First advices of the disaster came from the master of the SS Pan Amoco who radioed he had picked up the 18 survivors and was continuing to search the area, although he had seen no sign of the others.

Lt.-Cmdr. Gilbert R. Evans, executive officer of the Elizabeth City, N.C., naval station, radiocd from a rescue plane which he was piloting that he had sighted an empty life raft about eight miles from where the Marit sank.

He said he had observed an oil slick stretching 35 miles, but that no sign of the broken ship was visible.

Lt.-Cmdr. Evans said he had sighted no evidence of any other survivors.

The Pan Amoco's master advised he was continuing the search for the missing men.

Planes Sent Out

Commander J. R. Scullion of the Norfolk headquarters of the Coast Guard air-sea rescue division said four navy planes departed late Sunday from the Norfolk naval air station for the scene of the sinking.

Cmdr. Scullion said this message was received from the S. S. Pan Amoco:

"In latitude 35.09 north, longitude 73.34 west at 1:30 zebra (Greenwich mean time, 12.30 E.S.T.), 90 miles east of Hatteras, picked up 18 survivors from sunken Norwegian tanker Marit. Informed that one more life raft containing survivors still missing. All ships passing vicinity asked to keep sharp lookout for raft with survivors."

Cmdr. Scullion estimated that the Coast Guard cutter Agassiz, despatched from Norfolk, would not reach the scene of the sunken ship until "at least 10 o'clock tonight."

SET DIVORCE RECORD

Washington, Sept. 16 — (AP).—United States courts ground out nearly one-third as many divorces as there were marriages in 1945, setting the divorce record 25.5 per cent higher than that of 1944, the previous peak year. In reporting the divorce-marriage ratio, the Federal Security Agency said more than 502,000 marriages ended in divorce courts last year, while 1,618,331 couples formed new families. The marriage rate was 8.7 per cent below the peak year of 1942.

Ottawa Wrightvilles Defeat Kiwanis Juniors in First Game Of O.B.A. Playdowns 6 to 0

Second Game of Series Will be Played at Alemite Field Wednesday

By GEORGE H. CARVER

DeCosse Stadium, Hull, Que.—Before eleven hundred shouting French Canadian and English-speaking fans, the Ottawa Wrightvilles, champions of the Ottawa City Junior Baseball League for the past two years, defeated the Belleville Kiwanis junior squad 6-0 in the first game of the Ontario Baseball Association semi-finals series, here on Saturday afternoon.

The next game will be played at Alemite Field, Belleville, on Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

In this small stadium that looks more like a band-box than a baseball park, two of the smartest junior teams in Ontario turned in a smart exhibition with Bobby Bunton for the visitors and Jack Laurialt, Hull ace, hurling the entire game.

The fielding of both squads was one of the outstanding features of the game with both infields and outfields turning in sensational efforts at times to retire runners. The only error of the game came when Fitzpatrick, Belleville shortstop, fumbled Jack Garneau's hot grounder and then threw badly to first base.

Fielding Highlight

One of the fielding highlights of the game came when Bunton drove out a terrific hit to deep right centre which Bob Cloutier pulled off the fence. Cloutier turned and whipped the ball all the way to third base to nip Lockyer, who had walked ahead of Bunton.

Laurialt, starry left-hander turned in a masterful job of hurling. The youngster who looks like "Smoky" Smith physically and in his style of delivery, will wear a Montreal Royals uniform next year. He had the Kiwanis sluggers eating out of his hand at times. He struck out eleven, walked four and allowed but 3 hits. He was however, backed up by superb fielding on the part of his mates.

Bunton Wild at Tims

Bobby Bunton was wild at times. He walked seven, four in a row in the first innings with two out forcing in a run. But at other times he was good in the clutches. He struck out seven. His wildness in the first innings and a lapse of weakness in the fourth when the Wrightville batters got to him for four of the six hits scored off him one of them a triple, were the spots that marred the game from a Belleville point of view. Apart from these incidents the game was one for the book.

Wrightville, as mentioned got a gift run in the first when the Belleville pitcher after retiring Desjardins via the strikeout route and forcing Berniquez to ground out to Dicky Fitzpatrick, walked two men in a row. He hit the next batter with a pitched ball and walked the next. Garneau finally grounded out and the side retired.

Threatened in Second

Kiwanis threatened in the second innings when Reeves walked and went to second on a passed ball. Strahan drove out the first hit of the day and Reeves pulled up at third. Laurialt approached the mound stopped then looked to right field and first base. There was a commotion and a quick flurry at third base and Umpire Johnson called Reeves out. The Wrightville third sacker had pulled the old baseball trick of the hidden ball. Coach St. Louis was on duty along the third base line and was slightly scarlet of face as the runner trotted to the dugout.

Smart Double Play

Verny Green smashed out the second hit for Belleville in the third innings but went down as the Wrightville infield executed a smart double-play after Mouse Bush had driven a hot grounder along the third base line.

Cleared the Bases

The damage was done in the fourth when Garneau, first batter up, smashed out a hit to centre field. Fortin was thrown out by Bunton, and Laurialt drew a walk. George Desjardins smashed out the second hit of the innings filling the sacks and George Cloutier, whose name might well be spelled "Clouter" lined out a hard triple that went over Bud Green's head, clearing the bases.

Bobby Fortin then drove out another single to score Cloutier and the damage was done. St. Louis decided to leave Bunton on the mound after a discussion and the pitcher forced the next batter to fly out and the next was thrown easily.

The Belleville hurler steadied down and held the homesters to two hits over the balance of the game.

Bunton Hits Double

The third Kiwanis hit came in the eight innings when Bunton drove a long double out to centre field and went out on a sensational throw by the Wrightville centrefielder as the runner attempted to stretch the clout into a triple. Wrightville scored its sixth error of the game, scored when George Desjardins, rapped out his second hit of the game.

Bunton drew the cheers of the crowd in the ninth when he reached out his bare hand and snared Berniquez' bid for a single and threw him out.

Play Here Wednesday

The teams will play here next Wednesday and the game should be one of the baseball classics of the season when they clash. The Wrightville squad will use G. Cloutier on the mound it is reported, but no announcements have come from the Kiwanis management as yet. The local youngsters feel they can take the measure of the flying French kids and comment is not permissible in news stories, this writer feels that with the "breaks" even and playing the calibre of ball of which they are capable the kids can do just that.

The teams: Ottawa Wrightvilles: G. Desjardins, 2b; Berniquez, rf; G. Cloutier, 1b; R. Fortin, c; R. Desjardins, ss; J. Garneau, 3b; M. Fortin, lf; Laurialt, p.

Belleville Kiwanis: V. Green, 2b; Bush, 3b; Fitzpatrick, ss; B. Green, cf; Reeves, c; Strahan, lf; Lockyer, 1b, Wright and Semark rf, Bunton p.

Score by innings:

Wrightville 100 400 01x—6 6 0
Belleville .. 000 000 000—0 3 1

Laurialt, and Fortin; Bunton and Reeves.

SYRACUSE CHIEFS NEED ONE WIN TO END SERIES

Newark Bears Win Two Over Weekend to Even Series With Montreal

(By The Associated Press)

Syracuse needs only a victory tonight over Baltimore Orioles to advance into the International League play-off finals against the winner of the Montreal-Newark series.

Millard (Dixie) Howell held the Orioles to nine hits Sunday for a 7-6 victory to take a 3-2 edge in the best of seven semi-finals. Howell got out of a ninth-inning jam in which Baltimore had the tying and winning runs on base.

Three doubles and a single by Al Mele, two homers by Fan Harrington and a home run and double by Kernit Wahl paced the Chiefs' 14-hit offensive before a Baltimore crowd of 27,025.

Newark pulled up all even with the pennant-winning Montreal Royals at two games apiece on the strength of a 3-2 decision for Lefty Herb Karpel before 13,239 home fans.

Manager George Selkirk had to relieve Karpel with the veteran Alex Mustaikis when Montreal rallied for two runs in the ninth inning. After being shut out for eight frames, successive doubles by Jackie Robinson and Jim Tatum gave the Brooklyn farmhands a score. After two had been retired, Alex Campanis tripled home Tatum, putting the tying run on third.

Mustaikis came on to strike out catcher Dixie Howell and save the day.

EASTERN SENIOR RUGBY PICTURE VERY CONFUSED

Argos Wallop Tigers While Ottawa Takes Alouettes of Montreal

(By The Canadian Press)

It's a brave football fan who scans the weekend results in the five Canadian senior games and attempts to pick favorites for the Dominion title — especially from the jammed-up eastern standings.

Right now the Ottawa Rough Riders have worked their way to the top in the Eastern Big 4, with the champion Toronto Argonauts only a point behind. The six-team Senior Ontario Union shows the fascinating picture of five teams deadlocked on even terms. In the west, however, Calgary still holds a two-game lead on Winnipeg Blue Bombers with the Saskatchewan Riders another game back.

All this came about when Ottawa Riders on their own field defeated Montreal Alouettes 4-0, while Argonauts were walloping Hamilton Tigers 31-8 at Toronto. In the Ontario Union Balmy Beach trampled Sarnia Imperials 20-6 at Toronto, and at Hamilton the Wildcats topped Ottawa Trojans 13-2. At Regina, the Bombers defeated the Saskatchewan Roughriders 17-11.

Feature at Ottawa was the lack of scoring. Ace Powell's placement soon after the start and Joey Richman's rouge on a kick by Tony Golab were the only entries on the score sheet. But the crowd of 10,000 was kept tense throughout by frequent scoring threats that missed.

Joe Krol Stars

In the other Big Four game it was Joe Krol, Argos' great runner and booter, who starred before a crowd of 8,000 at Toronto. Krol himself tallied 19 points in the smashing defeat of the Tigers.

After Sonny Colvin of Tigers scored a second-period major which Wright converted, Krol promptly kicked a single, scored a touchdown and converted, then kicked two more singles to put Argos on the right end of a 9-6 count.

It was all Argos from there in, Krol adding another major, two converts and a 35-yard placement while Byron Karrys and Royal Copeland scored majors.

Triple-Threat Man

Balmy Beach uncovered another triple-threat in the O.R.F.U. game at Toronto, where a crowd of 3,000 saw them beat Sarnia. Johnny Lake, former Winnipeg Bomber star, personally accounted for a major, three converts and two singles — half of the Beach's total points. The others came from touchdowns by Bob Cunningham and Millen.

The Imperials battling a powerful Beach line, showed a threatening aerial attack which finally yielded a major by Ken Moore early in the final quarter. Moore kicked the convert.

It was a wide-open game at Hamilton where 7,000 saw the Cats trounce Trojans. Hamilton got 12 points in the first quarter when Toms went over the line and McKay converted, and Frank Gnup then scored a major and converted it himself.

At Regina the Bombers and the Saskatchewan Roughriders played in 92-degree temperature with 5,000 attending. But the weather wasn't any hotter than quarterback Wally Dobler, former North Dakota star who tossed or kicked every Winnipeg scoring play in the 17-11 victory.

Jack Dempsey was knocked clear out of the ring by Luis Angel Firpo but the champion returned to knock out the "Wild Bull of the Pampas" in the second round of one of the most spectacular heavyweight boxing championship matches ever fought at New York's Polo Grounds 23 years ago tonight.

Boston Braves of the National League yesterday sold pitchers Al Treichel and Al Javery and outfielder Chet Ross to their farm club, the Milwaukee Brewers of the American Association. Ross formerly performed for Montreal Royals.

Jake Lamotta, New York's contender for the world middleweight title, knocked out Bob Satterfield, Chicago negro, in the seventh round of their scheduled 10-round bout at Chicago last night. Satterfield previously had scored 14 knockouts in 17 appearances.

An all-time attendance record of 2,020,753 paid admissions was rung up during the schedule season of the American Association to beat the former patronage peak of 1,683,963 in 1927.

A Swedish four-man team, anchored by Lennart Strand, yesterday set an unofficial world record of 7:29.0 for the 3,200-metre relay at a field day in Stockholm. The time was 1.4 seconds faster than the recognized mark set by a German team in 1941.

The UnUited States Hockey League decided, at a directors' meeting in Omaha, Neb., yesterday, to adopt a system of cash awards for most valuable players and outstanding coaches, as well as for puckchasers selected for an annual all-star game.

Because we are a moderate people, Canada has come through the war with perhaps the least dislocation of any nation actively involved. That is a remarkable tribute both to the overall policies of our Government and to the fundamental wisdom of the Canadian people.
And it holds out a glorious promise for the future.
But to make that promise come true in the days ahead we shall have to continue to live up to our principles of moderation. We shall have to continue to think, act and live—moderately.
To give in to the natural desire for immediate enjoyment of everything and anything presently in short supply can result only in inflation and disaster.
This is not our way.

Post-war Plans Of United Church To be Discussed

By GEORGE BURMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Sept. 16 —(CP)— A discussion of post-war plans at home and abroad were in today's agenda of the 12th General Council of the United Church, with the reports to be presented on the Crusade for Christ and His Kingdom and on the Board of Overseas Missions.

The crusade was planned in 1943 as a militant campaign to be put into effect at the end of the rededication of ministry and membership for post-war tasks; The re-enlistment in church work of returning service veterans; and in union with other communions in Canada, to assist "in building an enduring world order on spiritual foundations."

A report on the accomplishments to date will be made to the council.

The Board of Overseas Missions will ask that an appeal to the church be authorized to restore missions. It draws attention to losses occasioned by the war and also for the need for missionary recruits.

At the afternoon session the Board of Evangelism and Social Service will bring down its report. Its recommendations, in summary:-

Temperance: Re-affirmation of the "dry" stand of the church; total abstinence of all members, with no serving of drinks to guests; intensive campaign of temperance education and rehabilitation of alcoholics; a royal commission to study the liquor industry, from distiller to consumer.

Gambling: Strong opposition to licensing of bookmakers; no discretionary power for provincial authorities in prosecution of lottery cases; no games of chance for religious and charitable purposes.

Venereal disease: Ministers called upon to declare "the real cause of venereal disease is sin"; all provinces asked to enact legislation for pre-martail blood-tests.

Yesterday, 70 of the council's ministerial delegates preached in protestant churches throughout the city, including seven Presbyterian, two Baptist and more than 50 United Churches.

DON'T TRY THIS ON THE HIWAY!

Rolling an automobile side over side and end over end might prove disastrous to the average motorist, but such is not the case with the "Lucky" Lott Hell Drivers who will take over the Belleville Fair for one day only, Monday, Sept. 23; afternoon and evening. "Lucky" Lott Hell Drivers day will bring to the people of Belleville district thrills they have never dreamed of having outside the motion pictures in which this troupe of dare-devils have performed more than a score of times. There are, in the "Lucky" Lott Hell Drivers, 17 ex-service men from World War 11, performing these stunts which to them are child play in comparison to the activity they have seen in the past three years. The feature of the "Lucky" Lott Hell Drivers day of thrills, spills and action is the Transcontinental bus jump, wherein "Lucky" Lott leaps an automobile over the top of a huge bus.

Local Dealers Report Acute Shortage Of Tires; Repair Material Scarce

Better watch those tires on your car or truck and take good care of them for there is hardly a new one available in the city, dealers said today. And there will not be any until the rubber workers' strike is settled, which doesn't appear to be in the offing.

One dealer stated that he had only three tires in his establishment and two of these were off-size for trucks.

Another stated that repair material is very scarce and none can be obtained from manufacturers. If it were not for the fact that he had installed a large supply before the strike from American sources, there was a strong possibility that he would have to close down his business for the duration of the strike.

Two dealers hazarded guesses as to the date of the end of the strike. One predicted Sept. 19 and the other November 1. "It will likely be some time after the strike ends before we get any supplies of tires and repair material," was their opinion.

Million Diabetics in North America President Tells Annual Convention

Toronto, Sept. 16 (CP)—The three-day sixth annual session of The American Diabetes Association started today at the University of Toronto where insulin, only known control of diabetes, was discovered 25 years ago.

The visitors paid tribute to the late Sir Frererick Banting and his co-discoverer, Dr. Charles H. Best, who is attending the session.

In convocation hall the delegates were welcomed by President Sidney Smith of the university and Premier Drew of Ontario.

Dr. Joseph H. Marach of Pittsburgh, President of the Association, said that the 1,000 members of The Diabetes Association are bound by a common cause—to see that diabetes "is treated at the level of highest efficiency, in the light of ever-changing knowledge and methods."

There were "well over 1,000,000" diabetes in North America.

In an address prepared for delivery at the meeting, Dr. Russell M. Wilder of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., said much work remained to be done to extend the lives and improve the health of diabetics.

Only Few Given Care,

"Not all of them by any means . . . receive the benefit of insulin and probably only a small percentage enjoy the general care they ought to have. These are urgent reasons to arouse the public and the medical profession to the special needs of diabetic patients.

"The incidence of diabetes approaches that of cancer; it exceeds in many states the incidence of tuberculosis and is 10 or 20 times as great as that of polioymelitis (infantile paralysis) to which so much attention has been given by the public."

Diabetic coma could be prevented and diabetic women could now be safe during pregnancy and give birth to healthy babies, but other aspects of the problem had not been mastered and appeared "more formidable" than when insulin was discovered, he said. These were especially injuries to the retina (part of the eye), the kndieys and the arteries.

Other speakers included Dr. David P. Barr, president of the American College of Physicians; Dr. Eugene Opie of the Rockefeller Institute, New York; Dr. R. D. Lawrence, Kings College Hospital, London; Dr. H. C. Hagedorn, Genetofte, Denmark; Dr. B. A. Houssay, Buenos Aires and Dr. E. P. Joslin, Boston.

BLACKWELL REBUKED

Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell has been invited to pay a visit to the Brantford, Ont., area U.A.W.-C.I.O. steward's council with a view to thoroughly clearing away the "smoke" which the union says was created by the laying of charges against three officials of the U.A.W.-C.I.O. Robert Stacey, ABOVE, U.A.W.-C.I.O. international representative in Brantford, forwarded a letter inviting Mr. Blackwell to go to Brantford and discuss the question.

Items of Interest From Avondale

Recent evening was water drawnight for Avondalites, whose wells and cisterns are dry. Mr. Robson drew water from the bay for the neighborhood until well after dark. Then came the deluge of rain and several cisterns were filled to the brim.

Ration Books Issued

Despite the heavy rain, the issuing of ration books was off to a good start Tuesday evening. Under the direction of Mr. Chambers, Avondate garage proprietor, and Ken Bird, Prince of Wales School principal, the Avondale School was utilised as a ration office between 6 p.m. and 9 p.m.

Still Rolling Along

The weather makes little impression on the heavy traffic of No. 2 Highway. The average motorist continues to roll blithely along at 40 to 50 miles per hour. This same average motorist has little patience with the cautious highway driver, whose 20 miles per hour usually causes a congestion of traffic.

An airforce officer, given a lift between Trenton and Belleville, expressed the opinion that the rain brought more sympathy to the hitch hiker. There is little doubt that the drooping figure of a fellow-being, becomes more akin to a mortal in distress.

May Dull Desire . . . .

Perhaps this downfall will help to dull the keen edge of desire for a city water hook-up. Many of the suburban dwellers are hoping that a water main could be run through Avondale, but it would appear that too much of the highway frontage remains vacant. At the rate of the building boom is drawing Avondale closer to the city limits, this drawback may be overcome in the not too distant future.

Last Fall, the continued rainfall halted the ploughing of many fields, and this Fall the ground has been so dry that ploughing has been almost as much of a problem, especially in heavy clay lands. This steady, ground-softening rain should bring a smile to many faces, and save considerably in the consumption of gasoline for the farm tractor.

12 Bandits Killed In Skirmishes

Athens, Sept. 16. (AP)—The Ministry of Public Order today reported 12 "bandits" killed in skirmishes as two bridges between Kalabaka and Ionnina were destroyed and 27 telegraph poles cut down in continuing efforts by Leftists to disrupt communication lines in Northern Greece.

Seven persons were slain in a battle on the island of Kephallenia and five others were killed north of Larisa, the Ministry said. Twenty gendarmes and soldiers seized by a Leftist band in a battle Saturday at Oivadi were stripped of their clothing and released.

Police said unidentified assailants shot to death a Communist who was escorting two women last night in the Kaissariani section of Athens.

Former Bodyguard Of Herman Goering Arrested at Detroit

Detroit, Sept. 16 (AP)—Rudolph Soelch, 24, identified as a former bodyguard of Herman Goering, today was held by Federal authorities, along with a woman said by the Federal Bureau of Investigation to have hidden him since his escape from a California prisoner-of-war camp five months ago.

F.B.I. agents, identifying the woman as Mrs. Joan McBride, 42, said Soelch had been living in Detroit as "Mr. McBride" and working as a baker and bus boy. Mrs. McBride was a waitress.

Mrs. McBride's husband, James, was arrested Saturday in Bristol, Pa.

The F.B.I. said Mr. and Mrs. McBride picked up Soelch last April 12 on a lonely road near Camp Haan, a prisoner-of-war camp near Riverside, Cal. Soelch's escape was said to have been planned by the McBrides.

DUNLOP Faces A GREAT RESPONSIBILITY

With other tire plants closed down for the past two months, Dunlop is faced with the great responsibility of endeavouring to satisfy the tremendous demand for tires due to the non-production of other tire companies.

Dunlop accepts this responsibility. Confident in the consistent loyalty and productive skill of its employees with whom the friendliest relations have always existed . . . possessed of the understanding and co-operation of Dunlop Dealers everywhere . . . Dunlop is bending every effort . . . concentrating every resource . . . on the production of Dunlop Tires to meet the needs of essential transportation, regular Dunlop customers and all others whom it is possible to serve through its established dealers.

TIRE SITUATION CRITICAL

No one can over-emphasize the critical shortage of tires today. And there are few signs of improvement. Even the manufacturers of new cars and trucks are obliged to ship cars and trucks without tires. It is utterly impossible for one tire plant to attempt to reasonably serve essential transportation, equip these new vehicles and to take care of consumer sales. Nevertheless, Dunlop Dealers are exercising the keenest judgment and sense of fair play in establishing equitable distribution of their very limited supplies.

Yes, in addition to being the only Tire Plant in Canada presently operating . . . in addition to the pressing demand . . . Dunlop is handicapped in its efforts by shortages of essential materials, including tire fabrics, steel and other metals for tire beads, moulds, valves, etc., and other materials and equipment essential to tire building which, on account of unsettled labour conditions elsewhere, have been in short supply or not available at all. Because of these shortages, Dunlop, in spite of having been as far ahead in its raw material inventories as conditions permitted, has been unable to maintain normal production. Users of tires such as the new 6.50-15 size will thus appreciate the difficulty of getting into quantity production of this particular tire.

IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST

In the face of this grave, unprecedented situation, Dunlop . . . in the public interest . . . is going beyond commercial considerations and is doing its level best to serve tire users throughout Canada.

Dunlop assures you that it will continue to serve Canadians to the utmost of its ability, sparing no effort or expense. There is still great need for patience, of course, for conditions show no sign of easing. But when times return to normal . . . when present difficulties are ironed out . . . Dunlop, with its expanding production facilities, with the assurance of the steadfast loyalty and mutual goodwill of its employees and the co-operation of its dealers . . . will again be in a position to make available to tire users everywhere unrestricted supplies of the famous, long-serving, smooth-riding Dunlop Armorized Tires.

CHAPTER FOUR

"No, but what do you do, Avery?"

"I go to the office, look at my mail, dictate two letters and go buy a gun."

Why, it's disgraceful. You couldn't possibly win the respect of any true woman."

"I don't want it," said Avery. 'I want the woman."

'It's twenty of nine, do let's be there when the curtain goes up!" Isabel said to this her face flushing.

"All right, dodge," Avery said. 'I'll give you lots of line. But I'll gaff you yet. Why you like to get to theaters in the middle of the afternoon beats me!"

"Middle of the afternoon! It's quarter to nine."

This part was all fun. But two days before she had to start West somehow the fun all went out of it. Isabel had never seen Avery in the mood he showed her when she explained to him that she could not make an engagement for Sunday because she would not be there on Sunday; she and Nancy were leaving on Friday night.

"But you knew that—I told the night we met, Avery, that we had just one day short of three weeks."

"I don't remember it." His fine dark square hand rumpled the rich black waves of his hair, his face under this dishevelment, looked young and strained.

"Our party is over." She said it with a real wrench of regret. "I've never had such a nice time."

"And of course I've never had anything like it at all!"

"You've had Dennis," he said.

"Dennis to love me, two darling tar babies," Isabel agreed cheerfully. "But not first nights and the Screw Loose and the Stork Club and Twenty-One!"

"If you liked it, you'd stay on a while."

"Oh, Avery!" Her beautiful blue eyes wide open. "Nancy positively has to go home."

"But you don't."

"Oh, heavens, but I do. Imagine me staying on alone!"

"Why not?" You're a married woman. You can stay anywhere you like alone."

"I'm a married woman, also I have children, also I have a mother-in-law who would think I was raving crazy to stay on here. This whole month has been enough!"

But of course it wasn't enough, and she knew it even as she spoke. Moments alone with Avery, words he had said, expressions in his dark face as he looked up across a supper table or gave her his hand as she descended from the car, all these burned in her veins like a hot sweet wine; she was dizzy, intoxicated with them. Her mouth was dry in these days and her eyes had a liquid light in them; she had never been so beautiful, never so completely unable to stop, to think, to reason.

When she thought of her daughters it was with tenderness and pleasure, but Pussy and Catherine seemed to have nothing to do with her actual life; they were just pleasant little dreams, far in the background.

"I love you very much," he said quietly. "You know that. I'm sorry—sorry there's a husband and that he's such a fine fellow. If he'd been in the picture this wouldn't have happened. As it is, what are we going to do about it?"

Isabel listened with her head drooping and her eyes downcast. It had come, it had to come, to complete this month of magic. She could not have gone away from New York without these words from Avery; she had thought her answer already.

It was to have a dignified answer; regretful, affectionate, firm.

"Ah, let's not spoil it, Avery," she was going to say. "It's all so wonderful. Let's leave it this way."

Instead she was presently home again facing a changed world with a changed heart. The small girls took possession of her with soul-warming enthusiasm, her mother-in-law's grave sensible face brightened when Isabel was once more in the home. Nothing was disturbed on the surface, and the quiet monotony of the days began to unreel gain. But the letters went to Dennis.

Isabel's courage almost failed her when she came to writing the letter. It was an inexcusable letter; she hated it; But after all, it wasn't final. It merely asked Dennis what he would advise. She had met this Avery Latimer, of the Burlingame family, and they liked each other tremendously. It seemed a funny thing to be writing to Dennis, but after all, it did happen sometimes. She and Avery wanted to be married. She knew he'd be sorry and she was sorry, too, but it had just come out that way. It would be silly to say that she would always be fond of him and the girls, and that she'd agree to anything he decided. He knew all that. He had only to say the word and she would forget the whole thing.

She added a postscript. "I say I'll be decent, and I will be. Dennis. But I do want deeply and really and truly to go to Reno and get a divorce."

Dennis's answer arrived promptly; her hands shook and her throat was dry as tore open the envelope. She had known he would be generous; he was unbelievably generous. He gave her a free hand. She must make any arrangements she liked for herself; but even though he naturally he could not see his way clear now ever to have his children with him, and they would remain with her for the present, if the day came when he might have them, he would expect their time to be divided between father and mother. The war, of course, might continue for many years—even the European end of it was far from settled, and while the war continued he could make no other plans than to remain where he was. There was always the possibility of his not returning. And he was always hers faithfully, John Dennis Hardisty.

Isabel could see the grim firmness of his jaw as he signed his full name; he was angry, of course; hurt, of course. What else could he be? But if the little sting of compunction that she felt was all that she had to pay, this was to escape cheaply.

Now for another bad moment or two, with his mother. The older woman had suspected something wrong, she had been strangely quiet since Isabel's return from New York; forceful always, capable always, vitally moving through her sphere of old friendships, dignified gatherings concerts and lectures. But toward Isabel she had shown an almost fearful gentleness, a certain expectant timidity, and the news, when it came, was Isabel sensed, less of a shock than Isabel had feared.

"Does Dennis know, Isabel?"

"Yes. I have his letter. Please don't blame me—don't think I'm acting without thought."

"No, dear, I'll not blame you. But—but the children, Isabel. Pussy and Catherine."

"I've thought of them. I truly have. Nothing of this will touch them or hurt them. Truly, they're the most important of all. But Dennis is gone, you know. He's not seeing them anyway. And he says here that the war may go on for years."

There was apparently no answer to this logic; at all events Mrs. Hardisty made none. Isobel knew that this change cost her tears; she saw the stains of them darkening her eyes. Isabel cried too, more than once, when the last days in the old Laguna Street house came. She cried quite unexpectedly at night when she was alone in the dark, and once she had a heartache far too deep for tears, when Pussy, hugging a leather-framed photograph to her small smock, announced that Daddy's picture was going with her to Reno.

"Kin I, Mommy?"

"Take it with you? Of course, darling."

Isabel went on assorting small dresses; some already too small, even for Catherine. A sudden chill fear weakened her. Suppose she were making a terrible mistake? The old way was always the more comfortable way. To write Dennis this was all a crazy dream, to tell his mother that one might waken from such a dream, to belong all to the little girls again and not at all to the lover who had held her in his arms, kissed her so possessively in that last good-by moment in the great eastern railway station—oh, this would be restful, this would be easy, this would be to make herself more than ever beloved!

But Avery had come home to California, he was there to help her through last days. Isabel saw him only for brief half hours, but those half hours carried her through the dreary last days in the old Hardisty house, where doors creaked dismally, Hing Lee pattered about without his usual smiles, and the door of her mother-in-law's room was always shut.

Avery was on the train with them until they reached Reno; the small girls, awed and ecstatic, sat opposite them on the train seat. Pussy and Catherine, in fall coats and poke bonnets wreathed with field flowers, beamed at the big dark man who had given each one a gold charm bracelet dangling with fascinations. They were travelling on a real train; they were presently to sleep on "shelves." A new nurse, big and Teutonic and masterful, would presently take them out to the diner, to have dinner with ice cream for dessert, and they would come back and tell Mommy all about it.

"Feeling all right now?" Avery asked.

"Wonderful, now. It was just that I hated saying good-bye to Dennis' mother. She's always been so kind to me."

"Well, you've always been swell to her .. Looky, goodby present." He put a small square box on her knee.

"It feels like another purse."

"It is, an evening purse. The other was for the rough work."

She had broken the thin ribbon that tied the box, rustled through layers of silky tissue paper to draw forth the confection in white kid, gold beads, pearls and corals that was called an evening bag.

"Avery! It's the most beautiful thing I ever saw."

"It is pretty." But he was looking at her glowing face rather than at the stiffly squared little bag, with its drawstring of braided gold and white. "It's lined," he said.

"I should say it is." She had the mirror, the lipstick, the filmy big handkerchief in her hands. A little further inspection showed her the bills, snugly tucked in, a small "100" in the corner of each making them look completely unfamiliar.

"Listen—" she began, and halted.

"Listen nothing. I want you to be comfortable, to have a little extra, to waste. You're my responsibility now."

"But honestly —" She had never been pressed for money, although she and Dennis had had to use it carefully. But to have so much—all one wanted —more than one wanted—was a new and a delightful sensation.

And Reno and the freedom of Reno, were delightful, too. The fresh hotel rooms and the fresh sweet mountain airs, the river rushing so freshly through the very streets of the town, the novelty of being so completely on her own, with Elsa and the round eyed gnomes for escort, the ordering of dinners and tipping of maids—it was all new, and tremendously diverting. It seemed odd not to be reporting every detail of all this to Dennis, but she satisfied herself with writing rather fully to his mother and enclosed some snapshots of the children.

"Remember, dear," Isabel's letter had concluded, in a generous mood that made her feel almost as old as the woman to whom she wrote, "Pussy and Catherine are yours whenever you and Dennis want them. No other arrangement would seem fair to me, or be fair to you. Avery and I will live in Woodside Park most of the time, with only occasional trips away from home, so that they won't be too far away."

This and a frank brief letter to Dennis, outlining her plans, seemed to close the story. Isabel told Avery about them and he said that she had been darned decent.

"Well, Dennis was always very decent to me," Isabel put in thoughtfully at this point.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Canada Pleased With Outcome Of FAO Parleys

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Copenhagen, Sept. 14 — (CP Cable) — Dr. G. S. H. Barton, Canada's Deputy Minister of Agriculture, said in a statement yesterday that the Canadian delegation is pleased with the outcome of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization conference, which recommended a world food board or similar agency to stabilize prices and raise nutrition standards by distributing food surpluses.

"Improving the general well-being of all people in the world through the service which the F. A.O. is establishing remains the primary objective of the organization," said Dr. Barton. "To accomplish this, however, it is recognized that some means of international collaboration must be found to make the essentials of food, shelter and clothing more readily available. The conference therefore approved the objectives in the Orr (Director-general Sir John Boyd Orr) proposals and for the purpose of finding a means by which international collaboration might be progressively attained, the conference decided to appoint a commission.

"Anxiety was apparent in the conference that action might be unduly delayed but the magnitude and complexity of the undertaking was stressed and the view prevailed that only after the most complete and exhaustive consideration of all facts and interests could a satisfactory report be produced."

As head of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, H. H. Hannam of Ottawa said the conference's action in proceeding at once to develop the board would be widely approved by Canadian farmers and "this concrete move will give them and producers everywhere confidence that the F.A.O. intends to face up to its great objectives in a practical way."

"In some such plan of co-ordinated international action our farmers see much hope for assuring markets and stabilizing fair world prices which in turn would stabilize the farmers' return and farm family living in our own economy."

MAY SPLIT WITH UNION

Liverpool, England, Sept. 16 — (CP) — A mass meeting of Liverpool dockers last night revoked their plans to split away from the powerful Transport and General Workers Union, and the decision apparently broke the back of a simmering union revolt. Two weeks ago 10,000 militant dockers were reported ready to revive the old Separate Dockers' Union which was absorbed by T.G.W.U. when Ernest Bevin, now foreign secretary, was the union's general secretary.

Families of Six War Vets Take Over Army Hut

Ottawa, Sept. 16 (CP)— The families of six war veterans—22 persons in all—today were busy setting up housekeeping in a vacant army hut on Porter's Island here following a weekend "invasion" by the Veterans' Housing League.

The move—second major operation by the V.H.L. in two weeks—brought to 104 the number of persons installed in vacant government property here by the organization. Last Sept. 5, 22 families, totalling 82 persons, established themselves in Kildare Barracks and Kildare annex in the Sandy Hill area.

The latest occupation was staged by Ben Azmier, V.H.L. vice-president, who said he had learned the city has asked the government to remove the buildings—situated on a small treeless island near the mouth of the Rideau River—to make room for a new civic playground.

Mr. Azmier said the six families most in need of accommodation were rounded up, their belongings loaded on trucks and moved to the vacant building.

An army captain, member of No. 3, R.C.E. Service and works company which occupies a second hut on the island, said the families "forced their way in despite our protests." The occupation had been orderly and there had been no physical opposition —"you don't oppose 30 men".

Examination Shows Control Lock Not Removed on Elevator

Ottawa, Sept. 16—(CP)—Technical examination of the wreckage of the RCAF Dakota aircraft which crashed yesterday at Estevan, Sask., with a loss of 21 lives showed a control lock on the starboard elevator had not been removed before the flight, Air Force headquarters said Monday in a statement.

"In view of the fact that all members of the crew of the aircraft lost their lives, it appears doubtful that a full explanation of this regrettable error will ever be ascertained," the statement said. "A full investigation covering the whole flight of the aircraft is already proceeding."

The Dakota, loaded with 21 R.C.A.F. personnel, was seen to approach the airport normally with its wheel lowered.

"For some reason the pilot decided not to land on his first approach and opened up the engines to go round again. During this manoeuvre, the pilot apparently lost control and the aircraft crashed."

An R.C.A.F. official explained that the control device used consisted of wooden blocks to hold the elevator in place when the plane was not in flight.

It would be quite possible for the aircraft to take off with the blocks still in place, since very little elevator control was necessary in take-off. However, in going around again after an unsatisfactory approach, elevator control would be essential in getting the aircraft back into the air. Apparently it was at this point that the pilot lost control.

Planes of the City of Toronto (Auxiliary) R.C.A.F. Squadron soared into the air for the first time Saturday, from Malton, to be the first auxiliary squadron in Canada to fly since the war. Wing Cmdr. G. W. Godderham (in plane) enjoys a joke with Flt.-Lt. Terry Evans, R.C.A.F. instructor from Trenton, before they take off.

Ground crews working on the planes were interviewed by Air Vice-Marshal E. E. Middleton, Air Officer Commanding, No. 1 Air Command, who visited the squadron before the planes took off. The Air Vice-Marshal is seen talking to Bob Cunningham of 277 Westmount Ave.

in-training at the Belleville General Hospital spent Friday with her parents.

Mrs. E. K. Hubble and Mrs. S. Westover spent a couple of days this week with the latter's sister, Mrs. Clarence Hay, who has been ill for the past few weeks at her home near Rossmore.

Friends of Mr. Bart Hogle were shocked on Saturday to learn that he had been suddenly stricken with a severe illness.

Mr and Mrs. George Denike, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Denike, Eudora and Douglas were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Ritz and Barbara at their home near Corbyville.

Mrs. Douglas McPherson returned home on Wednesday from the Belleville General Hospital, and all hope for a complete and speedy recovery.

The tomato-growers of this neighborhood are busy picking tomatoes and report a good crop. The rain on Tuesday was much appreciated and enabled the farmers to prepare the ground, and get their fall wheat sown.

ROCKET CRASH IN MID-AIR

Scheduled as an alternate number in a program of thrills, sp and action, "Lucky" Lott has conceived the rocket crash. With old jallopy placed on the race track and a dare devil in another au mobile, the desired effect is that the dare devil strikes the top of opposite machine causing his automobile to loop the loop in m air. The "Lucky" Lott Hell Drivers are scheduled to appear at Belleville Fair afternoon and evening on September 23.

Nipawin Claims Widest Variety Of Farm Produce

Nipawin, Sask., Sept. 16—(CP)—It was no war boom that doubled this community's population in the past three years to 3,000. Old hands today point to the lush Carrot River valley soil which they claim grows more varieties of produce than any other locality in the Dominion.

Only 500 people resided here in 1934 and even then the larger lumber interests which worked the area to the north began to move out as forest resources dwindled. Despite this exodus, the community mushroomed.

An added fillip to good times is the present construction of the $1,000,000, 140-mile road from Nipawin to Flin Flon, northeast of here on the Manitoba border. Besides opening new lumbering territories as well as other natural wealth, the new road is expected to be an attraction to tourists.

Lacking on airport or wartime industry, Nipawinians are themselves almost amazed at their boom. But a look at the agricultural files clears the mystery.

One crop produced $1,100 worth of raspberries; a quarter section of land yielded $17,000 worth of peas; wheat has yielded up to 70 bushels an acre; a crabapple tree produced $13 worth of fruit in one season.

First settlement at the town started in 1924 when the railroad opened up the country for lumber and agriculture. Lumber still plays a big part in the town's existence because 10 per cent of the population are engaged in the building trade.

The solution of the problem of financing a new eight-sheet curling rink was described by a resident: "I just went around town and picked up $8,000."

Lengthy Delay Before Ocean Travel Normal

By JOHN DAUPHINEE

London, Sept. 16—(CP)—Many months will pass before the British Commonwealth's passenger steamship services get back to peacetime normal.

While airlines expand their transocean services and start new ones, steamship companies are handicapped by continued Government control of their best vessels, heavy war losses and overcrowded shipyards.

Only one-tenth of the big passenger ships left afloat are so far being refitted for regular service. New liners will not be completed until 1947, or later.

"Impossible to submit any estimates"; "In all probability not before 1948," "Unable to give any information at the number " — these are ship-owners' answers to the question: "Can you estimate when your company expects to be back to its pre-war passenger capacity?"

Reconvert 11 Liners

A Canadian Press survey of major passenger steamship operators with offices in the United Kingdom, shows 11 well-known liners are undergoing reconversion, their war work finished. More will likely be released as these 11 leave their shipyard berths.

They will provide only a small fraction of prewar passenger capacity.

The situation of Cunard White Star Limited is typical. Its prewar passenger tonnage of 434,689 has been cut to 345,860 by war losses and permanent acquisition by the British Government. The entire fleet is still under Government control, except for the 83,673-ton Queen Elizabeth undergoing refit at Southampton.

She starts a Southampton-New York service Oct. 16. Cunard Chairman Sir Percy Bates said release of the 81,235-ton Queen Mary and 35,677-ton Mauretania will come "in such a manner and at such dates as will make sense with the real labor situation in the trades that belong to the reconditioning of ships."

Perhaps they will be derequisitioned in the autumn; but in any case, they cannot be in service before 1947. There is no hint yet when such famous Cunarders as Aquitania, 44,786 tons, and Scythia, 19,761 tons, will be freed.

Canadian Pacific ocean-going passenger tonnage has been cut from 274,868 tons to 88,010. Gone from its list are the Empress of Britain, Empress of Canada, Duchess of Atholl, Empress of Asia, Duchess of York and Montrose, lost through enemy action, and the old Empress of Russia, burned out at Liverpool.

Only the 20,022-ton Duchess of Richmond—now renamed Empress of Canada—has been released for refit. The 20,123-ton Duchess of Bedford, 21,833-ton Empress of Australia and 26,032-ton Empress of Scotland (the former Empress of Jap.) are still on Government service.

BE KIND TO ANIMALS

DR. BAKER'S COLUMN
Edited by Dr. Charles B. Baker, B.V.Sc.

HINTS

The education of a gun-dog should begin when about ten months or a year old. At ten months a dog has outgrown many of the frivolous habits of puppyhood, besides having more physical and mental capabilities.

The earliest lessons should teach the pupil to "drop" or lie down to order and signal, to "rise" on command; to "come in" or "go on"; to walk at heel and to retrieve, although the latter accomplishment is better left until the second hunting season. Lessons should last no longer than 15 to 20 minutes and two lessons a day is all that the young puppy should be asked to take. Pet the dog a few minutes at the conclusion of each lesson and gain his confidence.

"A Country Gentleman" This handsome gun-dog makes a very desirable personal companion for country life. The confines of town or city are altogether too restricted for a dog so active and whose every instinct calls for large tracts of open country.

The primary requisite of a Setter's training is obedience. Dogs vary in character as greatly as humans and the most successful trainer is the one who best understands the pupil and governs himself by the particular dog's individual disposition.

Yugoslav Claims West Powers Seek Trieste Bridgehead

Divide Surplus of Italian Fleet Among Four Powers

By JOSEPH DYNAN

Paris, Sept. 17 — (AP)—Yugoslav spokesman Dr. Ales Bebler accused the western powers today of seeking to establish a bridgehead in the free city of Trieste for future military action against Yugoslavia.

Opening the Slavic bloc's attack upon the proposed boundaries of the free territory, Dr. Bebler told a peace conference commission the only reason these were expanded beyond the Trieste city limits was to "allow space for the deployment of armed forces."

Dr. Bebler referred to the governor's powers in the free state as envisaged by western powers, and said they could be explained only by considerations of power politics.

"He can even call in foreign troops. But against whom? The object of their action is never named but is always implied — Yugoslavia."

Dr. Bebler spoke as statesmen lined up once again in the Italian political and territorial commission on opposing sides of the Trieste issue — this time in connection with the frontiers of the projected free area.

Urges Amendment

He urged the adoption of a Yugoslav amendment which would push the boundaries back to the city proper, a proposal paralleled by a White Russian amendment and contested by South African and Australian amendments which would extend the free states south in Istria to include Pola and other Italian coastal communities.

The military committee, meanwhile, upheld the foreign ministers council draft of disarmament clauses in the Italian Treaty after rejecting, 16 to four, a South African amendment which would have held Italy to military and naval restrictions at least five regardless of decisions made by the United Nations Security Council.

The military commission adopted without argument provisions for division of surplus Italian fleet units among the United States, Britain, France and Russia.

The vessels include the battleships Cesare, Italia and Vittorio Veneta, five cruisers, seven destroyers, one sloop, six torpedo boats, eight submarines and a host of minor craft and auxiliaries.

This same commission approved clauses ordering Italy to demilitarize her frontiers with France and Yugoslavia, as well as Sicily, Sardinia, Pantelleria and smaller islands in the Mediterranean and Adriatic.

Rject Motion

The Balkan Economic Committee, in considering annexes to the Romanian Treaty, rejected a British - sponsored amendment specifically providing for the restoration of United Nations shipping seized after June, 1941.

Delegates of other nations said they believed this was already sufficiently covered by the article requiring the return of all United National property.

Some conference sources predicted that the Slav delegations, mindful of Senator Tom Connally's words yesterday that Trieste "must be free from intrigue and conspiracy", might do what they did yesterday in the case of Bulgaria—quietly drop demands for extra territory in order to concentrate on the defensive struggle against opposing demands.

Senator Connally's counterblast against Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov's Saturday speech seemed convincing evidence to the 21-power conference that the United States State Department was sticking to its "tough" policy toward Russia despite last week's criticism by Commerce Secretary Wallace.

Abandons Support

Continuation of that policy would indicate United States support for de-militarization of the Bulgarian Border, but opposition to Greek demands for a slice of border territory from Bulgaria, Russia yesterday abandoned her support of Bulgarian claims to the return of Western Thrace from Greece, but not of her opposition to the opposing Greek demands.

In his speech Mr. Molotov maintained that the United States, Britain and Russia already are committed to fixing Poland's western border along the Oder River because they accepted the evacuation of 2,000,000 Germans from the territory taken over by the Poles, including Silesia.

Taking issue with a remark by State Secretary Byrnes of the United States in a recent speech at Stuttgart, Mr. Molotov said in a statement issued through the Polish news agency last night that the Polish frontier was fixed by the Big Three at Potsdam more than a year ago.

Father Maintains Son's Murder One of Revenge

Vancouver, Sept. 17 —(CP)—Police today marked the mysterious death of Thomas H. Mitchell, 18-year-old merchant seaman, closed following a coroner's inquest, but the youth's father maintained it was a "revenge murder."

A coroner's jury last night brought in a verdict of suicide "while in a depressed state of mind," but Thomas Mitchell, Sr., told Coroner J. E. Whitebread he believed a gang of youthful automobile thieves responsible.

The youth's body was found in a lane in suburban Mount Pleasant Sept. 10, shattered by an explosion, believed to have been caused by "black powder."

"All evidence points to self-destruction," said Inspector J. F. C. B. Vance, who said he believed the explosive had been held inside the boy's shirt.

Mr. Mitchell said the son had warned of some "mysterious Hindu." He had told a brother:

"If anything happens to me pin it on the Hindus," and the night of his death had been "awfully scared."

Mr. Mitchell admitted, however, that his son had been interested in making explosives and at one time had made some guncotton.

S.C. CANDIBIATE SCORES SURPRISE WIN IN ELECTION

Real Caouette Third In General Election, Ahead in Nearly Every Poll

Ottawa, Sept. 17. (CP)—Political observers today attempted to assess the effect the defeat of the Liberal candidate in the Pontiac by-election yesterday will have on the government and its future actions.

Observers believed the government would not try to minimize the defeat by saying victory went to one whom many might consider a dark-horse— Real Caouette, running under the banner of L'Union des Electeurs.

Mr. Caouette, 29-year-old manager at Val D'Or, Que., was not rated as a very serious threat. However, when 234 out of 274 polls had reported, this was how the votes were divided:

Hector Belec, Progressive Conservative 6,293; Mr. Caouette, 10,067; Lucien Labelle, Liberal, 8,383; Bernard Molloy, C.C.F., 1,736 and Oscar Roy, Labor Progressive 472.

The result was in sharp contrast to that of the Federal general election of June 1945, when the voting went this way:

W. R. McDonald, Liberal 13,265; T. E. McCool, Progressive Conservative, 6,158; Real Caouette, Social Credit 5,854; G. A. Rioux, Bloc Popularie, 4,485; and Antoine Tittley, C.C.F., 2,386.

It was Mr. McDonald's death last Spring which made necessary the by-election which marked the government's first test of strength at the polls since the general election.

Expected Easy Victory

To most Liberal supporters the by-election was expected to be an easy victory in a constituency which from 1917 had returned Liberal candidates in all but one election —that of 1930, when the Conservative government last took power.

Only immediate comment on the result came from John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, who said the outcome made it clear the government and the C.C.F. had lost "heavily" while his party and L'Union des Electeurs had made "considerable" gains.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King heard the results in his Summer home at Kingsmere, Que.

It was not immediately clear where Mr. Caouette will throw his support. L'Union des Electeurs is the banner under which the Social Credit Party is known in Quebec.

During the campaign Mr. Caouette was reported to have told a meeting that he would have nothing further to do with Solon Low, Social Credit leader, later, he was reported to have denied the statement. It is known Social Credit Party members supported him in his campaign.

Should he sit with the Social Credit Party, he will be the first member from any province except Alberta to do so.

Copenhagen's Lavish Hospitality Staggers Ration-Conscious Europeans

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Copenhagen, Sept.17 —(CP)—This reporter has been exposed to the hospitality of the city of Copenhagen and begs to report that Canada knows nothing about food.

Scores of delegates to the food and agricultural organization conference went to the civic reception. They listened to music and speeches in English and French. In their solemn Canadian, American and British ways they were prepared to go home after that. There was no food in sight and what do you do after speeches except go home?

Then a Dane said gently that there were some light refreshments on an upper floor. With visions of warm lemonade and a bun, the delegates drifted upstairs. Suddenly those in the rear found the pace had quickened. The front ranks were practically running—and no wonder.

The thin nostrils of rationed Englishmen and the quick eyes of sorely -tried Europeans had caught glorious odors and sights. In the vast corridors were tables with coffee and barrels of beer. In a score of rooooms with Polish pine floors and bright panels were snowy tablecloths sometimes visible for as much as an inch under a massive store of food.

Canadians who are supposed to have suffered not at all from food rationing started off easily with chicken legs in sauce, crisp rolls, a few shrimps and assorted vegetables chopped fine.

There were pancakes with jam made the Danish way; dishes which had to be tasted to see if they were meat or sweet; white little cakes, and green, and blue and purple, all tasting differently; jellies, tarts, pies, fruit salads and plain fruit.

The Danes said there was no waste. There was no more actual food than at an ordinry bnquet only they beleived in guests being allowed to help themselves.

Canada Aligns With Russia On the Repatriation Issue

By R. J. ANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Lake Success, N.Y., Sept. 17—(CP)—Canada aligned itself with Russia today before the United Nations Economic and Social Council in declaring that repatriation must be the "primary object" of all organizations attempting to solve the problem of Europe's 1,000,000 refugees.

During the immediate establishment of the proposed interim commission of the International Refugee Organization to prevent these non-German refugees being "abandoned to their fate in occupied territory," Paul Martin, Canada's delegate on the council, declared: "I fully concur in the opinion of my Soviet colleague that wherever possible obstacles which stand in the way of voluntary repatriation must be removed."

In Saturday's meeting, Nicholai Feonov, Russian delegate, pointed out that the work of repatriation, which he termed the "main task" facing the United Nations' refugee commissions, had not yet been completed. He urged that repatriation, rather than resettlement outside of Europe, be the first duty of the interim commission which is to take over the U.N.R.R.A.'s refugee activities next year.

1,675,000 Refugees

In Europe, the Middle East and Africa there are some 1,675,000 refugees and displaced persons who are being assisted by U.N.R.R.A. and governments of the United Nations. In the Far East are some 2,000,000 refugees, plus 100,000 of European origin.

The view of the Canadian government, Mr. Martin told the council today, is that the problem can be solved "only through co-operation amongst the United Nations in the fullest degree possible," the condition of Europe's D.P.S. "is as great and pressing a problem of relief as any of the others which emerged after victory", and should be regarded "as part of the larger problem of relief and rehabilitation, and treated accordingly."

As has most of the delegates who have spoken on the question before the council, Mr. Martin was critical of the proposed heavy financial budget.

Gives No Direct Reply

To the questions of F. H. La Guardia, U.N.R.R.A. Director-General, and previous speakers at the council table as to how many refugee persons countries such as Canada would be willing to receive, Mr. Martin gave no direct reply, pointing out that the Dominion's policy on post-war immigration has yet to be fully formulated. He said:

"The suggestion has been made from various quarters that certain states should express their willingness to take specified quotas of immigrants. The government of Canada would, I feel sure, be prepared to examine in detail any proposals which may emerge in this connection."

He noted that some 3,500 homeless persons were given temporary refuge in Canada during the war and now have been granted the right to apply for Canadian citizenship. Four thousand veterans of the Polish army in Europe also are to be admitted to Canada.

C. I. O. OPENS WAY FOR EASING OF MARITIME STRIKE

Decide to Cease Picketing Ships in U. S. Ports Manned by A.F.L. Workers

New York, Sept. 17—(AP)—A.F.L. longshoremen resumed work today on several New York piers following a National Maritime Union (C.I.O.) decision to cease picketing ships in United States ports manned by the A.F.L. Seafarers International Union "except where they are berthed at the same dock with N. M. U. vessels."

The first break in the strike, begun Sept. 5 by A. F. L. seamen against a wage stabilization board decision limiting negotiated wage increases, occurred without incident, police said. They estimated 500 men were at work by 8 a.m. E.D.T. and that six piers were free of pickets.

All foreign ships not under contract to the N.M.U. also were exempt from picketing under the new directive, issued this morning by N.M.U. president Joseph Curran after a conference with his aides at union headquarters here.

The N.M.U. head said the union's action would free about 40 S.I.U. ships in the port of New York, permitting them to prepare to sail immediately.

Curran's directive followed by several hours a request by the A.F.L. Maritime Trades Department that the N.M.U. withdraw its picket lines around all vessels on the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf coasts except C.I.O.-contracted ships "to eliminate the possibility of wide-open jurisdictional warfare along docks in all ports."

Will Respect Lines

In urging the N.M.U. withdraw its pickets by 6 a.m. E.D.T. today, John Owens, executive secretary of the department, which speaks for A.F.L. maritime unions, added that A.F.L. maritime unions would respect picket lines around vessels whose operators have contracts with the N. M. U. or the C.I.O. Marine Cooks and Stewards Union.

Also involved in the strike are the A.F.L. Sailors Union of the Pacific and the Marine Firemen, Oilers, Wipers and Watertenders Union, an independent organization.

The three unions struck Friday at the end of the A.F.L. strike to enforce demands for pay raises equal to those won by A. F. L. seamen.

Conferences between the N. M. U. and east and gulf coast ship operators were broken off Sunday night when the operators said discussions would be "futile" while the N.M.U. coupled its demands with those of the M.C.S. and M.F.O.W.W. on the west coast.

GOVT. OBTAINS WRIT TO RESTRAIN ALL SQUATTERS

Cannot Invade Any Vacated Buildings In Spreading Squatter Movement

London, Sept. 17—(CP)—The British government, acting in the face of threatened opposition by organized labor, obtained an interim injunction today against the invasion of government-vacated buildings in the spreading squatter movement.

In four cases testing rights of the squatters, the government obtained court writs restraining them from entering, remaining in or otherwise trespassing on premises occupied in a Communist-sponsored invasion last week.

The court added:

"If ever there was a case in which the court should intervene at the earliest possible stage in an action by granting an injunction, this is the case."

Meanwhile Britain's shop stewards — factory spokesmen for organized labor—took issue with the government, calling countrywide union support for the fast-growing squatter movement.

"We warn the government," said a statement issued by the National Acting Council of the Engineering and Allied Trades Shop Stewards National Council, "that they cannot expect engineering workers to back the production drive if attempts are made to throw their workmates on the street to make room for rich idlers who can afford to pay £20 ($80) per week, possibly as a result of black market operations."

The shop stewards' declaration said "Empty houses are a provocation to homeless workers."

First Slip in Eviction

Granting of the writs was the first step toward government eviction of approximately 1,500 persons who marched into vacant government buildings last week.

Aneurin Bevan, Minister of Health, who has termed the squatter movement "violence and lawlessness," refused today to meet a deputation representing 10,000 aircraft workers, who had called to ask that gas, water and other utilities be provided squatters in the government buildings.

Appealin to all shop stewards committees "to mobilize the utmost support throughout the trade union and labor movements behind the homeless who have rightly occupied luxury flats earmarked for wealthy parasites," the council's statement added:

Council Makes Statement

"We demand that the Labor government take immediate steps to insure that all vacant property is requisitioned at once to house those most in need."

The appeal directed "all shop stewards to raise this demand in every shop, yard and branch."

The situation was quiet at squatter-occupied buildings in London, with police patrolling the grounds and squatters maintaining guards behind locked doors.

Bloodshed Narrowly Averted in Berlin Between U.S. and Russian Personnel

Berlin, Sept. 17 —(Reuters)—High United States intelligence officers said today bloodshed was "narrowly. averted" near Tempelhof airdrome last Saturday in the "most serious rift yet between United States and Russian army personnel."

Conflict developed when a Soviet officer, Senior Lieutenant Morosov, and five tommy-gunners tried to remove two "Russian traitors" from an American jail by force of arms.

At the height of the melee the Soviet soldiers were held at bay by an American Lieutenant-Colonel, commanding all American military police here, and other high American officers. The Russian Lieutenant hurled insults at them, charging the Americans with being "unworthy" of being allies of the Russian army.

Capt. A. Feldman, in charge of the military police station, placed seven American riflemen and tommy-gunners outside the ring of Russians, it was stated. Captain Feldman sealed off the building with armed military police, supported by an armored car and a platoon of machine-gunners.

Earlier Soviet Major Kartmazov and two others entered the American sector of Berlin to arrest a Pole and his Ukranian common-law wife, deemed traitors because they remained in Germany throughout the war.

When the couple resisted arrest, German police called in a combined patrol of United States and Russian military police who took all involved to the police station for questioning. Kartmazov insisted on leaving the station at once with his prisoners, but the Americans refused permission until he had made a request through the proper channels, informants said.

Kartmazov stalked out to protest to Russian headquarters in Berlin. Morosov was in charge of the six-man Russian military liaison force at the station, and, before leaving, Kartmazov ordered him to have the two prisoners guarded.

Morosov, it was stated, interpeted this as meaning a strictly Russian guard. When the Americans objected Morosov became "very tough," banged the table and started using "vile language", American military intelligence officers said.

Building Turned Into Inferno In Few Brief Moments

Cause of Fire Has Not Been Determined Yet

Charred smouldering ruins inside gaunt upflung walls are all that remained this morning of the Graham Dried Foods dehydrating plant at 105 Pinnacle Street following a $250.000 fire that destroyed the building and contents shortly after two o'clock.

The fire which turned the big plant into a raging inferno a few minutes after its discovery swept through the top floor of the building breaking out of the roof in four places simultaneously and handicapping efforts of the Fire Department to halt its progress.

The main building is entirely gutted while all that remains of the one-storey annex is smouldering rubble and the fire-scarred skeletons of evaporating machinery.

A heavy fire wall upon which firemen concentrated efforts saved the adjoining Belleville Metal and Waste building while houses to the immediate south of the main structure were also saved by fire department efforts.

Five Employees Escape

Five employees of the Graham firm who were working on the top floor at the time managed to reach the safety of the street after a sheet of flame suddenly enveloped the floor. They dashed to safety leaving dinner pails and coats behind them.

The boiler of the plant located in the south end of the building suddenly exploded about 2.30 a.m. blowing a hole twenty feet square through the solid brick wall. Fireman Lorne Wilson who was in the building at the time jumped to safety but suffered severe cuts from flying glass. It was believed he had an artery severed in an arm.

Two other firemen were injured. Fireman Bob Fair suffered a bad foot injury when he stepped on a nail while Fireman Stan Pomeroy has a badly wrenched knee.

Cause Not Determined

Cause of the blaze, one of the worst in the history of the city has not been determined. The building contained a large quantity of onions for processing while a large stock of dehydrated corn was also destroyed.

Allan McCoy, night watchman at the Corbin Lock Company's plant on Coleman Street, was making his rounds at two o'clock and saw what at first he thought was a sharp flash of lightning. "Then", he said, "I saw flames leaping into the air to a height of fifty feet and I thought it was the C.P.R. station."

Deputy Fire Chief Gerald Vance who rushed to the scene seconds after the alarm was turned in immediately sent out a general alarm and ordered all available equipment to the scene. A few minutes later every member of the Fire Department was on duty.

Ten Lines Hose Used

"The flames were shooting out of the roof to a distance of at least sixty feet when we arrived", he said. He believed that drafts from the dryers fanned the flames and helped spread them through the building.

For a time firefighters feared the blaze might spread to the city gas plant southeast of the burning building and all efforts were made to keep the blaze to the burning building.

Ten lines of hose played water at the rate of 800 gallons a minute on the blazing building. From 2 to 7 a.m. the pumping station had shot 1,360,000 gallons of water through its mains to the fire.

A new plastic floor valued at $1,800 was completed shortly before midnight. Expensive laboratory machinery valued at thousands of dollars is completely destroyed.

The Bata Shoe Company which had acquired factory space in the building lost electrical equipment valued at $800. A soy bean company which also had plant space in the building lost special machinery.

Former Landmark.

Destruction of the building removes one of the landmarks of the city. Many a veteran of the First Great War will recall training days spent in the "canning factory" and ex-members of the former 39th Battalion, C.E.F., have memories of slogging and drilling in the building.

During the war the plant turned out large quantities of dehydrated foods such as cabbage, carrots, onions and other vegetables. It contained two complete evaporation units as well as dryers and other expensive machinery necessary for the plant production.

Firemen working in relays after the building had been gutted poured powerful streams of water into the smoking rubble. The walls of the main building were standing at a late hour this morning but there were indications that the entire west wall bordering Pinnacle Street would collapse. Sagging doors and buckling windows gave evidence of the settling of the heavy wall. Firemen kept curious spectators at a safe distance.

Nearby Roof Damage.

The roof of the Belleville Metal and Waste was badly damaged by flames and nearby houses now show peeling paint indicative of the intense heat.

Firemen working on the roof of the annex, a single storey building erected a few years ago and which housed one of the evaporation plants, stated they felt the roar of the flames beneath their feet as the blaze swept through the building beneath them.

It was stated later that the fire-fighting equipment of the Royal Canadian Air Force at Trenton, including an aerial ladder and a pumper, assisted the city fire department in its efforts to reduce the blaze.

The flames, fire department officials believe, had made substantial headway before discovery. One of the employees at work in the plant noticed a flash of fire on the top floor and gave his associates the alarm. Within a few minutes the floor was ablaze.

300 WORKERS RETURN

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 17 —(CP)—Approximately 300 office workers and other salaried employees of the Chrysler Corporation of Canada Limited, returned to work in the Windsor plants today.

Local 195 of the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) called a strike in the Chrysler plant June 17, and pickets had barred office employees from entering the plant premises since July 16.

A Chrysler official intimated yesterday that renewed negotiations between the company and union were progressing favorably.

ALD. E. E. FOLLWELL PASSES THE CIGARS AT COUNCIL MEETING

Alderman Edward E. Follwell was the recipient of many congratulatory handshakes at council meeting Monday evening when as the proud father of a new baby daughter he was called upon to pass the cigars to his fellow councillors.

Despite the strain of the past few days, however, Belleville's youngest councillor was still able to hold his own in any verbal discussion which happened to arise during the business of council. Mrs. Follwell is the former Ruth Brough. The proud couple have a three-year-old son.

Families Housed In Playground Dressing Rooms

Last Friday evening fire at the corner of Foster Ave. and Dundas Street which drove 19 persons out of their homes made an already acute housing shortage in the city just a little more acute, it was revealed at council Monday evening.

As result of the fire the city has been called upon to provide accommodation for one of the homeless families. Last week when two families were evicted from their place of residence by the Board of Health, accommodation was provided for one family at the city hall and for the other at the city police station.

Answering the call for the provision of emergency housing accommodation in the city the local Board of Education has granted the use of the dressing room at the West Belleville playgrounds and one of the families forced out of their home Friday night is now living there, according to Mayor Frank S. Follwell.

"The Board of Education has been very co-operative in the matter and also placed at our disposal the dressing room at the East Belleville playground. Two couples could be accommodated here."

The Mayor further stated that the special committee appointed by council to investigate every possible source of accommodation in the city has already done much work and that everything possible will be done to provide emergency housing to families in need.

Wife of Dead Flier Lived Here

Flying Officer William A. Perry, 27, native of Saskatchewan and husband of the former Bernice Rossatti of Belleville was one of the RCAF personnel killed in the air transport crash at Estevan, Sask., on Sunday, it has been learned in this city.

Enlisting in the Air Force at the start of the war F/O Perry was one of the first to train at No.5 I. T. S. in Belleville and while staying here he met his wife. The couple was married four years ago and have a two-year-old son Jack.

Mrs. Perry is at present living in Kemptville where her husband's father is now reported to be residing. She has been in Kemptville since last Spring.

Kiss Decides Custody Case

New York, Sept. 17 —(CP)— The kiss of a redheaded two-year-old Gerald Olsen, Jr., has decided a custody case.

His mother, Mrs. Lillian Olsen, two years ago entruted the child to Mrs. Norma Orrico when Mrs. Olsen and her husband were estranged. Yesterday the mother sought to regain custody in a court suit.

Mrs. Orrico, also seeking custody of the child, said she had grown to love him as her own. Justice Benjamin Schreiber left it up to Gerald.

"Go to your mother and give her a kiss," he said.

Gerald ran to Mrs. Orrico and won her the decision. The mother was told she could renew her application in six months if she had a home for Gerald.

Council to Invite Governor-General To Attend Veterans' Day Next Year

City council in the near future will set a definite date in 1947 for a Veterans' Day to honor the young men and young women from this city who served in the last war, it was decided at council Monday evening.

In a motion forwarded by Aldermen Claude D. Tice and Harold Woodley, and which saw ratification by council members, it was asked that a date next year other than a statutory holiday be set aside as Veterans' Day and that the Governor General be invited to attend the celebration.

The motion further recommended that the council act as a committee as a whole in investigating the probable cost of such a celebration, and to decide what the city will present to each veteran. These estimates are to be made in time for placing the cost in next year's budget.

Wants Costs Determined

Alderman Thompson indicated he was favorable to a Veterans' Day celebration but urged that council first determine the possible cost, while Alderman Chamberlain felt that the present council had no right to set a date which the incoming council would have to carry out.

"It is as little as we can do for those who did so much for us," maintained Alderman Tice. "Anything that it may cost will be little enough considering the sacrifice which our boys and girls made."

Alderman Trudeau wanted cost facts before any definite action was taken in the matter, while Alderman Follwell urged expediency as there would be much detail work to consider if the day were to be successful. The Mayor thought the council was getting started at the right time and approved of the action bringing in the motion.

Delegation Seeks Support

A delegation of local craftsmen attended council and with A. C. Cole as spokesman asked council support of a resolution passed by the Belleville and District Trade and Labor Council asking for a revision of the National Housing Act so that building materials might be made available to local builders and veterans wishing to build their own homes.

The resolution also asked that municipalities be permitted to enter into a housing scheme to build homes for working people with rent to be charged according to the income of the tenant with the option of buying.

Considerable discussion was heard on the matter with Alderman McDougall disagreeing with the resolution in that he felt if rents were fixed in accordance with the tenant's ability to pay, the city would be subsidizing housing to the advantage of industry. In reply Mr. Cole expressed his faith in industrial heads generally, and cited a housing project in Michigan where rents were fixed according to the financial ability of the tenant.

Against Wartime Housing

Alderman Armstrong agreed with Mr. Cole that the private individual could not get building materials. He said that materials were going into non-essential building instead of into homes, and that large organizations were getting the building priorities. "We do not want Wartime Housing in Belleville, but have veterans waiting to build their own homes if they could get the materials."

Mr. Cole paid tribute to the city council for their rejection of the Wartime Housing and Housing Enterprizes housing projects, expressing his opinion that the integrated plan whereby tenants own their homes by paying on a monthly basis was far superior.

Council decided to form a committee to attend a future craftsman's meeting where a suitable resolution would be formed to forward to Ottawa.

Auditor Gives Report

F. A. R. McFadden, city auditor, read his preliminary report to council indicating that the city was in an excellent financial condition. He reminded councillors, however, that the city no longer had a substantial surplus and that committees should keep within their year's estimates. "The city is in a very satisfactory solvent condition," stated the auditor.

Council passed a recommendation presented by Alderman "Twigg" Woodley detailing city firemen to police the area at the upper bridge at noon and at four o'clock on school days for the protection of school children.

Council also voted to advise R. A. Pringle that the city will purchase 60 acres of land owned by the Ponton Estate and now occupied by the Belleville Flying Club. The city offered to purchase the property at $6,000 as offered by Mrs. Enid Ponton, without reservations whatsoever.

Contract Awarded

The Diamond Construction and Engineering Company was awarded the contract for construction of a sanitary sewer on Benjamin Street running from Yeomans to Sidney Street.

Under inquiries Alderman Woodley asked if pressure could not be brought to bear on the Department of National Defence for the early re-opening of the laneway to the rear of the Armouries. Alderman Tice asked the city solicitor what progress had been made re the city request that the laneway be opened and was told that the matter was receiving the consideration of the department.

Alderman Allin asked if the Parks Board had paid the customary fee to the city for the privilege of having their Carnival near the C.P.R. station and was told that no payment had been made on the misunderstanding that the council had waived the fee.

"The Parks Board is not a charitable institution," countered Alderman Thompson. "They are operating under this council and if they are short of money we should know."

Alderman Follwell inquired if Wallbridge Road residents had been invited to the next Public Utilities meeting as had been suggested by council, while Alderman Woodley again asked why the Bridge Street roadway disturbed by the Bell Telephone Company had not been repaired.

Vote of Thanks Passed.

Under a motion introduced by Alderman Clarke, council moved a vote of thanks to the ladies who had supervised the distribution of 27,000 ration books in the city last week. Council then added Mr. Clarke's name to the list of those to receive letters of appreciation from the city.

"The distribution of more than 20,000 ration books in the city of Belleville has one significance," stated Mayor Follwell. "Granted that some of the books may have gone to out of town persons, if 20,000 ration books were distributed it means that there are that many people. I am glad to see that the city is growing."

When it was pointed out that their request might antagonize the Department of National Defence, a motion placed by Aldermen Tice and Woodley demanding immediate action regarding the opening of the Armouries laneway, was withdrawn.

Supported by Other Members.

Under general business Alderman Charles Hyde, supported by other members, asked that the council reconsider their refusal to grant a sign to J. M. Wood Company at a Dundas Street site.

To conclude the evening's business Mayor Follwell gave a report of the recent mayors' convention held in Vancouver. Mayor Follwell and Alderman Thompson attended the convention.

New Street Lighting for Business Section Authorized by Council

Members of city council at their regular meeting Monday evening gave authorization to the Public Utilities Commission to provide new street lighting in the business section of the city.

Streets on which the new lighting will be provided are Front Street from Dundas to Pinnacle; Bridge Street from the lower bridge to Church Street; Campbell Street from Front to Pinnacle and Victoria Ave., from Front to Pinnacle.

Speaking to council before the recommendation was put to vote, Alderman Glencoe Thompson stated that the $25,000 capital cost of providing the new lights would be borne by the Utilities Commission, while the city would shoulder the additional power cost ranging from $1,200 to $1.500 per year.

"This is the first time that the city has accepted anything which will not cost the ratepayers money," stated Alderman Thompson. "The capital cost of the new lights will be borne entirely by the Utilities."

Mayor Complimented

In speaking on the matter Mr. Thompson complimented Mayor Frank S. Follwell for his efforts in getting for the city the new lighting system which he stated would do much to brighten up the business section of the city.

The new lighting system will consist of approximately 100 units and will be purchased from Powerlite Devices Ltd. Light standards will be of octagonal steel with a height of 25 feet and a six-foot projection to give increased illumination in the centre of the street.

Oswald H. Scott, manager of the Public Utilities, stated to the Ontario Intelligencer this morning that delivery date of the new lighting standards was very uncertain. He said delivery would be dependent entirely upon strike conditions and it was not expected the equipment would be available until late in 1947.

Martin and a friend, Ken Logan, 17, were sitting on a log when the gun exploded as Martin reached for a knife.

Billy Anderson, stepson of Mrs. Anderson, was taken into custody at Barstow, Southern Calif., and held for questioning after an examination disclosed bloodstains and bits of human flesh, according to police. The boy is also charged with forging his father's name to three cheques totalling $325. He told police he knows nothing of his parents' disappearance and that he had left home because "the folks were too tough on me."

Merchants Urged To Act on Request From Committee

Feeling that the percentage of replies received to a questionnaire sent to 162 merchants of the city requesting their opinion as to whether they are in favor of or against the Saturday closing of shops at six p.m. did not indicate a clear cut opinion of the majority, the Retail Merchants Committee of the Chamber of Commerce today urged all merchants who have not done so forward their replies immediately.

In the event that some merchants have not received the questionnaire, or have mislaid it, the committee urgently requests these to send in the questionnaire to register their vote Yes or No on a postcard mailed to the Chamber of Commerce not later than Thursday, Sept. 19.

The committee will meet again at the Chamber of Commerce offices on Friday morning at 10 o'clock to further consider the opinions. It is highly important that every merchant register his or her opinion, on this important matter.

Secondly, the registration of these opinions will give the committee a full list of city merchants which can be used in the future.

Of the 162 merchants sent the questionnaire, only 70 replied. The committee feels that no action should be taken when so few merchants expressed an opinion on the matter.

Sea Cadet Corps Opens Fall And Winter Season

Showing plenty of enthusiasm and youthful energy forty-four young members of the Belleville Sea Cadet Corps turned out Monday night at the Armouries to inaugurate their fall and winter term of training.

Under the command of Lieut. E. Zeran, corps commanding officer, the young sailors went through their first parade manoeuvres demonstrating in no uncertain manner that they had not forgotten what they had learned in the early part of the year, and at summer camp.

The Optimist Club of Belleville, it was announced, will sponsor the corps and assist it financially and in other ways. Eleven recruits were taken on the strength of the corps last night and it is expected many more will join the unit as the season advances. Training nights are Mondays and Thursdays starting at 7:30 p.m.

Special emphasis will be placed on the smart drum and bugle band of the corps this autumn and it is believed the unit will be one of the best of its kind in this part of Ontario. Members of the band will participate in other kinds of training as well as the functions of the organization.

Three officers of the corps have retired. These include Sub. Lieut. F. Flater, Sub. Lieut. J. Keeble and Sub. Lieut. T. McCauley.

Announcement was made of the promotion to the rank of midshipman of Ross Watson, one of the original members of the corps who has been with it since its inception in 1941.

Members of the Optimist Club, it was stated, will take an active interest in the unit and will furnish three officer replacements In addition its members will interview parents of recruits to find out their feelings on the matter of their sons joining the corps.

Tomato Pack Nearly Completed In P.E. County

Picton, Sept. 17—This week will see the big end of the tomato pack in Prince Edward completed. So far, the light frosts have not done any damage. However, the very cool weather has retarded the ripening of the fruit, though earlier patches have, in many cases, been picked bare. Factories have been working night and day, but several juice lines were added by factories this year, so any rush can be handled.

Much help from outside Prince Edward County was secured, both for picking the tomatoes and in the factories. Ten cents a bushel is paid for picking. Factories started a buying war early in the season and the price rose to $1.00 bushel. Canners met and agreed on the contract price of 60c. bushel, but this is not being adhered to in the strictest sense and additional inducements are being offered by some factories.

Growers desired to take advantage of the price war by demanding higher prices, but a meeting was cancelled and the matter left until later. Next season it is likely that the growers will demand a better price, arguing that if canners can pay $1.00 bushel, or higher, when they need tomatoes, they can afford to contract at a better price. It appears that the canners, in bidding above the price set, have let themselves in for a warm debate before 1947 prices are agreed upon.

Harris Statement Denies Murder Of Mrs. Lyons

Whitby, Sept. 17 — (CP) — William Lawrence Lyons testified yesterday that "not a cent" was found in his wife's purse, although she was methodical about money matters, as the retrial of Lorne Cecil Harris in the strangle slaying of Lyons' wife, Audrey, continued.

Lyons said she should have had about $91 but there were no bank deposits and no receipts to show money spent.

The woman's husband was recalled to the stand to "shed some light on a letter said to have been found in the Lyons' house. But when defence counsel A. W. S. Greer opened his cross-examination with a query: "Had you told her (in the letter) to stay away from these Lintons?" Mr. Justice F. McFarland ruled against questions concerning its contents.

The letter was mailed from Newfoundland by Lyons a few days before she was found strangled with a pyjama jacket in the bedroom of her home at nearby Ajax. Lyons said he had destroyed the letter.

Earlier, statements given to Provincial Police by Harris after his arrest were admitted as evidence. In one statement Harris said: "If I am accused of murder, or guilty, I do not remember."

He told of going to Whitby and having some beer in a hotel with "Carl Linton and his brother and a fellow named Gord." They went to a dance at Ajax and finally to the Lyons house.

"Just before we left Carl went into the bedroom and came out. Pat (Donald) Linton went into the bedroom. Then I went just inside the door and said I hoped we hadn't caused her any trouble."

The bedroom was in darkness, the statement continued, and Harris could not tell "if she was dressed or in a kimona." Mr. Lyons, he said, had told him she was not feeling well.

He left the Lyons house with Carl and Donald Linton, he said, and they separated on the walk home. On the way to his rooming house he fell and cut his face. He denied, on cross-examination, going back to the house.

Squatters Orderly, Much Quieter Than Former Occupants of Building

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Teddington, Middlesex, England, Sept. 17—(CP)—From windows facing leafy bushy park — once the playground of King Henry VII — you see into the daily lives of brave new neighbors: the squatters who moved into three rows of army huts several weeks ago.

They have replaced the battalions of troops who lived there during the war. First, men of the British Army in training for D-Day; then the breezy Americans who ran powerful radios morning, noon and night; then colonial and Dominions troops getting ready for the victory parade.

The squatters, though unofficial tenants, are just as orderly and somewhat quieter than their predecessors. They marched in boldly, one sunny Sunday morning bringing food, furniture, perambulators, bicycles, radios and phonographs.

Now the squatters are comfortably settled. Bright fires burn in well-polished stoves. Walls have been washed. Gay curtains decorate windows and flowers from neighboring gardens stand in jugs on the window sills. The menfolk have done wonders in carpentry, putting up mantelpieces, cupboards, wall racks and sundry accessories.

Acquiring Home Atmosphere

"We have staked out our claim — just like your Canadian pioneers did — and nothing will move us but the promise of better accommodation," said ex-serviceman Ted Hartland who used to live with his wife and two children in one room at Kingston, two miles away.

The Bushy Park camp is rapidly acquiring a home atmosphere. Where once there was a jungle of grass, neat little gardens have begun to appear and on Mondays the landscape is festooned with washing on the line.

"These little places could be improved a hundred different ways if only we had the materials and the permission to use them," said Mrs. J. V. Leason, who, like so many women squatters, married a homeless soldier.

"Our hut is quite large. It could be nicely partitioned, one hall for a living room and bedroom, the other half divided into two small rooms for the children. But that would need lots of timber and the police would probably interfere if we tampered with the place."

The Belleville Hospital

In another column on this page Mr. W. C. Mikel discusses some problems pertaining to the Belleville Hospital and making some suggestions one of which merits further examination. Mr. Mikel says: transfer the hospital to the city to be operated by the city council.

It is a matter of common knowledge that hospitals these days are facing difficulties even greater than a few years ago. Not only are these institutions crowded beyond their capacity but they are having trouble keeping sufficient nursing staffs; also kitchen and maintenance help. Then there is a much greater cost of food and supplies which, with increased wage costs of many thousands of dollars, result in deficits in many cases of huge sums. These deficits are made good by the taxpayers or money from endowment funds.

These costs have been reduced to some extent by increased room and general rates but fall far short of making ends meet. As practically all public hospitals are operated by the municipality in which they are located the Belleville hospital is an exception to the rule. This is owned and operated by the Women's Christian Association and as Mr. Mikel says has no source of revenue beyond what it earns by service rendered.

Hospital authorities here say that up until the last year the institution has been able to stand on its own feet, as it were, and also to partially pay off the debt on the new wing and other renovations. This has been done by careful supervision of its operation and close attention to collections. However, with mounting expenses it is understood the hospital will likely end the year with a substantial deficit. If it is correct as Mr. Mikel says that the extra wages for the nursing staff will amount to $20,000 annually then it can be seen that the problem is a pressing one.

Raising the room rates is the only recourse the Belleville Hospital has of obtaining extra revenue but there is a limit beyond which it is not well to go. It makes hospitalizations costs excessively high for people in moderate circumstances, would contribute to ill will and help to drive many patients to hospitals in other cities, especially those in the border-line districts.

The other solution as the letter writer suggests is for the Women's Christian Association to turn the hospital over to the city for operation in the same manner other public utilities are managed. The neighboring counties could be asked to share the burden for the city should not be required to shoulder the full load.

The question will probably be asked, why should the taxpayers assume this task? To that the answer could be, the city obtains a modern institution at no cost to the taxpayer, there have been no demands in the past for extra funds as most other centres have had, and until our governments can be induced to give free hospitalization or sufficient grants to offset some of the costs there seems no other solution. There must be a hospital for the ill to go to. We have our police force, the fire department and our public utilities. Is the hospital less important than any of these?

Increase in Divorce Alarming

Commenting upon the fact that there are 18 divorce cases to be heard at the present sittings of the assizes in Port Arthur, The "News-Chronicle" of that city points out that there might be some interest in findings from an investigation of the marriage-divorce problems in the United States, which to a certain extent might be applicable to Canada.

Figures quoted show that at the beginning of the century in the United States about one marriage in twelve ended in divorce. In 1922 it was upped to one in eight and at the present time it is one in five. Grounds for divorce in the United States are not as restricted as in Canada. In this country adultery is the only offence for which divorces may be granted while in some of the states across the border they can be obtained for trivial excuses.

There is a movement in Canada for the broadening of the grounds for the dissolution of marriage, in fact it was even proposed at the recent meeting of the Canadian Bar Association at Winnipeg. The movement has not met with favorable comment throughout the country and is likely to die a natural death.

An interesting fact has been developed in connection with divorces and that is that about one-third of those divorced remarry their former spouses. This goes to prove that, after all, there is something in the marriage relation which, regardless of the law, convention or anything else, sets up the sense of a life time relationship. This is particularly true where there are children involved. This ratio of re-marriage might be increased if the divorced parties had not, in their haste, contracted other marriages. All this reveals that there is undue haste in many cases in severing the marriage tie and that the freedom gained is not worth the sacrifice.

It is the belief of those who have studied the question that the best protection against divorce is not in the law which makes it either difficult or easy but in some form of education which would impress young people with the nature and seriousness of the contract. The safest marriage is the marriage of people who have most things in common. Marriage is a test under any conditions. Differences in nationality, training, environment, outlook, opinions, religion, habits and otherwise all add to difficulty.

Windsor

Armor, furniture, paintings, tapestry, ceramics — national treasures which went "underground" during the war — have once more taken their place in Windsor Castle. The staffs of St. James Palace, the Treasury, and the Privy Purse, quartered in Windsor during the war, have moved back to London. Mr. and Mrs. John Bull may once again wander around the State Apartments, residence of Britain's monarchs for 900 years, examine the old masters, and peer into the tiny rooms of the Queen's doll house.

The herculean task of refinishing was carried out under the direction of Stanley A. Williams, Castle Superintendent for the past 10 years, with a team of 52 workers, only two-thirds of his peacetime staff.

Although the State Apartments are open five days a week, they must always be kept in order so that the King and Queen and their staff can move in at a few hours' notice. When the Court moves out, much of the furniture disappears under dust sheets and the china is stored away.

When crowds are filing through the State Apartments there is nearly always a bottleneck in the state bedroom. The great gilt fourposter, with its brocade curtains extending upward to a domelike structure hanging from the ceiling, is always a centre of attraction. The last monarch to sleep in this bed is said to have been Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany.

Tin Cans

The major can companies are planning a 20 percent expansion in production fecilities plus an extensive institutional program as a move to recapture some of the packaging business lost in recent years to the plastic and glass industries, Marketing reports. The can industry is pinning its post-war hopes on packaging hundreds of new war-born products in addition to continuing to put up the more than 2,500 different items it had before the war. By far the larger percentage of the industry's production is scheduled for the canning of food.

Newspaper Facts

Besides carrying on miraculously under wartime difficulties occasioned by the Blitz and not missing a single issue, the Coventry Evening Telegraph raised £18,000 ($80,100) for three Spitfires, and £34,222 ($152,288) for a parcel fund for local servicemen.

JUST FOLKS

(Copyright, 1946, Edgar A. Guest)

By EDGAR A. GUEST

SUREST TREASURE

A little garden gay with bloom,
White curtains at the window pane;
At night, a pleasant sitting room,
The children safe in bed again;
A car in which to come and go;
What more can riches vast bestow?

A few bright bits of silverware;
Some pretty china cups and plates;
A few good friends who wait to share
The harsh decisions of the Fates;
At night, a loved one's welcoming kiss;
Can rich men purchase more than this?

A doctor answering the call
Whenever one you love is ill;
Long shelves of jelly in the fall,
And coal enough the bin to fill;
Ribbons and frocks in good supply;
What more can rich men's money buy?

Oh, there are yachts and tapestries,
And pictures rare and costly things,
But happiness is not of these—
Out of the heart alone it springs.
And who has love and peace of mind
Has treasure of the surest kind.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why is a kind of wine called port?

"Port" as the name of a kind of wine is a shortened form of "Porto," the Portuguese name of a city in northern Portugal, which ranks second only to Lisbon in population and importance.

The Portuguese refer to the city as "O Porto," literally "the port," but in English and certain other languages the article "O" is compounded as part of the name and it is written "Oporto."

"Portugal" itself is derived from the name of this city. In ancient times a city at the mouth of the Douro River was known as "Portus Cale." A district of which Portus Cale was the capital came to be known as "Terra Portucalensis," which in turn became first "Portucalia" and finally "Portugal."

Portugal has long been noted for its wine industry and two of the most famous wines in the world derived their names from places in that country — Port and Madeira.

Madeira, like the Azores, is regarded as an integral part of Portugal. The name in Portuguese literally means "timber" and the island was so named because it was thickly wooded when the Portuguese settled there. A white wine produced on the island was called Madeira in English as early as 1585. Port wine is not mentioned by Shakespeare but Madeira wine is. In I Henry IV Poins asks Sir John Falstaff: "How agrees the devil and thee about my soul, that thou soldest him on Good Friday for a cup of Madeira and a cold capon's leg?"

The Oporto wine industry was not established until 1678 and the earliest English use of "port" in the sense of wine recorded by the Oxford dictionary is dated 1691. Since then Oporto has exported immense quantities of wine and the city is famous for the product.

Port is generally strong dark-red wine with a sweet and slightly astringent taste. The Portuguese define port as wine made from grapes grown in northern Portugal, exported from Oporto and containing more than 16.3 per cent of alcohol. In the United States port is applied to wine similar to the Portuguese product.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

SOME OBSERVATIONS ON THE HOSPITAL

Editor,
The Ontario Intelligencer,

The following observations are made in reference to the recent walkout of 31 nurses of the Belleville Hospital for increased pay and an eight-hour day.

Everyone has sympathy and commendation for the members of the nursing profession.

Having served in a legal capacity for many years for the Women's Christian Association concerning the Hospital and the Home for the Aged, I may be able to offer some suggestions worthy of consideration.

The Belleville Hospital is not owned by the City, but is owned by the Women's Christian Association of Belleville, an organization of Belleville Women incorporated by a statute of the Ontario legislature. The organization has no capital and has no stock and has no source of revenue except what is received from patients or voluntary gifts. The City Council makes no annual grant for the upkeep of the Hospital. If poor patients unable to pay hospital services are admitted from Belleville or any other municipality, the municipality pays a portion of the charges for these indigent patients.

The demands of the nurses would involve an additional annual expenditure of about $20,000.00. Unless the rates are increased or the City Council furnishes the money, there is no source from which this payment could be made. The City Council has passed it estimates and levied the taxes for this year, consequently it will not be able to make this additional grant for this year.

A corporation can only act by a regularly authorized meeting of the members of the corporation which is held once a month and owing to the absence of members on holidays it is not easy at this time of the year to hold a meeting.

Nurses in training receive their training free and are also paid. Doctors, lawyers, clergymen, teachers, stenographers and others get nothing while being trained and have to pay for their training and education.

If further difficulties occur there are several courses open to the Women's Christian Association:

1. Arrange to dispose of the title to the hospital to the Roman Catholics upon their undertaking to operate it.
2. Transfer the hospital to the City to be operated by the City Council.
3. Transfer the hospital to an organization composed of doctors, or the doctors and nurses, to be operated by them.
4. Continue the hospital operation as at present and obtain a sufficient grant from the City to take care of deficits.

It may be mentioned that the hospital is a substantial industry for the city as it employs over a hundred persons and serves about a thousand meals a day and has the reputation of being one of the best hospitals for its size in the Province.

WHAT CONSTITUTES A HEALTH DIET?

In the booklet "The Seven Keys to Vite" (for copy send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope) you will find, if you have attained or maybe passed the peak and now find youself interested in how to remain young and how to live long and all that sort of thing—which never interested you much before—an outline or master menu for a basic health diet.

Other names for the diet are rejuvenation diet, corrective prospective diet, regeneration diet, and, without departing from practical common sense, bright eyes and clear complexion diet.

Here is the outline as I give it in 7 Keys:

BREAKFAST

Glass of orange juice	100	Calories
Two eggs	166	”
Fresh fruit	80	”
Glass of milk	160	”

LUNCH

1-3 head of lettuce	16	Calories
Tablespoonful of oil dressing	93	”
2 fresh vegetables	80	”
Pat of butter	95	”
2 glasses of milk	320	”
Fresh fruit	80	”

DINNER

Meat	190	Calories
1-3 head of lettuce	16	Calories
French dressing or mayonnaise	93	”
2 fresh vegetables	80	”
Pat of butter	95	”
Glass of milk	160	”
Fresh fruit	80	”
Handful of nuts	140	”
Cheese	90	”

Before you begin cheating on this diet, remember it is merely a model or pattern or outline on which to build your own health diet. As it stands it is a corrective, protective, basic health diet—a rejuvenation, longevity diet—and, for the sound reasons indicated, a beauty diet too. All that, in a word, is vite.

This diet supplies all of the minerals (with the possible exception of iodine) and vitamins, all of the calories, the amino-acids (complete proteins), all of the carbohydrate (sugars and starches) and all of the fats, as well as nearly if not quite all of the calories a sedentary adult requires to keep in optimal nutritional condition.

As it stands it is NOT suitable or adequate for a child—and by child I mean a person who has not yet attained full adult growth and development—which some attain as early as the age of 19 years, most attain at the age of 21 to 23 years, some not until the age of twenty-five years. It is for this reason that it is unwise and generally dangerous for a young person to attempt reducing on any diet without the constant supervision and advice of a physician—and I don't mean a mail-order or self-titled "specialist."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

STIFFNESS IN KNEES

Should stiffness in the knees caused by arthritis be rubbed once a day with oil of wintergreen or left alone or just massaged without wintergreen or other liniment?

(B. K.)

Answer— Your own physician knows best whether massage or manipulation or exercise (use) of the joint or rest would be beneficial in present circumstances. In a general way if wintergreen or a mild liniment, such as a teaspoonful of oil of wintergreen in six fluid ounces of camphor liniment, gives any relief to the stiffness or soreness it is all right to rub on every day.

CANCER

Would like to know if cancer is inherited. (Miss R. R.)

Answer—As nearly as I can learn, physicians who have studthe question and have had wide experience differ—fifty-fifty. My own notion (I'm no authority) is likewise unsettled—meaning I don't know whether cancer can be inherited or not.

OH, PROFESSOR!

I referred your claim that quinine pills prevent stage fright to my psychology professor—who said they might be good for people easily susceptible to suggestion but bread pills would give the same results. (Millicent)

Answer—The mule has no faith in the veterinary's medicine but the vet cures the mule just the same.

CONVENTION TO FIX NEWFOUNDLAND'S STATUS

General view of the convention as the delegates assembled

Mayor Andrew J. Carnell and G. E. A. Jeffrey, editor, at the Colonial Building

The national convention which opened last week at St. John's, Nfld., resumed deliberations yesterday to determine the constitutional future of the colony, whether it is to be a Dominion, a colony or a province. Governor Sir Gordon Macdonald is seen as he reviewed the honor guard from the Newfoundland Constabulary at the convention's opening ceremonies.

Michael Harrington
Youngest delegate, descended from a seafaring family for generations, who made the convention's opening address, moving a motion of loyalty to the King.

Hon. Peter Cashin
Former Finance Minister and leader of the Home Rule movement in Newfoundland.

UNITED CHURCH

Similar to Anglican Report

Dr. J. R. P. Sclater of Toronto, a former United Church Moderator, presented the report on reunion between the Church of England and the United Church. It was similar to a report presented by an Anglican committee to the Upper and Lower Houses of the General Synod at Winnipeg last week and approved there "for study only." It followed two years of study and consultation between representatives of the two church bodies.

In proposing a mutually acceptable ministry, the commission did so "safeguarding fully the aims and rights of the ministeries of both communities," Dr. Sclater said.

Dr. Gordon A. Siscoe of Toronto, general secretary of the United Church, presented the report dealing with the Canada conference of the Evangelical Church, describing it as not a scheme of union in the technical sense of the word but a basis of agreement whereby the Canada conference can enter the United Church.

"It will not involve any change in the doctrine or policy of our church," he said.

Want Day Observed

Its implementation is conditional upon the Canada conference, embodying about 9,000 parishioners in Ontario, most of them German-speaking, being in a position to take similar action.

The board secretary, Rev. J. R. Mutchmor of Toronto, presented the recommendations of the Board of Evangelism and Social Service.

It was proposed that the Board appoint a representative commission to study and report on conditions relating to the observance of the Lord's Day in Canada and Newfoundland.

Proposals were endorsed that in centres where housing congestion is acute or developing, committees be organized to study the situation and initiate such local action as may be possible and that the government be urged to take immediate action to provide adequate housing.

Want Adequate Wages

The council endorsed a proposal that it "urge shareholders, management and organized labor to do their utmost to move quickly and on terms of good will and fair dealing into a high level of production and employment, adequate wage rates, annual wage plans and holidays with pay."

Labor's right to strike was recognized by the council, but only as a last resort and on decision, by secret ballot, of all employees concerned.

In connection with another recommendation, that the government co-operate with industry and labor to clarify the law concerning picketing, Dr. Mutchmor said this phase of strikes had "grown up topsy-like," and required considerable study.

Ratified by the council were several decisions of the Sessional Committee on law and legislation, including:

Approve Application

A memorial from Middlesex Presbytery through London Conference requested that steps be taken by General Council to incorporate London United Church Council of the Middlesex Presbytery. It was recommended that the application for incorporation be approved and remitted to the executive with power to issue, and that the sub-executive of General Council be charged with the duty of preparing a model charter of incorporation for this and other similar organizations.

Perth Presbytery through London Conference requested General Council to authorize the preparation of a suitable parchment to be presented to a candidate for the ministry upon his being licenced to preach. The executive was directed to prepare a suitable form.

Rev. John R. Leng, until now Veterans' Councillor at Queen's University of Kingston, was presented as the new Assistant Secretary of the Board of Home Missions.

British People Like to be Clean As Well as Full

London, Sept. 17—(CP Cable)—Canadians packing gift parcels for the United Kingdom for Christmas or any other time might remember the British people like to be clean as well as full.

Some soap would be a welcome addition to the food parcels. British officials said the parcels must not exceed 11 pounds, of which only seven can be food and not more than two pounds of any one food. The other four pounds could include necessities like soap and clothing.

Not more than one parcel monthly is allowed and it must be unsolicited. These regulations are set forth by the Board of Trade which demands import permits for almost everything brought into the United Kingdom apart from gift parcels.

Customs officials said both new and used clothing sent in gift parcels are dutiable. Thus while the Trade Board has no objection to clothing being part of the parcel the recipient may have to pay duty. Although many may have received clothing in parcels and not been charged duty, it does not necessarily mean they will escape in the future.

Flood Continues

Officials said the flood of parcels from the Dominions continues although there have been recent protests that the parcels have not been received. If regulations are contravened the department has power to impound the parcels but one source said that of the millions received in the first five months of 1946 only 125 were stopped in that manner.

Officials said they doubted that many parcels had been lost in transit as lengthy delays still occurred in shipments and some who protested that parcels were stolen or had strayed received them later.

British housewives find the food situation more difficult than during the war with bread rationing and reductions in several categories. They find it difficult to make food tasty and orange or lemon peel would help with Christmas cakes. Nuts would be welcome and dried pears, apples or apricots. Some raisins and currants are available here but Canadian chocolate bars, soups, puddings, canned meat and the like remain most acceptable.

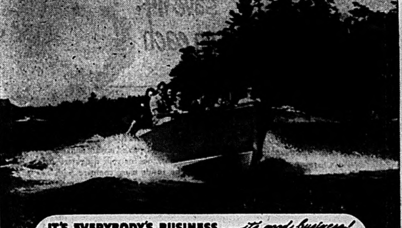
Fun Afloat...!
for our friends from the States

The fun they can have brings millions of visitors yearly to Ontario's rivers and lakes. Let's do our part to make their visits more pleasant than ever . . . so they'll want to return year after year!

WHAT CAN I DO? The answer is plenty! Here are some of the things anyone can do. The suggestions come from a well-known Ontario hotelman:

1. Know the places of interest and beauty spots in your district and tell people about them.
2. When you write your friends in the States tell them about the places they would enjoy visiting.
3. Try to make any visitor glad he came.
4. Take time to give requested information fully and graciously.
5. In business dealings, remember Canada's reputation for courtesy and fairness depends on you.
6. To sum it all up, follow the "Golden Rule."



IT'S EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS . . . it's good business!

Worth his weight in gold! The province of Ontario profits to almost the same extent from tourist business as it does from the gold mining industry. It is up to each of us to see that it goes on growing.

This diagram shows how everyone benefits from the Ontario tourist income. Every dollar is shared in this way . . . 1. Hotels; 2. Stores; 3. Restaurants; 4. Taxes, etc.; 5. Amusements; 6. Garages.

It works both ways! They treat us royally when we visit them . . . we can't do less than return the compliment. Remember that it costs money to take a holiday . . . so let's see they get a good return for every penny they spend.

"Let's make them want to come back!"

WEDDINGS

IRELAND—COULTER

St. Thomas' Church was the scene of a very pretty Autumn wedding on September 14, at 12 noon, when Shirley Ann Coulter, daughter of Major and Mrs. Harry Franklin Alford, Belleville, became the bride of Gerald Arthur Ireland, son of Mrs. George A. Ireland and the late Mr. Ireland, Trenton. The Rev. A. B. Payne and the Rev. F. A. Smith officiated and wedding music was played by Professor E. Wheatley, with soloist, Mr. John Deacon, who sang "Ich Leibe Biche", before the ceremony and "Beloved It is Morn", during the signing of the register. The church was beautifully decorated with shell pink and white gladioli and ferns.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a tissue faille dress of creme de chocolat, fashioned with draped skirt and sleeves. Her matching hat was trimmed with ostrich tips and she wore a corsage of orchids. Miss Laureen Lewis was the bride's only attendant, wearing lime green crepe with mauve accessories and a corsage of yellow roses, scabiosa and gladioli tips.

Mr. Edward Snider, Smithfield, was groomsman, and ushers were Mr. James H. Graham, Belleville, and Mr. Clare Langman, Trenton.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Hotel Quinte, where the bride's mother received in a gown of black La Para crepe with yoke of powder blue sequins and pearls. She was assisted by the groom's mother, also wearing black crepe with sequin trim.

For the wedding trip, the bride chose a Malton cloth suit of old gold, the matching three—quarter length coat trimmed with ocelet fur. Mr. and Mrs. Ireland will take up residence in Trenton.

Prior to her marriage the bride was the guest of honor at teas and showers held by Mrs. C. A. Cameron, Mrs. S. Gordon Robertson, Mrs. P. C. McGuire, and Miss Laureen Lewis.

SLATER—KEEBLE

On Saturday, Sept. 14, at 11 a.m., Holloway Street United Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding when Joyce Alma, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Keeble, Mountain View, and William J. Slater, Belleville, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Slater, London, Eng., were joined in marriage by the Rev. C. A. Perkins. Miss Shirley Wilson was soloist, singing "At Dawning" and "I Love You", during the signing of the register.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a street length frock of white crepe with a headdress of orange blossoms with a shoulder length veil. A bouquet of Briarcliffe roses was carried. Her attendant, Miss Rose Slater, Toronto, sister of the groom, was gowned in a rose brocaded nylon dress with matching accessories with matching headdress and beige accessories.

The groom was attended by Mr. Howard Shanks, Sharbot Lake. Ushers were Mr. George Westlake, and Mr. Grant Devolin.

For travelling to Toronto, Niagara Falls, and Buffalo, the bride wore a grey wool suit with matching hat and black accessories. On their return, the happy couple will live in Belleville.

The groom's gift to the bride was a chest of silver, to the groomsman, gold cuff links, and to the ushers, wallets. The bride's gift to the groom was a gold military set, and to the bridesmaid, gold earrings.

Out-of-town guests were present from Toronto, Kingston, Madoc, Foxboro and Crofton.

OUTERBRIDGE—MacPHERSON

Miss Calara Belle MacPherson, niece of Mr. and Mrs. Garnet F. Grills, of "Gortlea", Paget East, was married on Thursday evening in the Wesleyan Methodist Church, Hamilton, to Mr. Frederick Collins Outerbridge, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Outerbridge, of "Durnford", St. George's. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. W. R. Seeley.

Given in marriage by Mr. Grills, the bride's dress consisted of a white brocaded taffeta bodice with a draped off-the-shoulder neckline and a full marquisette skirt with a long train. Her headdress was a coronet of orange blossoms with a fingertip veil. She carried a bouquet of gardenias.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Maurice Smith, and the bridesmaids, the Misses Irene Bowman and Margaret Dickens, wore dresses similar in style to that of the bride, but in lemon yellow. The attendants had Juliet caps to match, and they all carried gardenias.

Walker performed the nuptial ceremony before the altar massed with pink and white roses, gladioli and asters with the greenery of ferns. Pews for the guests were marked with white satin ribbon and pink roses.

Entering the church on the arm of her father to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding music, played by Mrs. R. H. Williams, the bride presented a picture of loveliness in a gown of white chiffon with inserts of lace, sweetheart neckline and tightly fitted bodice fastened at the back with tiny buttons from neckline to waist. The sleeves were three-quarter length and she wore white lace gloves. Her fingertip veil fell from a halo of orange blossoms, while her bouquet was of American Beauty roses. The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Marjorie Gay, gowned in blue chiffon over satin, with matching waist-length veil fastened in a coronet of apple blossoms and carrying a Colonial nosegay. The groomsman was Mr. Stanley Shane, of Newburgh. The soloist, Mrs. D. A. McIntosh, of Stirling, sang "I Love Thee", before the ceremony, and "Because", during the signing of the register.

A reception was held at the home of the bride, where the rooms were made beautiful with Summer flowers, in colors similar to these of the church decorations. The bride's mother received the guests in a two-piece dress of grey silk jersey, with brown accessories, and wearing a corsage of red roses, while Mrs. Jaynes wore a gown of rose petaldown with black accessories, and a corsage of pink roses.

The happy couple left for a wedding journey to Toronto and Niagara Falls, the bride travelling in a suit of blue gabardine, with black accessories.

RIVERS—RYAN

Stirling. (Special.)—St. James' Church, Stirling, was the scene of an early Autumn wedding on Saturday, Sept. 14, at 9.30 a.m., when Helen, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ryan, became the bride of Martin Joseph Rivers, son of Mrs. William Rivers and the late Mr. Rivers, of Bogart, Ont. The nuptial ceremony was performed by Rev. S. Lesage, before the altar banked with pastel shaded gladioli. The guest pews were marked with white satin streamers and the sanctuary lamp was decorated with a bow of white satin ribbon.

The youthful bride entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin ,played by Miss Pauline Shea. Her white satin wedding dress was fashioned with tight fitting bodice, sweetheart neckline and long sleeves, while the white net skirt was in bouffant style. Her full lenth veil fell from a Queen Anne headdress and she carried a bouquet of crimson roses. The bride's attendant was her sister, Patricia Ryan, gowned in full length yellow net with bouffant skirt appliqued with mauve velvet, and she carried a nosegay of sweetpeas and baby's breath. Little Gerrard Ryan, brother of the bride, was ring bearer and Maureen Whalen, of Tweed, was flower girl, frocked in mauve taffeta with matching cap and carried a nosegay of sweetpeas.

McDONELL—AIRHART

Marmora. (Special.)— St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday afternoon, September 14, when Annie Margaret Stewart Airhart, daughter of Mrs. Airhart and the late Stewart Airhart, of Marmora, became the bride of Allan Myles McDonell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred McDonell, of Stirling. The ceremony was performed at 12.30 p.m., by Rev. E. M. Cadigan. The church was tastefully decorated with pink gladioli and fern. Wedding music was played by Mrs. L. R. Green and during the signing of the register, Mrs. Blake Kerr, of Belleville, cousin of the bride, sang "Through the Years".

The bride was given in marriage by her cousin, Mr. Herbert Bonter. She was wearing a floor length gown of white slipper satin with fitted bodice, lace yoke and full skirt, the long sleeves extending to points over her hands. She wore a full length veil of tulle, held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms. She wore a pearl necklace, the gift of the groom and carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses and white gladioli.

She was attended by her sister, Dorothy, as maid of honor and Mrs. Wilmot Shortt, of Trenton, sister of the groom as bridesmaid. The former wore a gown of pink, fashioned with long torso of lace coming to points over a full net skirt, with sweetheart neckline and short sleeves. The bridesmaid was attired in pale blue Swiss dotted net over taffeta, fitted bodice, bolero and full skirt. The attendants wore elbow length veils caught by fairy headdress and lace mitts. Their cascade bouquets were of pink Briarcliffe roses and gladioli.

The duties of best man were discharged by Arthur McDonell, of Kingston, brother of the groom. The ushers were Wilmot Shortt of Trenton and Harry Oram of Bloomfield.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in St. Andrew's Church Hall, with forty guests in attendance. The catering was done by Circle 3 of St. Andrew's Women's Association.

Serviteurs at the reception were Misses Marjorie Wells, Grace Bonter, Joan Nash, Shirley Lummiss and Mrs. D. B. Sanderson, cousins of the bride and Mrs. Ray Nayler.

The bride's mother, who received wore a dress of navy blue crepe with matching accessories. Her corsage was of pink roses. She was assisted by the groom's mother, wearing navy blue crepe and a corsage of yellow roses.

The couple left on a short honeymoon trip, the bride wearing a grey dressmaker suit with black accessories and a corsage of pink sweetpeas. They will take up residence at Stirling.

V.O.N. History In Belleville Read at Meeting

Resuming their regular monthly meetings following the summer season, the Victorian Order of Nurses Committee convened last evening in the Chamber of Commerce with the president, Mr. N. E. Edwards. A feature of the business of the meeting was the reading by the secretary, Mrs. H. M. Francis, of a history of the Victorian Order of Nurses in Belleville prepared by Mrs. F. B. Foley. This paper was written at the request of Central Office, Ottawa, as a history of the Order throughout the Dominion is being published at a later date. The committee commended Mrs. Foley for the splendid paper.

Nursing Activities

In the report of the nursing activities for the month, Miss V. Adair introduced Miss Jessie Kimleck, a graduate of Ontario Hospital, Kingston, and a nursing sister who served overseas with the armed forces for some time. Miss Kimleck is in Belleville taking field training in connection with her Public Health course.

Mrs. Weese assisted the nurses in their duties during a busy summer. There were 166 new cases admitted of which 52 were new babies and 1263 visits were made during the three months to all patients.

Miss Adair's report referred to the weekly publicity in the Ontario Intelligencer, the results of which have been most encouraging as reflected in increased attendance at the pre-natal classes and Child Health Conferences. A total of 374 attended the Conferences in the past three months.

School having commenced the nurses are again in attendance at Cannifton School which has an enrolment of 96 this term.

Donated Window

In connection with the coming campaign for funds the Public Utilities have kindly donated their window for a week's display.

At the meeting last evening the resignation of Miss Werry who has been in Belleville for sixteen months was tendered as she is to have charge of a new district. Regret was expressed by the president and Miss Adair in losing such an efficient and popular member of the staff and the good wishes of all were extended Miss Werry in her new endeavor.

Campaign Plans

Discussion of plans for the coming campaign which begins September 30th occupied a greater portion of the meeting. The V.O.N. will be associated in the campaign with the Children's Aid Society and the Y.M.C.A. Mr. Clare Morgan, campaign chairman, spoke of the preparations. Mr. W. S. Stone, Mr. K. L. Reid and the president represent the V.O.N. on the campaign committee and at the meeting last evening, Mrs. C. A. Cameron, Mrs. H. M. Francis, Mrs. F. B. Foley and Mrs. T. R. Grant were appointed to take charge of the women helpers. Miss Agnes Gallagher outlined the plans of the publicity committee.

It was decided that Miss Grace Connor, graduate of Grace Hospital, Toronto, and of the Public Health Course would be appointed on the staff to succeed Miss Werry. Miss Connor will begin her new duties the first of October.

The meeting concluded with a social evening in honor of Miss Werry who graciously thanked the members for their good wishes for their kindness during her term in Belleville.

How to be an Ideal Wedding Guest

You're going to be a wedding guest? The wedding invitation offers you hospitality, friendliness, courtesy, and the appealing beauty of as lovely a wedding as your hosts can afford.

Now what is your responsibility as a guest?

If you are a kind-hearted friend and if it is your aim to be a kind-hearted guest, you will bow to this invitation by doing everything that shows your friendliness and appreciation. You will respect the feelings of everyone concerned with the wedding plans. You will do your best to co-operate with these plans. You'll be understanding . . . never critical or "hurt". You'll be considerate of the bride and bridegroom and their families . . . not selfishly absorbed in your own reactions and in your own convenience. You'll contribute gracious and thoughtfulness to the Happy Day.

Here are some definite suggestions too that will help make you an ideal wedding guest:

First, answer the invitation promptly, whether the invitation be a formal or informal one. This will help your hostess to know how many guests to plan for.

Then send your wedding present as soon as you can. The bride-to-be will appreciate this, for it gives her time to write a note of thanks to you before the last busy days preceding the wedding.

Arrive at the church reasonably early. This will make the ushers' task easy for them, and as "an early bird" you'll get one of the most advantageous seats.

The ideal guest bows to the usher who meets her, and talks graciously and naturally with him as he escorts her up the aisle. And she will accept without question the seat he assigns to her.

Rise the very first moment that you hear the wedding march, and remain standing during the ceremony.

When you are a guest at a church wedding, do not leave your place after the recessional until the bride's family, the bridegroom's family, and the guests who are seated in the reserved seats have been escorted down the aisle by the ushers. This is a fundamental and significant courtesy that wedding guests should bestow on the bride's family, who are the hosts of the wedding, and on the bridegroom's family, who are the guests of honor. There is a practical reason too . . . this interim gives the wedding party, the bride's mother and father and the groom's mother and father time to arrive at the reception place and to form the receiving line.

In a house wedding or any wedding where there is not to be a recessional, guests wait until the mother and father of the bride, the mother and father of the groom and then the other relatives of the bride and groom greet the newlyweds, before they go forward to greet them.

After the guests have been greeted by members of the receiving-line, they should take care of themselves, chatting with old friends (weddings are busy reunions!) and being introduced to their guests. Groups are formed for having refreshments, either at small tables at a sitdown service or for the buffet service.

When Formal Introduction is Appropriate

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me some special occasions when a formal introduction . . . "may I present?". . . is appropriate?

Frances

Here are some occasions when the formal form of introduction is appropriate: "Mrs. Guest-of-honor, may I present Mr. Beecher?"; "Mrs. Elder, may I present Miss Young" (or 'Elizabeth Young'); 'Doctor Distinguished, may I present Mr. Robinson?"; "Mrs. Smith, may I present Colonel Fairchild?"; "Major Brown, may I present Lieutenant Hall?"

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Eyelashes Respond to Attention

Do you know that you should shampoo your eyebrows now and then? It keeps the shafts soft and silky. It is surprising what the effects will be. Rub in a little soap; lather well. Rinse with tepid water and, while the pretty scimitars are still wet, brush them with mineral oil. The combination of water and oil will make for smoothness and neatness. Also, the oil is good for the growth. Another beauty chore! But what the heck? If you're plain, you seek modern facial improvement. Isn't it a fact?

Long, silky, black eyelashes are wonderfully decorative, an entrancing addition to any face. Veil your eyes with these enticing fringes, and they will have romantic appeal. They make the eyes look dewy. Your good-looks reporter has been told that dewy eyes will make a man's heart grow fonder. Anyhow, we are all for them—young, old and the betwixt-and-betweens.

First, the growth must be healthy; it won't be if the eyes are weak or the lids diseased. Bathe the eyes twice a day with warm water, then with cold. Dry gently. The alternating hot and cold applications stimulate circulation, upon which the shafts depend for nourishment.

After bathing the eyes, apply mineral oil—very lightly—along the edges of the eyelids. If this practice is continued daily for several months, it will have a wonderful effect. Lashes will be longer, lovelier, curlier. Any beautician will tell you that this treatment has brought joy and happiness to many girls whose winkers were thin and short, no help at all to the facial composition.

Mascara is a More Effective Medium Than Crayon

When the oil has been frictioned in, use the little brush. Sweep upward to give the fine, pointed ends a tilt. You can experiment with an eyelash curler, if you like. Sounds crazy, since the curler doesn't have to be heated, but it seems to work. It does the transforming act by stretching the shafts slightly. These curlers can be bought at almost any beauty shop or cosmetic counter.

Sties are troublesome infections due to irritation of the hair follicles. They can destroy the papillae from which the new shafts emerge. As soon as there are signs of a stye, apply hot, moist applications. They will bring the little boil to a head. The heat will lance them and the yellow contents can be pressed out gently. Twice a day bathe the eyes with a boric acid eyewash. Your druggist will supply this for you.

If one desires to darken the lashes, mascara will be found a more effective medium than the crayon.

Chicago Cubs, Pouring it On Down the Stretch, May Make Trouble for Leading Cards

Defeat Brooks and St. Louis Has Six of Remaining 11 Games to Play With Team

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

St. Louis' glee over Bill Nicholson's grand slam homer that sank the Brooklyn Dodgers 10-7, yesterday, should be tempered by the knowledge that the Cardinals must face the self-same Chicago Cubs in six of their remaining 11 games.

By that time it may make no difference, however, for St. Louis holds a two-game advantage with time rapidly running out in their favor. The Brooks are now one down in the loss column and 3 on the winning side with only 13 to play as compared to 11 for the Cards.

The idle Cardinals picked up half a game yesterday. Today they set back to work with their final game of the season at New York while Chicago finishes its 1946 business at Ebbets Field.

Chicago had to win the game twice, scoring five runs in the first inning only to have the home club come back with two and finally tie the score in a three-run fifth that sent Bob Chipman, the second Cub hurler, to the showers. Hank Borowy came on to relieve, yielding six hits in 4 2/3 innings but keeping them scattered.

Nicholson left no doubt about the final verdict when he bashed a grand slam homer over the right field screen near the scoreboard to break the 5-5 tie.

The Cubs' final 10-7 victory went to Borowy over rookie Paul Minner, an unfortunate relief choice by Durocher, who made the mistake of throwing a fast ball to Nicholson with a 3-2 count and three on.

Billy Southworth's Boston Braves clinched fourth place, the first time they have finished in the first division since 1934, by shutting out Cincinnati 4-0 in a night game.

Kenny Raffensberger of the Phillies whitewashed Pittsburgh 2-0 in the other night game, at Shibe Park. Charley Gilbert drove home the winning run in the 6th and the other scored on an error by catcher Hanl Camelli.

Detroit protected its 2½ game edge over New York in the second place scrap in the American League by hammering Bobo Newsom from the hill in downing Washington 11-7.

New York Yankees outlasted St. Louis Browns 7-5, Joe DiMaggio driving in three runs to help reliefer Joe Page pick up his ninth win.

Other teams were not scheduled.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

"It may not be the most scientific wrestling match" said Walter Gerow today in announcing the Karl Davis-Toar Morgan main bout for next Friday night "but it certainly will be one of the roughest bouts Belleville fans have ever seen". Manager Gerow based his prediction on the "heat" that has been engendered between the Krippler and Morgan as a result of Morgan's officiating here last week.

• • •

When the burly Toar refereed the Davis-Watson match he may not have showed any favoritism of the Whipper but he certainly worked overtime in holding the rugged Davis to the rules. So much so that the deciding fall came as a result of the referee's interference when Davis had Watson blocked on the ropes. Davis was slow in breaking (he always is) and Morgan grabbed his arms to pull him away from the drooping Whipper. At that moment the latter came to life and while the referee still grappled with the Krippler Watson "hung" one on Davis' chin to knock him cold and settle the decision.

• • •

Then when Morgan had started to leave the ring Davis called him some choice names and the easily aroused Morgan piled back into the ring and mixed it till the other wrestlers broke it up.

• • •

All in all it looks like a grudge match of the most bitter type when Morgan and Davis hook up on Friday next.

Lee Henning who seems to be recovering nicely from that neck twist that Morgan gave him a month ago will be back in against Pat Flanagan in the semi-final and Ben Sharpe will meet Frank Taylor in the third bout. Come early folks.

• • •

Bloomfield's protest against the using of catcher Frank Hayes of the Napanee team was thrown out by the Ontario Baseball Association which conclaved on Hamilton over the weekend. It seems that the Prince Edward County champs objected to catcher Hayes of the Napanee squad and claimed he was not eligible because of the residence rule.

• • •

Bloomfield charged that Hayes lived in Kingston three days a week and was not eligible but the OBA masterminds ruled otherwise in view of the fact that he lived within 25 miles of Napanee and was part-time resident there.

There will likely be a large representation of Hull fans here tomorrow for the second game between their Ottawa Wrightvilles and our Kiwanis Juniors. It was announced at the game in Hull last Saturday that buses will leave the stadium there for Belleville so it appears the starry young visitors will not lack for support.

And believe it or not, one of their lustiest rooters will be a blind man. He is Rheal Galarneau, a young fellow who is an ardent baseball enthusiast and who manages a juvenile team of his own in the Quebec city. He sat behind the press box last Saturday and his voice rang out over those of his fellows in the vicinity. He called plays in an uncanny manner, and knew without being told what was happening out there. He knows all the players by their first names and there was no more delighted fan than Rheal when the game was over.

• • •

Speedy St. Louis gave his Kiwanis kids a brisk workout last night at the Alemite Field and announced they are ready for the important fray tomorrow afternoon. They came back from Hull in good shape and are determined to show the foe as well as the home-town folks that they are just as good a team as that which defeated them last Saturday.

• • •

Goodman Juniors will also go into action at the Fair Grounds tomorrow evening, the game starting at 5.45. They will play hosts to a smart Toronto team in the first game of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association semi-finals series. The Barrett-led crew have not been idle in the extended layoff and are out to cop the first game. They will play back in Toronto on Saturday next. Don Boyle will go to the mound for last year's junior champions and the rest of the squad are in fine fettle. It is expected a large crowd of softball fans will witness the first game.

• • •

The Batawa Intermediate "A's" with their backs to the wall trek to Port Hope tomorrow night to play the third game of their series with the squad of that town. The Port Hopers tacked a decisive defeat on the Shoemen last Saturday, driving the renowned "Smoky" Smith from the mound and scoring eight runs behind the superb two-hit pitching of the COBL veteran southpaw, Pointer. Bata are not out of the picture yet and the game should be a thriller.

Club Owners Agree To Virtually All Player Demands

(By The Canadian Press)

Baseball's advisory council disappeared yesterday with the formation of an executive council, at New York, under a reorganization plan in which the club owners have agreed to virtually all player demands including the $5,000 minimum salary. The new executive board is to comprise Commissioner A. B. Chandler, President Ford Frick of the National and President Will Harridge of the American League, with one club owner and one player representative from each major circuit and one official from the minors.

The session yesterday also voted down the proposed 168-game schedule for next season but this action will not become official until a later meeting of all club owners of both major loops.

Basketball coach at Ohio State for 24 years, Harold G. Olsen signed a three-year contract yesterday to pilot the Chicago team in the new Basketball Association of America. Olsen is chairman of the National Rules Committee and has headed the National Basketball Association of the U. S. and Canada.

Philadelphia Athletics announced the purchase yesterday of outfielder Austin Knickerbocker from the Toronto International League club for $10,000. Hank Biasatti was recently bought from the Leafs at the same reported figure.

President Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Nationals announced yesterday that all Dodgers who qualify for a full player's share of the World Series receipts would receive a 1947 automobile as a gift of the club.

Manager Jack Adams of Detroit Red Wings yesterday announced the appointment of Thomas N. Ivan, formerly of Toronto and Brantford, as coach of the Indianapolis Capitals in the American Hockey League in succession to Earl Seibert.

A local million-dollar syndicate was announced yesterday at Cincinnati, O., as preparing to make an offer of purchase for a controlling interest in the National League baseball club there from Powel Crosley, Jr.

Toronto Simpsons registered a 4-2 triumph over Salt Lake City yesterday at Cleveland, O., to remain in the running in the women's amateur softball tournament. The Simpsons will meet Tulsa, Okla., this afternoon with the winner scheduled to take on Cincinnati tonight.

23-WEEK N.H.L. GRIND BEGINS ON OCTOBER 16TH

Opens Eight Days Ahead of Last Year and Will Run 6 Days Longer in Spring

Montreal, Sept. 17. (CP) — With the dropping of the first puck Wednesday, Oct. 16, the National Hockey League squads break from the barrier for the 23-week grind that will wind up late next spring with the crowning of the Stanley Cup holders.

The official 1946-47 schedule, released today, shows the six teams will open eight days ahead of last year and will slug it out six days later in the Spring. They wind up the schedule March 23.

The extra two weeks were added to make room for the extra games—each squad will play 60 this season instead of 50. The schedule shows that all teams will have a full book of engagements, with plenty of those rugged week-end "double headers" on Saturday and Sunday nights.

Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings start the ball rolling Oct. 16 when they tangle in the motor city, and next night New York Rangers, a dismal sixth in the league last year, meet the champion Montreal Canadiens right in Canuckville.

Boston Bruins get into action, Saturday, Oct. 19, when they tangle with Canadiens at Montreal while Detroit visits Toronto. Chicago Black Hawks don't wipe the rust off their skates until the following night, when they visit Boston to take on the Beantown boys in their first Saturday-Sunday hope.

All six teams get into action Oct. 23 and repeat the procedure the next Saturday.

The schedule shows that Toronto has the hardest weekend chore, with exactly 15 double bills, while Boston has 14.

ROYALS HOLDING 3-2 EDGE OVER NEWARK BEARS

Need One Game to Enter Finals While Syracuse Chiefs Are In

(By The Associated Press)

Manager Jewel Ens' Syracuse Chiefs are in the finals of the International League playoffs, waiting for first-place Montreal and fourth-place Newark to finish their semi-final series.

The Chiefs polished off Baltimore last night 4-3, in an exciting 11-inning game to eliminate the Orioles 4-2 in games in their best-of-seven set.

Alex Ronay walked Kermit Wahl with the bases loaded and one out in the 11th before a record Syracuse playoff crowd of 12,616. Singles by Dutch Mele and Hank Sauer and an international pass to Al Rubeling set the stage for the clincher.

Len Bobeck, who came on in the seventh was the Syracuse winner.

Montreal needs only one more decision to join Syracuse in the finals after its 2-1 victory over the Bears before 15,483 Newark's largest crowd of the year. The pennant-winning Royals hold a 3-2 edge in games.

Glen Moulder, young Brooklyn farmhand, earned his second victory of the series by the same 2-1 score although Vic Raschi and Alex Mustaikis combined to hold the Royals to four singles. Two of them were infield scratches but the other two, by Jackie Robinson and Alex Campanis, came behind bases on balls and meant runs.

The sixth game will be played in Montreal, Wednesday night.

JOE LOUIS SAYS TAMI MAURIELLO "EASY TO HIT"

Claims Either Hand Might Drop His Opponent in Yankee Stadium

By SID FEDER

New York, Sept. 17 — (AP)— Joe Louis — glad the slow, fat-melting, punch-sharpening grind of training was over — admitted Tami Mauriello is easy to hit as he sat in his dressing quarters.

And you shuddered to think of what might happen to Tami in Yankee Stadium tomorrow night, because you remembered the assorted lumps and bumps the Bomber has raised on other guys he's been able to hit down thru the years.

"Yep," he confessed, "that Tami is easy to hit with either hand, and especially the left."

The heavyweight champion had just completed his final session of sparring with a four-round frolic against a quartet of punch catchers late yesterday. The fourth was Eldridge Eatman, a wide-swinging swatter from Norwalk, Conn., with a style somewhat similar to Tami's wild way of throwing.

In the short stretch against Eldridge, Joe showed just what he meant by that "especially the left." He stepped inside of Eastman's curve-ball pitching and belabored him with southpaw shots.

Being a fellow who always gives the other man a chance, Joe included, in his final pre-fight look, the possibility that the Bronx barkeep might conceivably nail him with a lucky Sunday shot. But it seemed Joe had a hard time convincing himself.

Roy Cullenbine, Tigers: Smashed three run four master to aid Dertoit in downing Washington 11-7.

Ed Wright, Braves: Clinched first division berth for Boston by blanking Cincinnati 4-0.

Ken Raffensberger, Phils: Shut out Pittsburgh with five singles, 2-0.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By STEWART NEBBS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Sept. 17 — (CP) — Those glum characters you saw staggering dazedly along the Rue de Rumeur today, mumbling to themselves and making futile gestures, were not dispossessed bookies. They were Montreal sports fans wondering what had happened to their beloved baseball and rugby teams.

Take the pennant-winning Montreal Royals of the International Baseball League, for example.

The Royals, who copped just about all the honors there were to take in the regular league standing, left here Friday for Newark sporting a healthy 2-0 lead in games in their best-of-seven series with the Bears. Then they dropped two straight. Why, you could argue pro and con for a long time without getting anywhere.

Perhaps George (Twinkletoes' Selkirk, Newark manager, best summed up the situation by saying: "What can you do when fate steps in and takes charge of the ball game?"

Joe Fan, however, thinks the Brooklyn Dodgers farm team is picking up too many of the less likeable qualities of "dem bums."

That's only part of the misfortune. The greatly-touted Montreal Alouettes, rejuvenated entry in the Big Four Rugby League, after splitting a pair of exhibition games with the mighty Winnipeg Blue Bombers and holding the champion Toronto Argos to a 10-10 draw, dropped a 4-0 decision to Ottawa Rough Riders.

"If this sort of thing keeps up," one disconsolate was heard to mutter, "we'll form a 'droopy jowls' sport club here."

Meanwhile, it has been announced that the sixth game of the Montreal-Newark series, originally scheduled here for tonight, has been postponed to Wednesday due to train schedules.

Joe Fan, definitely in a bitter mood now wants to know if he's getting a break or only having the agony prolonged.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Conventions may come and conventions may go. But the ones that will endure must be efficient. Not only that. To become popular, they must also be easy to understand, easy to remember, easy to apply.

A convention is a call with an artificial meaning. It must use a word or words that are in the bidding vocabulary. No other words are permissible in bridge to talk about your hand.

Among conventions popular with experts is the lead-directing double of a slam bid. It is merely the word "double" used by one of the opponents of the side that has reached a slam bid.

Such a double has the customary meaning that the player expects to defeat the slam. But it also carries a convention or artificial tip. It asks partner to lead the first suit bid by the dummy hand.

Against a clever declarer, the close double of any kind of slam is foolish practice. Because it tips off the declarer to where the dangerous cards may lie. And he may plan his coups accordingly.

Thus, a slam is seldom doubled unless it is a cinch defeat despite anything declarer may do. Or when such a double is used as an emergency tip-off; like ordering partner to lead a certain suit.

Against a slam there is not time to grope around. So, a double in that spot has taken on a standardized conventional meaning. It is a request for partner to lead dummy's first bid suit.

North had bid spades before south reached a bid of six hearts. East doubled. It was the lead-directing double. It asked west to lead a spade, the first suit bid by dummy. This was the deal:

	NORTH
	♠K J 10 9 ♥J 8 5 4 ♦A 6 4 3 ♣6
WEST		EAST
♠8 7 3 ♥10 7 ♦Q J 10 7 2 ♣J 5 2		♠A Q 6 5 ♥3 2 ♦9 8 5 ♣10 9 8 4
	SOUTH
	♠4 2 ♥A K Q 9 6 ♦K ♣A K Q 7 3

West had a natural top-of-sequence lead in diamonds. But the convention double ordered him to lead a spade. He did. And it defeated the contract. No other lead would have.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Sept. 17—(CP)—The transition from bomber pilot to a $1,000,000 industry doesn't seem to perturb Skitch Henderson.

In fact, the blond, English-born pianist and bandleader appears extremely calm. No combat fatigue, no post-war jitters. Maybe that's because he is sitting on top of a fortune.

Before the war, Skitch was content to earn a comfortable living by pounding piano in radio orchestras and filling in for bands such as Tommy Dorsey's. When the Pacific war started, he took up flying superforts over "Purple Heart Corner" in Japan. Surviving the flak and army red tape, he returned to Hollywood last January. Then things began to pop.

"For a long time I have been thinking about my own band," he told me. "So I decided to do something about it." He whipped up a sweet-playing outfit (including four French horns!) and the jobs began pouring in.

Up to the time of printing, Skitch had these deals completed: Playing a solo spot on the new Bing Crosby show; making Capitol records and transcriptions; coaching Jimmy Stewart as a pianist and composing a score for a picture; making a lucrative tour with the band. Other movie and radio deals are on the fire.

The big ones are beginning to make their entry into the academy race, now that fall and the Oscar deadline approaches. Latest is "Sister Kenny," which offers a potent bid for the honors.

Producer-director Dudley Nichols offers the story of the famed nurse with admirable restraint. Rosalind Russell is a cinch for an academy nomination with her portrayal of the Australian nurse.

Mrs. O'Brien couldn't get Margaret to bed the other night. Maggie received a sample package of children's toiletries and had to try everything from manicure to bubble bath.

Wyoming's celebrated one-shot antelope hunt may become a real intersectional affair between picked marksmen from Eastern and Western United States in another year. In a recent account of a ball game at Roanoke, Va., a typographical error made Roland Hughes' story say the wall was thrown to third base . . . MINK COAT

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 5

"Lord, why shouldn't he be? Look what he got!" Avery commented with a chuckle.

"Oh, I don't know." Isabel was brushing her mop of dark gold hair, her slim body bent double, her head upside down. Now she straightened herself and flung back the shining mass, regarding Avery, breathless and laughing, with the glittering aureole framing her face.

"Lord, you are beautiful," Avery was lying in bed; it was midway through a shining autumn morning. A wheeled table was in the big sunshiny hotel room; the napkins were crumpled and the dishes and silver piled carelessly. The Latimers had breakfasted; Isabel was lazily dressing, Avery had gone back to bed with the newspapers.

"I don't know," Isabel repeated. "It always seems to me sort of silly when married people talk as if they had sacrificed years of their lives to each other. They marry because they want to. If one gets more than the other out of it, well, isn't that just luck?"

Trailing her also transparent draperies of peach and silver, the soft olive curves of her bosom partly revealed by the delicate lace, she came to sit on the side of his bed and gestured with her hairbrush.

"I know who gets most out of my marriage!" Avery responded to this. He flung away the brush and took possession of her smooth, firm brown hand.

"The one who got the emerald and the mink coat," suggested Isabel.

"Oh, rot!" He was lavish, extravagant in the gifts he made her; when she praised him he flushed up in a way she found most becoming. He wanted his wife to have everything in the world that she fancied; it was a delight to him to see her awed interest in the shop windows, her delight over a smart little blouse or an evening wrap in brocade and fur. When he took her to dinner at some brilliant place filled with flowers and lights and music, Isabel could not sufficiently admire the gowns of the other women, the high windows and mirrors, the general effect of exclusiveness and luxury; her eyes were never still. But Avery's eyes were all for her.

"I suppose we'll settle down someday to humdrum married life," she said. "We can't go on with first nights and fur coats and week ends on Long Island forever."

"Oh, got to get back for the dove shoots," Avery agreed, and with a half-amused and half-reproachful laugh Isabel pushed his hand away and got up and wandered to the window.

They were on the thirtieth floor of a great hotel; far below in the street the little walking figures of the Park Avenue Sunday parade looked like tiny dolls. It was one of the absurdities of being able to pay for anything, Isabel mused, that often you didn't have to pay at all. Nightclub managers sent champagne to Avery Latimer's table. A florist sent such flowers as were ordered, regularly, but he also sent Avery's wife his compliments. Flowers and fruit, with the hotel manager's card, came up in beautiful vases and baskets. For this magnificent suite of rooms they were paying nothing; it belonged to a friend of Avery's, who was fighting at Truk in the South Seas. There were three great bedrooms; there were 3 tiled baths magnificent in fuchsia and black, pale blue and chocolate tiles. There was a drawing room furnished in cream color and soft blue; the curtains at the high windows were of kid skins laced together, the creamy carpets went from baseboard to baseboard; on one wall hung a tapestry some fifteen feet square, all but lost in the great space.

From the windows on three sides of the room Isabel could look east toward the river traffic and the islands and the great arches of the bridges; southward the view dimmed away hazily among the rising levels and blocks that were the miracle buildings of the lower city. To the west the more familiar region lay; Fifth Avenue and the shops and the blazing trees of the plaza and the park.

She stood at the window now, staring dreamily at this westward view. She never tired of it. It was all part of the fairy tale. The fairy tale of seeing jewels shining on her hand, of feeling kitten-soft dark fur wrapped about her body and silky against her face, of moving always in the scent of flowers and perfumes, music and soft lights.

"I hope Elsa has my babies out in this lovely sunshine, after two miserable rainy days," she said, half-aloud.

In the beginning of her honeymoon Elsa, Pussy, and Catherine had been installed in the same suite with their mother and stepfather. But that had proved inconvenient; the children could not be kept from their mother, and Isabel would not have them punished for opening doors and rushing in to find her. While they were in adjoining rooms they were constantly on her mind; even when she did not actually hear their voices she imagined that she did and was constantly finding excuses to slip in to see them.

Avery found this arrangement unsatisfactory, as did big, German Elsa. After a few days of it the nurse and children were moved to another floor of the hotel, and Isabel saw her children only when it was conventent. She made little flying visits to their room every day, but sometimes they were out, sometimes asleep, so that they presently came to have small part in her life.

However, that would all be changed once they were settled in the big house in Woodside Park.

"For I really am a very good mother," Isabel told her husband, "and I miss my little tar babies!"

"Forget 'em for five minutes and you'll be a better mother," Avery said, kissing her ear.

Seated in his lap Isabel could turn about to face him indignantly.

"What a thing to say! Dennis," she added after a reflective second, "used to say that I was a good mother, not spoiling them, but thinking all the time of what was best for them."

"Can't you say something disagreeable about that fellow now and then?" Avery demanded, half playfully.

"Well," Isabel answered, smiling dreamily, still in a thoughtful mood, "there was nothing actually disagreeable about Dennis."

"Except that you like me better?" Avery supplied jealously.

"Except," she laid her soft cheek against his. "Except that I love you," she agreed.

But this honeymoon dream was half a year behind her when on this certain March morning Isabel came down the stairway of the Woodside Park home to her breakfast and found her daughters there before her. The day was singing with spring beauty, and in the wide hallways and big rooms masses of lilac and freesia made the air sweet.

Elsa, sitting between Catherine and Pussy and eating her breakfast with an air of scorn and reluctance, rose to her feet.

"Sit down, Yelta," Isabel said cheerfully, using the children's variation of the name. She slipped into her own chair, smiled at the tall English butler. No need to make any suggestions; Yeats knew exactly what Madam wished for breakfast. The sun came dancing in through the many-paned windows that constituted three sides of the little room; trees in all the glory of spring waved outside; silver and glass sparkled on the table. Below the windows the ground sloped away to an oak wood, wide lawns were everywhere, with trimmed borders of shrubs and flowers already showing March colors. There were seas of daffodils and primulas; the sturdy ranks of geraniums had never stopped blooming and the fresh waving boughs of a long hedge of lilacs were topped with clustered plumes of white and lavender. Farther down, against the low stone wall that marked the rise and fall of the rambling country road beyond, were bowing bushes of bridal wreath white with blossom; low acacia trees were like gold popcorn balls between them.

"There is a fly somewhere in this room, Yeats."

"I know it, madam," the butler said in deep humiliation. "Martin and I have been doing our best to trace it down."

"It sounds rather summery. Maybe it's a bee."

"Maybe it's a bumblebee," Pussy suggested.

"Maybe it'll bite me," Catherine contributed fearfully.

"Oh, I don't think it's a bumblebee and I don't think it'll bite," Isabel said on an absent-minded drone, as her eyes followed the headlines. Nothing much in the headlines. West front. Saipan. Her thoughts returned in satisfaction to bacon and brown toast, fruit juice and coffee. They returned also to the news that had brought her downstairs in so pleased a state of mind. Nancy Strait was really going to Mexico to live.

Nancy had been the ladder upon which Isabel had mounted. But once safely married to Avery Latimer, Isabel had needed Nancy no longer, and had rapidly developed ideals and ambitions in which Nancy had no share.

For Nancy, essentially and fundamentally, was not a lady. Not all her money audacity, and arrogance could make her a lady. And Avery was a gentleman. He might not always act like a gentleman, but no one in this very critical circle ever questioned his status. Avery got ugly when he drank, he was idle, pleasure-loving, lazy, but nothing altered the fact Avery "belonged." Nancy simply didn't.

Avery played all the games there were, from polo to baccarat, from dominoes to court tennis. Avery at one time had a villa at Biarritz; a flat in Paris. Avery knew all the hunting terms of the world, and the merits of guns; he knew how to wear tails, how to read menus in even languages, he could walk into any exclusive club in Berkeley Street or at Copa Cabana and be recognized and made welcome. His mother had been a social leader, and was still a social power, and his wealth—or rather, his mother's wealth—was not a matter for question. Whereas Nancy was a rather audacious newcomer.

So it was a relief to Isabel to learn that Nancy really was going down to Mexico, to buy the place next her sister's which she had been for years trying to get. She had spent long periods there for some years; now she was really burning her bridges behind her. Isabel had new friends who didn't approve of Nancy, and Nancy's liking for smart bars and questionable parties. One real source of embarrassment and doubt would be taken from Isabel's life when Nancy went.

Now she could go on that committee with Totty Havisham, Isabel reflected. Nancy had always been childishly jealous of Totty. She had more than once reproached Isabel for her growing intimacy with Totty.

It wasn't a very serious matter, of course, but it had pricked, as so many completely ridiculous trifles did prick, in this new world. Everyone appeared to have a certain unchangeable rating in some mysterious category; everyone else, except Isabel, appeared to know what it was. Nancy's rating was low. Isabel's, through no merit of her own, unless marrying Avery was a merit, was high.

Avery was down at Catalina at the moment, fishing for big game fish. He had his own small craft down there and his own boatman and boy. Isabel had accompanied him on his first trip after their marriage, spending one day on the slippery, tippy, smelly little launch, cold and sick and frightened, and the other days at the hotel, talking with other wives and wandering to the village to buy fruit and magazines.

Getting out to the island and getting back to the mainland were terrifying adventures. The plane rocked and bucketed through the surf; Isabel felt the sudden change in altitude uncomfortably as they went up from and sank down to earth level. She could laugh, she could gallantly array herself in fisherman's trim, but she didn't like it. Avery, fortunately for her, landed an immense marlin in the fourth hour of the first day; some of the boats trailed about forlornly, with no catch, for ten or twelve hours, miserable women gallantly sitting it out.

But this hadn't been exacted of her. At eleven o'clock the launch flying the marlin flag had come back triumphantly to Avalon, and Isabel had been photographed on the pier beside the great hanging fish, which stretched far higher than her head. She had not really caught it, but Avery had insisted that she hold the reel for a few rocking moments, playing it, and gave her all the glory. He had had many a marlin before this one. Later she had seen her picture in various sporting papers and magazines: Mrs. Avery Latimer with her first marlin.

On the next occasion she persuaded him to go without her; she would join him for the week end and drive back with him. It had been gratifying, and at the same time just a little pricking to her vanity, that he had obediently gone off alone.

But the prick passed quickly, and Avery's going gave her this pleasant interval with her children. She looked at them with satisfaction as she finished her breakfast. They were still gypsyish in aspect and far top quiet and shy. But she thought that they would both be pretty someday; they could wear red nicely; red coats, a fifteen and thirteen, with black fur caps. That was some years ahead; Pussy was only five now, and Catherine approaching three.

"One thing," thought Isabel, "I can afford to give them anything they want. They'll have horses, and swimming lessons, and dancing."

As the phrase formed itself in her mind she followed it with a little wonder why she had commenced with "one thing." "One thing" right implied other things wrong. And nothing was wrong. That is—

Avery. Of course lots of things about Avery were simply all wrong—lots of things went dead against the grain of Isabel's ideas and prejudices. There was no changing him, not by the slightest iota. With Dennis there had always been a generous give-and-take; whatever arguments or differences of opinion she remembered as Dennis's wife had always been of the considerate and amiable sort. "If you don't mind, dear," and "It's not really important, Iz."

Avery didn't hear objections, didn't accept hints, didn't stop in his headlong course for anything. One didn't make suggestions to Avery, even the most tactful and delicately worded suggestions, for they merely amazed and then bored him. Isabel in her turn stood astonished at his complete absorption in himself, his plans, his pleasures. A quiet, half-amused "Hell, no," was enough argument and answer for Avery.

When his aunt died, leaving him quite a lot of money, Isabel suggested that he put off his trip up to the Rogue for steelhead and attend the funeral. Busy with his rods and reels Avery had simply responded to this usual mild "Hell No. What for?" When Catherine was having tonsil difficulties and Isabel expressed an unwillingness to go for a week end to Tahoe, he used the same phrases. Nothing was too much trouble to take for Avery's pleasure; nothing stood in his way.

Her first months of marriage had been exciting; she had laughed a good deal at first, trying to keep a dozen novel and conflicting elements smoothly in order; afterward there had come a brief time when they seemed no laughing matter. But it was all easier once one accepted the immovable—the inviolable—condition, that Avery was sublimely self-absorbed and that his desires and interests were all that mattered.

Sister-in-law Of Accused Saw Lengthy Confession

Windsor, Sept. 17 — (CP) — The defence today opened its case for 18-year-old Ronald Sears, charged with the murder of Sgt. Hugh Blackwood Price. First defence witness was Edwin Sears, father of the Windsor youth charged in connection with last fall's slasher slayings.

It is expected that Crown and defence counsel will conclude their arguments before the Ontario Supreme Court jury this afternoon and that Mr. Justice Dalton Wells will deliver his charge to the jury tomorrow morning.

Mrs. Dorothy Sears, wife of accused's twin brother, yesterday told the court that Ronald wrote out last fall a lengthy confession of the murder of Sgt. Price and showed it to her.

Mrs. Sears was visibly nervous when she took the stand. She said the accused had described extensively how he had stabbed Price "and that other one," but had denied the whole thing the next day and the paper was burned immediately after it was shown to her.

"What did you do about it?" inquired Crown Attorney C. Awrey.

"I didn't know whether to believe him or not."

Defence counsel James H. Clarke, cross-examining Acting Detective William Brand regarding statements Sears made to police, asked if he thought it natural "for an 18-year-old boy to go into the police station and confess to all those murders, and attempted murders?"

"I heard of a case in Chicago where a 17-year-old boy confessed to three murders," the detective replied.

At one time yesterday the packed gallery at the trial was told it was not "a matter for hilarity."

The reproof came from Mr. Justice Dalton Wells after spectators, finding some of the legal exchanges amusing, laughed openly in court.

Dairy Products, Livestock in Short Supply in Alta.

Edmonton, Sept. 17 (CP)—Shortages of livestock and dairy products grew in Alberta today as more than 20,000 members of the Alberta Farmers' Union continued to choke-off deliveries of farm produce in their 11-day old strike to obtain Federal recognition of their demands for parity prices.

Children at Rocky Mountain House, about 100 miles southwest of Edmonton, received milk for the first time in five days yesterday, as reports received here told of fresh interruptions to milk and cream deliveries.

Meanwhile Frank Eliason, Secretary of the Saskatchewan section, United Farmers of Canada, predicted "serious" shortages of farm produce in Saskatchewan within a week. He said more than 160 northern communities had stopped deliveries in support of the Alberta farmers who are seeking a Federal fact-finding Board to revise produce prices upward.

Milk was getting through the tightened picket lines in most sections of Alberta, but a week-end farmers' meeting at Red Deer in central Alberta voted to allow no milk deliveries except to children under three years of age and to hospitals and needy cases.

The hotels and two cafes at Rocky Mountain House reported milk and cream supplies exhausted and butter "almost out."

Although Calgary reported little strike activity, a report from Olds, 48 miles north of the foothills city said pickets and trucks formed a tight cordon around the Olds livestock yards yesterday and that no deliveries were made. A number of non-striking farmers were forced to return to their homes with truck-loads of undelivered cattle.

Receipts of livestock at the Calgary stockyards were definitely light but the trade attributed a big part of the decline to harvest operations.

Russian Colonel Came to Can. To Discuss System of Making False Passports Says Gouzenko

Ottawa, Sept. 17. (CP)—Igor Gouzenko, star witness in Canada's Russian spy trials, said Monday in a court a Russian Colonel named "Millstein" came to Canada from Moscow in 1942 to discuss a system for making false passports for Soviet agents on the North American continent, including Mexico and the United States.

Gouzenko was testifying at the preliminary hearing of William M. Pappin, clerk in the Ottawa Passport office on three charges arising from an attempt to obtain a false passport last year a Russian agent who then was staying in Los Angeles.

The final report of the Royal Commission on espionage claimed that a passport had been obtained for the agent in the name of Ignacy Witczak, a polish-born Canadian whom members of the Soviet spy ring believed had been killed in the Spanish civil war.

A stir was created during today's hearing when the Crown produced Witczak himself as a witness to testify that his original passport had disappeared after he had given it to a Polish officer in Spain in 1937 and that he had returned to Canada without it and had been working since as a farmhand at Leamington, Ont.

Met Sam Carr

Gouzenko said the Russian colonel had met Sam Carr, former Labor Progressive Party organizer being sought in connection with the ring, and that their discussions included the issuance of false passports. Carr had assumed that there would be a prospect of "organizing" false passports in Canada for this continent.

He said Carr, when asked to obtain a passport in the name of Witczak for the Soviet agent in Los Angeles, had expressed fear that the "real" Witczak still was alive but had been assured by Moscow that Witczak had died in Spain in 1937.

Gouzenko read from documents that he had taken when he fled the Soviet Embassy a year ago which indicated Carr had asked Moscow for $5,000 for the "Witczak" passport but, when told this price was "fantastic" reduced the figure to $3,000.

Witczak, who spoke English with difficulty, testified that he had obtained a passport in 1937 because he wished to go to Spain with the Polish brigade to fight the "Fascists".

He said that upon arrival in Spain he left his passport with a Polish officer in a "military office" and had not seen it since.

Over 2,000 Entries Received, More Expected for Fair

Picton, Sept. 17—Enthusiastic reports were presented last night when directors met to discuss final plans for Picton Fair, next Friday and Saturday. President S. J. Martin reported on improvements made at the grounds, including several new box stalls for horses. Secretary M. Jamieson reported more than 2,000 entries already received with another thousand expected. Space in the main building will be at a premium due to the many exhibits.

Phil Dodds, chairman of entertainment, reported two fine night shows had been planned. The warden has declared Friday a holiday so that school children may participate in the parade to be led by Trenton Boys' Band.

Harold Herrington, race chairman, stated horses were arriving for the races both afternoons and a big entry is assured.

Reporting for the Hastings and Prince Edward Regimental reunion to be held Saturday afternoon, S. G. Lockyer said Belleville Municipal Band would be present. Brig. Howard Graham, Deputy Chief of Staff, Ottawa, and Lt. Col. A. A. Kennedy, Owen Sound, former commanding officers, would be among those attending. Other Prince Edward county service personnel and Vets of the First World War will also take part in the parade, welcome, reception and dance, and the drum-head service Sunday afternoon. Capt. W. Graydon stated that replies to invitations were coming from all parts of the province, indicating a large attendance.

F. J. Webster said Holstein breeders were co-operating to make the Black and White day the best yet. Brian Dodds was named to take charge of arrangements with the midway.

Joe Cook said the poultry building would be used to house the special displays of water fowl. George Atkinson said a 6-horse hitch would feature the horse show. Dairy Instructor W. E. Henderson reported 22 entries in the cheese show.

Exhibits were promised by the Red Cross, I.O.D.E., Girls' Garden Club, Community Centre, Boy Scouts, Craft Shop, Department of Lands and Forests.

P. S. Inspector A. F. Brown asked for some space for public school exhibits due to the large entry.

Directors will meet again Thursday night to check on details. Prospects are for a record crowd at one of the best fairs in many years.

Believed Lama Has Slipped Thru Police Posse

Cornwall, Sept. 17 — (CP) — Elusive William Lama, 49-year-old district farmer, who has evaded police capture for a month, was thought to have slipped through their hands again yesterday when a man answering his description was found sleeping in an unoccupied house at Moulinette, eight miles west of here.

A diary found in the house recording Lama's movements since his disappearance Aug. 16 added to police conviction that the sleeping man, discovered by Harry Johnston of Moulinette, was Lama. He is wanted for questioning in connection with the slaying of his 39-year-old wife, Mary, and nine-year-old daughter, Mary Elizabeth, at nearby Harrison's Corners.

On the coarse paper of the diary appeared the words: "I, William Lama, did not kill my wife and daughter." Another page read "They will never take me alive." Three separate hide-outs were said to be mentioned in the notes.

Johnston said he was showing his family the unoccupied house which they were intending to purchase, when they came upon the man sleeping in one of the bedrooms. He left, carrying a knife and honey pail, when Johnston told him to get out. Police could find no trace of him when they arrived shortly afterwards.

24 Survivors Norwegian Tanker Now Safe in Port

Lewes, Del., Sept. 17—(AP)—Twenty-four survivors of the Norwegian tanker Marit II that broke in two on Friday 148 miles off Elizsbeth City, N.C., on the cold front of a tropical hurricane rested safely today in east coast ports as hope waned for 14 other missing crew members.

Six of the crew, picked up from a life raft Sunday night by the S. S. Gulf Hawk, were landed here yesterday and taken to hospital. Eighteen others were picked up by the tanker Ianamoco.

As United States Army, Navy and Coast Guard aircraft and surface craft continued their search, Lt.-Cmdr. J. R. Scullion, Coast Guard public information officer of Norfolk, Va., said it was unlikely that additional survivors would be found.

The six seamen landed here told of a terrifying 56 hours spent clinging to a life raft that pitched and wallowed in a 30-foot sea after the ship broke in two at the spot where a German torpedo had struck the vessel four years ago.

Joseph Thorsteinsen, 54, chief engineer, who was aboard when the vessel was torpedoed off Newfoundland said the torpedo wound "was her only weakness."

The 7,417-ton vessel was out of Arendel, Norway, bound for New York with a cargo of 10,000 tons of crude oil that it had picked up in Dutch New Guina.

WALLACE HEADS FOR SHOWDOWN WITH TRUMAN

Yugoslavian Head Of Roman Catholic Church Arrested

Charged With Many Crimes Against People, No Details

Belgrade, Sept. 18 — (AP) — The government announced today that the head of the Roman Catholic Church in Yugoslavia, Archbishop Alokzije Stepinac, had been arrested in Zagreb and charged with "crimes against the people."

The announcement gave no details.

The action was believed, however, to have resulted from testimony given yesterday in the trial of 18 persons — 12 of whom are priests — on charges of association with the Ustachi and the anti-government "Crusaders."

The public prosecutor obtained a seven-day postponement in the trial of the 18 — who include 12 priests — on charges of war crimes and collaboration in order to prepare an indictment against Archbishop Stepinac so he could be placed in the dock with them.

The main defendant in the trial is Col. Eric Lisak, chief of the security police of Gen. Draja Mihailovic, recently executed.

Col. Lisak fled to Austria after the war but later returned and is charged with organizing the Terrorist Ustachi bands under the name of "crusaders."

Ivan Schalic, the Archbishop's secretary, testified Tuesday in the trial of the 18 that Col. Lisak had spent a night at the Archbishop's house and that the "Crusader" flag had been blessed in the Archbishop's chapel.

Archbishop Stepinac was attacked several months ago by the Zagreb newspaper Vjesnik, which accused him of aiding the Ustachi, a terrorist organization of the wartime puppet regime, and opposing the present government.

The newspaper attack later was characterized as "Tito propaganda" by a spokesman for the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano. He said the prelate and other Roman Catholic priests in Yugoslavia had "whenever possible opposed the Ustachi."

Two witnesses in the trial linked the Archbishop with the Ustachi in their testimony yesterday. One was a Franciscan priest named Modesto Nartinchiche and the other was the Archbishop's secretary, Ivan Schalic.

Centre of Action

Father Nartinchiche told the court "the centre of all terrorist action and intervention from abroad was the Archbishop."

Father Schalic testified "The Archbishop's castle in Zagreb was the centre of Ustachi, Crusader and Terrorist action."

He testified the Archbishop had visited Vladimir Macek, Croat peasant party leader, and that the visit "was of a political character." Masek is opposed to the government of Marshal Tito.

Flash Fire In Newspaper Plant Causes Damage

Stratford, Sept. 18—(CP)—Extensive damage, mostly by water, was caused early today in a flash fire in the engraving department of the Beacon Herald newspaper plant.

Lloyd Dark, photographer-engraver, suffered burns about the legs and arms, but his condition is not considered serious. Dark was working in the engraving department when the unexplained explosion occurred.

Heat set off the sprinkler system and water caused extensive damage to three floors and the basement of building. The fire was confined to engraving department.

In addition to the Beacon-Herald, the building contains the office of F. P. Gibbs, chartered accountant and Arthur Turnbull's apartment.

Milk Producers Ask Increase In Price of Milk

Toronto, Sept. 18 — (CP) — The Ontario Whole Milk Producers League launched a drive for higher milk prices by presenting to the Ontario Milk Control Board an application for an increase of $1.20 a hundredweight for 3.4 per cent milk.

The move received support from the Ontario Milk Distributors Association which put before the public hearing a brief urging an increase in milk prices to meet increased costs to distributors.

The action met opposition from representatives of consumer groups, who came from as far east as Ottawa and Kingston, as far west as St. Catharines and as far north as Goderick. Mayor Robert Saunders was their chief spokesman.

As soon as the producers and distributors presented their briefs, Mayor Saunders asked for a complete and independent investigation by the Board into costs of production and distribution. He then called for an adjournment.

"We want all the information as to costs of producing and distributing milk," he said. He added that an increase of one cent a quart in the price of milk represented $1,330,000 in the Toronto area alone, based on annual consumption.

The producer brief said its cost figures were for the Toronto market. Nearly all northern Ontario markets had higher costs while the majority of cities and towns in Southern Ontario had slightly lower costs.

"Taking the Toronto costs which are $3.65 a hundredweight, and comparing them with present day returns of $3, they show a loss of 65 cents on every 100 pounds of milk produced. The present returns include 55 cents a hundredweight Dominion subsidy."

BENGOUGH CLAIMS GOVT. FOLLOWING ILLOGICAL COURSE

Pres. of T.L.C. Says Foreign Countries Getting Funds At Labor's Expense

Windsor, Sept. 18 —(CP)— Percy R. Bengough of Ottawa, president of Trades and Labor Congress, said today the government was following an illogical course in curbing wage increases to check inflation while making large advances to foreign countries.

Mr. Bengough dealt with government policy in his presidential address prepared for delivery at today's opening session of the 61st convention of the T. L. C.

In a statement obviously directed at the American Federation of Labor, with which international unions connected with the T. L. C. are affiliated in the United States, Mr. Bengough declared his intention to block any interference with the autonomy of the T. L. C.

His remarks gave new emphasis to differences between the two oganizations which have centred in relationship of the International Association of Machinists. The machinist union was recently expelled from the A.F.L. for non-payment of dues. The A. F. L. asked the T. L. C. to take similar action but Mr. Bengough refused.

He departed from his prepared address to put the matter before the convention.

"This action has been taken to establish the sovereign rights of this congress," he said. I feel and they (the executive) feel with me, that the trades and labor congress has to be equipped to take its proper place.

"We do not look or hope for any ill feeling with any affiliated organizations but we intend to protect our autonomous rights. We will resist to the utmost any usurption of our authority or any attempt to take away the full autonomous rights of the Trades and Labor Congress."

He reported that despite an anticipated reduction in union membership immediately following the war, there was continued growth since the last convention two years ago. Membership now totalled 320,000, a new high.

"Many thousands of workers affiliated to this congress have materially improved their wages and working conditions during the past year," he said. "However there is yet a great deal needed to be accomplished toward the establishment of full employment and social security, and money cannot be found to afford a decent pension to our aged citizens nor to protect most of the people from the dangers of ill health.

"I think the real cause of delay is that the financial and economic advisors to the government are too close to the people who put up the campaign funds.

"There is a fear that too high a standard of wages will cause a demand for goods and create inflation. Yet, without criticism, our government can advance gigantic sums of money to other countries in the hope and expectation that it will be used in the purchase of Canadian goods without any suggestion that the demand for goods will cause inflation."

Mr. Bengough spoke of the importance of the convention tackling new problems which had arisen since the last convention two years ago. He expressed labor's appreciation of the services of the armed forces, and pledged support to veterans.

Belgian Airline Plane With 44 Aboard Overdue at Gander, La Guardia Field

New York, Sept.18 —(CP)— Searching parties have been sent out to locate a Belgian airline plane carrying 37 passengers and seven crew members, which is overdue in Gander, Nfld., and at La Guardia Airport, Fernand Martens, New York agent for the air line—Sabbena— announced today.

Mr. Martens said the plane was due at 3 A.M. today at Gander—where the ceiling was only 500 feet—and at La Guardia New York about 11 A.M.

He said there was a possibility that the plane may have landed at Goose Bay, Labrador, an alternative Trans-Atlantic stop.

However, in the absence of official reports, Mr. Martens added, searching parties had been sent out by air from Stephensville and Argentia, Newfoundland, and the Newfoundland government had sent out land parties.

The plane was en route from Brussels.

Canadian Liaison Officer Claims War Prolonged Due To Montgomery's Removal

New York, Sept. 18 —(CP)— Col. R.S. Malone, former Canadian liaison officer with Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery's staff, says the war was prolonged beyond 1944 because Field Marshall Montgomery was removed from the over-all command of the allied field forces and was unable threafter to get American divisions for his planned break-through into Germany.

A condensation of Col. Malone's forthcoming book, "Missing From the Record," appears in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post under the title, "You Yanks Never Gave Monty his due. Col. Malone now back with the Winnipeg Free Press, writes that had Field Marshal Montgomery remained in command in the field, "a British general would be in command of all the Allied Armies on the Contient when surrender came."

"It is possible that this state of affairs was not acceptable to Washington, regardless of Monty's ability. There is some confirmation for this view in the sudden, hurried move of SHAEF (Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Forces) offices from London to Paris about the same time as Monty was relieved of his over-all command."

Turning to the tactical disadvantage which Col. Malone says Field Marshal Montgomery suffered, the writer adds:

"The refusal to loan Monty a few American divisions at the time of Arnhem, and the refusal to support his plan for clearing the west bank of the Rhine, I can only attribute to policy perhaps dictated by Gen. Eisenhower through Gen. Marshal in Washington.

"Instead of exploiting the brilliant British success which had carried our forces to the border of Germany—the Arnhem operation was allowed to fail."

The writer says that "Monty's only serious tactical error during the war was his failure to visit the United States before D-Day" and win an American following.

COURT RULINGS BREAK SQUATTERS' INVASION MOVE

Govt. Promises to Speed Action to Ease Crisis in Housing Before Winter

By WILLIAM L. PHILLIPS

London, Sept. 18 (AP)—The back of London's 10-day-old squatter invasion was broken today as a result of court rulings, but the Communist-led squatters also appeared to have won a point by forcing the Labor Government to speed action to ease the housing crisis before winter.

Obeying eviction orders by the courts, the first of about 1,500 men, women and children began leaving the swank West End apartments they commandeered last week in moves of which the Communist party sought to make political capital.

But the government, after a special cabinet meeting last night, promised to find accommodations for anyone who had nowhere to go. There was no elaboration, but the pro-labor Daily Herald later forecast drastic steps to prevent a recurrence of the situation, which the government earlier had termed "anarchy."

A Herald political correspondent wrote that he "understood" consideration was being given to the possibility of compulsory, temporary acquisition of property suitable for housing accommodations.

The Ivanhoe Hotel, the first of the buildings which a court ordered emptied, was vacated completely early this morning. The only reminder of the occupation was a poster announcing: "600 rooms vacant! why be homeless?"

Only 30 squatters remained at Abbey Lodge, where evacuation has been ordered by 10 a.m. tomorrow. A spokesman for 300 more in Duchess of Bedford House in Kensington said they would all march out together on Friday.

Police have been instructed to prohibit "any further unauthorized entry or re-entry" of the buildings, the cabinet said, and warned that violation of eviction orders would result in prosecution. Five Communist leaders of the squatter movement have been ordered held for trial on conspiracy charges.

Manhunts Fail To Reveal Clue

Cornwall, Ont., Sept. 18. (CP)—Manhunts in dense bush near Moulinette, eight miles west of here, have failed to reveal a single clue to the whereabouts of William Lama, 49-year-old farmer sought in connection with the knife-murder of his wife and daughter, last August 16, police said today.

But Lama's arrest still seemed more likely than at any time during the month he has been hunted. Chief Constable R. H. Hawkshaw of Cornwall Township said yesterday he was confident Lama will be caught.

The trial led to Moulinette after a man answering Lama's description was found sleeping in an empty house there Monday. In the house was a rough diary police said they believed had been kept by the man.

FINANCIAL NEEDS OF UNITED CHURCH BEING CONSIDERED

Overseas Mission Work and on Home Mission Plans for Next Two Years Before Council

Montreal, Sept. 18 —(CP)— The 12th General Council of the United Church of Canada today will consider the reports of sessional committees on the question of an appeal to the church membership for reconstruction funds for overseas mission work and on home mission plans for the next two years.

Likely to be presented for further debate in the afternoon session is the matter of whether provinces without civil marriage laws should be urged to enact legislation permitting civil marriages.

Still awaiting discussion in this same report on Christian marriage, presented last Friday by Chief Justice J. C. McRuer of the Ontario Supreme Court, is a series of recommendations concerning divorce and the remarriage of divorced persons.

The commission's report, drawn up after a study of the whole question of Christian marriage, advises against any widening of the grounds for divorce. It recommends that the remarriage of divorced persons be restricted to United Church ministers in the pastorate, that notice of four weeks be given of such marriage, and that the matter be referred to a standing committee of the presbytery for approval or otherwise.

87.4 P. C. Collected.

Yesterday, Rev. Cyril Adair of Montreal, chairman of the pension fund campaign, reported that contributions of 85.7 per cent of the $5,100,000 objective had been received in cash or pledges. The sum of $727,000 remained to be raised.

Rev. D. H. Gallagher of Toronto, on behalf of the committee on missionary education, urged that more training schools be organized to train conveners and leaders for summer schools, institutes and similar organizations.

Chaplains who served at home and overseas addressed the council and delegates were told that about 50 per cent of the members of Canada's armed forces had little or no connection with any church in the Dominion.

Considerable argument accompanied presentation of a memorial from the executive of the National Pension Fund capital campaign committee, resolving that "an actuarial advisory committee on the pension fund, consisting of five laymen . . . be appointed by the General Council on recommendation of the board of finance."

Elmer Davis of Kingston explained that the primary objective of the memorial was to provide for the security and permanency of the pension fund. The memorial was approved with some dissenting votes.

The report of the sessional committee on finance declared it was inadvisable at this time to concur with a memorial from the Perth presbytery suggesting salary increases for General Council officers.

U.S. WANTS BOARD TO INVESTIGATE BORDER INCIDENTS

Also Wants Study Of Ukraine Charges That Greeks Persecute The Minorities

By LARRY HAUCK

Lake Success, N.Y., Sept. 18.—(AP)—The United States has drafted a proposal that the United Nations Security Council name a fact-finding committee to study border incidents along the entire northern Greek frontier, including the areas adjacent to Albania Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, it was learned authoritatively today.

The United States plan, in the form of a suggestion and not a formal motion, was due to go before the Council at 3 p.m. E.D.T. when delegates resume the long debate on the Soviet Ukraine's complaint against Greece and Britain.

It was understood that American Delegate Herschel V. Johnson's plan would also ask the committee to study Ukraine charges that the Greek government was persecuting minorities, insofar as such a situation might provoke border clashes.

Another possibility currently before the Council is the Australian motion to drop the case simply by passing onto the next item on the agenda. Brazil, The Netherlands and Great Britain have indicated support for this plan, but Dr. Oscar Lange, Polish delegate, yesterday joined Russia's Andrei A. Gromyko in fighting it.

Gromyko to Stand Firm.

There were indications that Soviet delegate Andrei Gromyko, who took over the chairmanship yesterday before a packed chamber, would stand firm for "all-or-nothing" in the Greek case. This would be in line with his action in the Spanish case, where he exercised his veto on numerous occasions rather than accept what he termed a toned-down decision by the delegates.

Meanwhile, the Economic and Social Council referred the entire refugee problem to an 11-man sub-committee for study and approved unanimously a resolution requesting the General Assembly to establish at the earliest possible date a world health organization.

Named to Committee

Canada was named to the subcommittee on refugees as Hon. Paul V. Martin, the Canadian Secretary of State, warned the Economic and Social Council that the "peaceful recovery" of Europe may be hindered and delayed indefinitely unless an international refugee organization is created immediately.

Mr. Martin said that his government was prepared to examine any proposals for immigration of homeless people in Europe.

BITTER AGAINST WALLACE

Los Angeles, Sept. 18 (AP)—Admiral William H. Standley wartime United States ambassador to Russia, declared last night that "Secretary Wallace, by his speech in New York, has sabotaged our ship of state—he is not only guilty of disloyalty to his president and nation, but he has given aid and comfort to a virtual enemy, an offence for which, in time of war, he could be shot."

Jazz Club in Montmartre Hotbed Of Espionage During Occupation

By ODETTE LAGUERRE

Paris, Sept. 18—(Reuters) — Few people suspect that the hot Jazz Club of France, which nestles in a quiet little street in Montmartre, was also a hotbed of espionage during the occupation—a place where British secret service officers and agents of the French resistance met at the risk of their lives, to the strains of a "blues" or a "boogie-woogie" number.

First intimation that trouble was brewing came one afternoon in October 1943, when three men walked into the club with their hands in their pockets. They came out accompanied by a pale youth. To all appearances this youth vanished.

The Hot Club lost its guiding spirit — Charles Delaunay—and the work of a widespread underground Franco-British network was endangered by his arrest.

But, today, Delaunay is back where he belongs, as leader of this temple of jazz, where he has built up an impressive assortment of thousands of jazz records brought from all over the world and has written a "hot discography" which gives full details of all American and European jazz bands and bandleaders since 1917.

But he still talks of the time when secret meetings were held every day in a small recording room, "while saxophones wailed and guitars twanged on the other side of the wall . . ."

Twice the Nazis raided the club — the second time with machine-guns — but both times they drew a blank, although arms and munitions were frequently hidden there.

"They questioned me for seven hours," said Delaunay, "but I carried it off well, and they were impressed. They kept me in Fresnes prison for a month, and then released me because they had no proof."

Must Quit Talking About U. S. Policy Or Leave Cabinet

Wallace Makes Public Letter Without Pres. Approval

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, Sept. 18 —(AP)— Top administration officials said today President Truman has decided to tell Commerce Secretary Wallace he must quit talking about United States foreign policy or get out of the Cabinet.

Mr. Wallace was due at the White House at 3:30 p.m. E.S.T.

Less than 24 hours earlier he made public — without Mr. Truman's approval — a letter he wrote the President last July urging that the United States agree to "reasonable Russian guarantees of security" even at the risk of "appeasement" cries.

The letter, which Mr. Truman simply acknowledged and passed on to State Secretary Byrnes, proposed a long list of moves Mr. Wallace said should improve American-Russian relations.

Among them was a definite treaty pledge for the eventual destruction of the United States' store of atomic bombs and a reassessment of American military as well as foreign policies to avert what Mr. Wallace described as the danger of a third world war.

The President specifically "disapproved" release of the letter for general publication on the grounds that his approval might be misconstrued abroad as applying to its contents as well.

Copies Distributed.

But his decision — reversing an earlier one by White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross —came too late. Copies had been distributed among reporters at the Commerce Department after it had been learned that a columnist was about to make the document public.

Whether Mr. Wallace would choose to keep his position in silence or get out and fight for the foreign policy he believes the United States should have was his own secret for the moment. But at least some of those close to him expressed belief he would elect to get out rather than be gagged.

Swiftly, these other details were learned from top administration officials:

The President is deeply concerned about the effect abroad of Mr. Wallace's foreign policy declarations, fearful lest other governments might begin to act on the assumption that this government is split over its relations with Russia;

Byrnes Remains Silent

Through Will Clayton, Undersecretary of State, who conferred with him late yesterday, Mr. Truman has sent a message to Mr. Byrnes at Paris thanking him for his forebearance and understanding throughout the Wallace controversy. Mr. Byrnes has maintained silence;

Mr. Truman's stated approval—later withdrawn—of Mr. Wallace's New York speech last Thursday which touched off the uproar is being explained by some of his aides as having been given after hearing only a disjointed reading of the text.

In his July 23 letter to Mr. Truman, Mr. Wallace set forth his conviction that the United States should adopt at once a policy "to allay any reasonable Russian grounds for fear, suspicion and distrust" as the only basis on which to build a workable peace.

The letter was in response to a presidential request to cabinet members for their views on foreign policy.

Assailed Proposals

Mr. Wallace assailed the Baruch-Acheson atomic proposals now before the United Nations because he said they would allow the United States to decide for itself at what stage of progressive international control it would stop making bombs and eventually destroy those it has. This, he argued, offers small comfort to Russia.

It urged that the United States undertake to negotiate a loan with Russia without demanding beforehand that the Soviet Union agree to negotiate certain political and economic concessions. This is a demand which Mr. Byrnes and the State Department have insisted upon.

In that letter Mr. Wallace generally avoided the head-on conflicts with State Department policies which became evident in his New York speech last Thursday. Then he called for recognition of Russian and American spheres of influence, blasted the evolution of close links between American diplomacy and British "Imperialism."

Cautioned Against Groups

Without calling names, however, Mr. Wallace cautioned Mr. Truman in the letter against what he said was the thinking of two groups of "militarists."

One group, Mr. Wallace argued, says that peace can only be maintained by having the United States so well armed that "no one will dare attack us." Such a policy he said, would inevitably result in an atomic war.

The other group, Mr. Wallace continued, advocates a "preventive war" with Russia.

Mr. Wallace said that "it looks to the rest of the world as if it were only paying lip service to peace at the conference table."

"I mean by actions," he said, "the concrete things like $13,000,000,000 for the war and navy departments, the Bikini tests of the atomic bomb and continued production of bombs, the plan to arm Latin America with our weapons, production of B-29s and planned production of B-36s, and the effort to secure air bases spread over half the globe from which the other half of the globe can be bombed."

THREE OFFICERS DETAINED

Rome, Sept. 18 —(Reuters)— At least three British officers have been detained in connection with inquiries into alleged illegal dealings in the disposal of captured enemy material. It was learned here yesterday. No charges have so far been preferred but it was understood that the officers have been taken to Naples under close arrest. No names were given.

THEATRE MARQUEE LIGHTS DAMAGED

Either theatre marquee lights are too low or truck racks extend too high into the air was discovered by the proprietor of the Capitol Theatre over the night when a then unknown trucker had damaged the lights and then proceeded out of town apparently unaware of the trouble he had caused.

The damage was discovered at about eight o'clock and police notified Trenton police authorities with the result that Barry Padget, driver for the Jupp Construction Company, Toronto, was questioned. The driver admitted driving under the marquee and agreed to return to Belleville and make arrangements for settlement of the damage.

POLICE SEEK HOSPITAL ESCAPEE

Provincial police in the Belleville district are on the lookout for George Compeau of Denbigh, who on Sunday escaped from the Ontario Hospital at Portsmouth, where he was a mental patient. Compeau had been a privileged patient and had been assigned to work about the grounds when he took advantage of his opportunity to escape. Police described Compeau, who is an Indian, as being 39 years of age, five feet, eleven inches tall and weighing approximately 170 pounds.

Suitable prizes were distributed and a buffet lunch served after the completion of the tournament.

Bear Shot At Chisholm's Mills

Curiosity, 'tis said, killed the cat, and that is what it is believed led to the untimely end of a two-year-old lard-fat female bear, which was discovered poking a probing nose around the buildings of Wellington Jordan, farmer residing near Chisholm's Mills on the 8th Concession of Tyendinaga.

The bear had done no damage but Jordan took no chances, remembering neighbors' reports that young lambs had been killed in this sheep raising district.

He went to the house for his shotgun and on his return noticed the bear sneaking along a fence. The first blast from the gun wounded the bruin in the side and she lumbered toward a tree and scuttled to its branches like a scared cat.

Norval Barker, who is associated with Jordan then procured a .22 rifle and his Collie dog. His first shot brought the bruin tumbling to the ground and the dog swept in to the attack. The bear struck viciously with sharp claws at the dog then rolled over and died.

Brought to the city yesterday, it tipped the scale at 135 pounds.

Some Seedings Being Plowed Up In Hastings County

Result of exceptionally dry weather throughout the Summer growing season some new seedings in Hastings County are being plowed up according to the weekly crop report published by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Silo filling is general throughout the district with the corn being generally below the average. Frost has reduced the value of corn both for ensilage and for canning purposes. The milk flow is considerably below the average for this time of year.

In Northumberland county apple picking has commenced with the Wealthy and will be general next week with the McIntosh. Apples are reported to be coloring well.

In Prince Edward county springers are in keen demand with buyers offering from $25 to $50 per head more than was being received by farmers one year ago. Many flocks of early pullets are in heavy production. No frost damage has resulted in the county yet.

SHOULD COST MORE

Detroit, Sept. 18—(AP) — A Wayne County circuit judge believes that divorces, like everything else, should cost more these days. Judge Arthur A. Webster recommended that a higher fee than the present $5 for uncontested divorces would bring divorce costs in line with the increased cost of living and also might check the soaring divorce rate.

Two Warehouses Costing $20,000 Each Being Built

Building permits for two buildings which are expected to cost in the neighborhood of $20,000 each have been issued at the city hall thus far in September, according to City Engineer Charles Mott.

The two buildings are planned by the Canada Packers Ltd., who will construct a warehouse near the site of their present factory on Albion Street, and the Truck and Farm Supply Ltd., which has already commenced construction of a $20,000 warehouse at 128 South Church Street just north of the C.P.R. The foundation of this building is now practically completed, the building to be 50 x 150 feet.

True to the statement made some days ago by Parks Board officials that the new horse barns at the Belleville Agricultural Park would be ready in time for the fair, the walls of the building have been laid and roofing operations are proceeding rapidly.

Parks Board officials state that the building will not be completely finished in time for the fair but the roof will be on and stalls finished in readiness for horses. Finishing touches to the building will be added following the fair.

Mrs. E.B. Murrell Dies in Hospital After Accident

Critically injured on September 7th when the automobile in which she was a passenger was in head-on collision with another car two miles east of Trenton, Mrs. Ethel B. Murrell, age 55 years, died at the Belleville General Hospital on Monday.

Preliminary inquest looking into the death of the woman was held Monday evening and following identification of the body was adjourned until October 17th.

According to provincial police who investigated the accident, Mrs. Murrell was a passenger in a westbound auto driven by her husband. Driver of the eastbound vehicle which crashed head-on into the Murrell car was Mrs. Ethel Wallis of Trenton. Five persons were admitted to hospital following the accident.

Kiwanis Delegates To Convention Report to Club

A clearer conception into the true meaning of Kiwanis was gained by members of the Kiwanis club of Belleville at their regular weekly luncheon meeting Tuesday when two of their members, Ted Schwab and Archie Harris gave a detailed report of their attendance at the district Kiwanis convention held at St. Andrews by the Sea in New Brunswick last week.

First to give his report Kiwanian Ted Schwab chose as his topic "You Don't Know What Kiwanis Mean" and told of his impressions of the convention atmosphere where almost two hundred delegates from the Ontaro, Quebec and Maritimes district rubbed shoulders with one another for the common good of Kiwanis.

Sincerity of Purpose

Mr. Schwab said there was a sincerity of purpose prevalent in the delegates who represent both the French and English speaking Canadians and who were of many different religious beliefs. "They were working for the interests of their fellowmen," assured the speaker. "Their interest in Kiwanis was not in their club button, in the weekly luncheon meeting, or in the club fellowship. They considered being a Kiwanian was a privilege to serve."

"To be a Kiwanian is a privilege," concluded Mr. Schwab, "do not abuse that privilege—it pays dividends a thousand fold."

See Kiwanis at First Hand

Kiwanian Archie Harris declared that a visit to a district convention afforded the opportunity of seeing Kiwanis at first hand. He told of the various business aspects of the convention and of the different phases of club administration which were discussed.

Five-pound samples of Cheddar cheese taken by the two delegates for prizes during the convention were greatly appreciated and all were won by "down easterners," according to Mr. Harris. He felt that the gesture would do much to popularize Belleville cheese.

Expresses Appreciation

President Mark Vanner expressed the club's appreciation to the many Kiwanis ladies who had supervised the distribution of ration books last week, declaring they had done a splendid job. Ray Grant asked for volunteers to assist in the Community Service Chest campaign which is scheduled to start soon. Jack White reported on the progress of the two Kiwanis houses.

DOG RETURNS FAVOR

Fort Erie, Sept. 18 — (CP) — A local woman won a collie dog as prize in a Buffalo dart game. The dog recently returned the favor by winning prizes in two dog shows.

Commission Will Meet Sidney Twp. Council on Line

On the request of Mrs. W. N. Ponton for the Public Utilities Commission to supply water for the southern end of Sidney Street the members at their first regular meeting of the fall and winter term on Tuesday will request members of the Sidney township council to convene and discuss the matter.

Mr. Duff, chairman of the Commission, explained to Mrs. Ponton that the Commission had no power outside the municipality but if there were buildings on the city side of the street then arrangements would have to be made with the township. Mrs. Ponton requested 1,000 feet of pipe line but the Commission was insistent that the township would have to make the arrangements. In an inquiry with regards rates, it was announced that the rates were about four times for the township as that paid by the city users.

Residents of Wallbridge Road also presented a petition to have water run on that street and it was shown that 2,350 feet of digging and pipe would cost $11,750 and 13 services $1,300 which would make the cost to the residents almost prohibitive. Mayor Follwell moved that the Commission meet a delegation from that area at a night meeting and that the whole project and its cost be laid before them for their consideration. This plan was adopted.

Add Another Street.

In the matter of the new street lighting, the Commission listened with favor to the Mayor, who suggested that the lights be placed also on Dundas Street from Front to Pinnacle Street. All members of the Commission, with the manager, O. H. Scott, will visit Kingston on Thursday, it being the annual meeting of the O.E.M.A. Coke will now be sold at $13 a ton and the wages for the gas plant employees have been raised by five cents an hour.

All-Time Peak Reached.

Mr. Scott announced to the members that the all-time high peak in use of power in the city was reached on Thursday, September 12th., at 11:55 a.m., when the sub-station was 13 per cent over capacity. "This could be alleviated," said the manager, "if the new sub-station was in operation but the opening of this station is very indefinite due to the lack of materials."

He showed that in July, 1945, a total of 7,734 H.P. was used while in July, 1946, a total of 8,515 H.P. In August, 1945, 8,004 H.P. and in August of this year 8,924 H.P. was used. Water consumption was also up with 89 million gallons being used in July of 1945 while in July of this year 104 millions were used. In August the same story was recounted, 85 millions being used last year and 96 millions this year. In explaining rise in the peak of power Mr. Scott stated it was too bad that Daylight Saving was not being continued as it would relieve the Commission of many anxious moments.

Outstanding Horse Show Will Be Presented at the Fair

One of the best horse shows ever to be seen at the Belleville Fair will be on hand for the opening of the fair next Monday, it was stated today by Fair Secretary Erle S. DeRyes.

Many of the horses which are scheduled to be shown at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto this autumn have already been entered for the exhibition in Belleville next week with hackneys, pony hackneys, roadsters, carriage horses and heavy horses well represented.

Of special interest to the horse exhibitors this year will be the handsome cup which has been donated by Dr. Russell Scott as a perpetual trophy for the best mare or gelding. This cup will be presented by him in front of the grandstand on Wednesday afternoon, the final day of the fair. The handsome six-horse tandem team owned by the Sawyer-Stoll Lumber Company will be on exhibition at the fair as well as four-horse tandem teams in the lighter classes.

Baby Show on Tuesday.

Of course no fair would be complete without the ever-popular baby show and the Belleville Fair will be no exception. The baby show will be held on Tuesday afternoon in the Park Pavilion under the supervision of Mr. Harry Rollins. The judging will be done by three competent registered nurses with 1-6 month and 6-12 month classes and the same classes for twins.

Horseshoe pitching will be conducted on Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock under the direction of Mr. William Leslie, local horseshoe pitching enthusiast. Both singles and doubles competitions will be staged with good prizes being donated by Mr. Leslie and the Belleville Agricultural Society.

As in other years the St. John Ambulance Brigade will conduct their customary first-aid booth at the fair and will be available in case of accident.

Many Special Prizes.

President of the fair, Mr. Erle Sandercock, today paid tribute to the merchants and citizens for their co-operation in donating specials and cash prizes. There is an exceptionally large list of special prizes this year, it was stated.

Entries of exhibits thus far have surpassed all expectations of the Fair Board and officials promise that the new horse barn will be completed in time for the fair. Everything is in readiness for a "bigger and better" fair, officials state.

No Outside Equipment Assisted At Fire in Graham Factory

Sullen smouldering small fires still persisted in the charred rubble of the dehydrating plant of the Graham Dried Foods Ltd., at 105 Pinnacle Street, at a late hour last night and vigilant members of the City Fire Department kept streams of water playing on the ruins.

The area in the immediate vicinity was roped off and curious spectators and motorists kept at a safe distance because of the potential danger of crashing walls, that have been weakened by fire.

Crowds of people visited the scene of the conflagration from early morning until late last night and some of the more curious attempted to enter the ruined plant but were turned back by firemen guards.

Members of the City Fire Department stated today that there was no truth in the report yesterday that the fire equipment consisting of an aerial ladder and a pumper from the Trenton Station of the RCAF assisted them in the battle with the flames.

"It was evident at the time of our arrival that saving of the building was impossible as the entire top of the building was a mass of flames. No fire department in the country could have saved the plant. As it was, the City Department was fully capable of handling the situation and at no time was outside assistance considered," one official stated.

Deputy Fire Chief Gerald Vance paid a fine tribute to his men. "They worked like heroes", he said, "and it was due to their efforts that many surrounding buildings were saved from the fire. I want to thank those men who were off duty, and who jumped into their equipment at the general alarm and turned out to assist the rest. I received 100 per cent co-operation from both duty and off-duty men and I am proud of all of them."

Talk on History of Footwear Reveals Many Interesting Facts

The history of footwear from the crudely constructed plaited grass affairs that primitive man used for shoes to the highly modernized electrically heated footwear used by the armed forces in high altitudes formed the theme of an informative address by Rotarian Arthur Hill, of the Leslie Shoe Store to his fellow clubmen on Monday.

The sandal and the moccasin, two of the types of footwear devised by man, are still in use, and with little difference to the original design, Mr. Hill pointed out.

In 1858 Lyman R. Blake a Massachusetts shoemaker invented a machine for sewing the soles on shoes. His patents were absorbed by one Gordon MacKay and later developed by him. Scoffed at by other manufacturers and retail men who refused to buy his products, MacKay persisted and later devised a method whereby his machines were placed in shoe factories and he received a percentage of the profits. This method is still in vogue.

Shoes of one sort or another are rich in legend, Rotarian Hill said, recalling the stories of the famous Seven League Boots; Mercury's winged heels, Puss in Boots; Cinderella and other yarns in which shoes figured largely.

221 Shoe Factories

During the war, the shoe industry performed a yeoman service for the country. In Canada there are 221 shoe factories scores of which employ no more than a dozen people. But there are others with long lines of machines which employ hundreds of workers.

Of the 221 Canadian plants, 51 were factories working on heavy boot production and they turned out 10 million pairs of boots for the armed forces. Many of these boots were special jobs and absorbed a great deal of time in manufacture. There were the paratrooper's shock - absorbing boot; the commando's fighting boot; the mountain fighter's rock-gripper footwear, the electrically heated high altitude mukluk, the seaboot for the Atlantic and the Mediterranean and frost resisting boots for servicemen in frigid zones.

Besides the ten million pairs made for the armed forces, an adequate supply was manufactured and maintained for the home front and without rationing.

One great achievement was performed, Mr. Hill said, when the 1941 price ceiling was maintained throughout. This restriction enforced by the WPTB was a life-saver and the tanner, the manufacturers, the retailer and the consumer have been well served by this administration. The amount of advanced cost had to be absorbed by the tanners, the manufacturer and the retailer in order to maintain the ceiling price, and this was made possible by the placing of certain restrictions on the manufacture of new shoe styles and the cutting down of unnecessary "frills" and operations.

Style Changes Recalled

Rotarian Hill recalled the changes in styles that have taken place over the last quarter century in the retail shoe business. He had, he said, in the course of his career, sold women's high laced boots; some laced to the knee with high heels and pointed toes; long black buttoned gaiters for women; men's button boots some with cloth tops and patent leather bottoms. Years ago farmers bought knee length leather boots with no laces, and they needed wooden "jacks" to remove them.

Rotarian Hill's talk was the third in the classification series of addresses given by members of the club.

Protamine Greatest Development Since Insulin for Diabetics

Toronto, Sept. 18 — (CP) — The work of Denmark's Dr. H. C. Hagedorn in using protamine-insulin and reducing the number of daily injections required by diabetic patients, was commended today by Dr. D. A. Scott and Dr. A. M. Fisher of Toronto's Connaught Research Laboratories.

In an address prepared for delivery to the American Diabetes Association in annual session here, they said:

"From the standpoint of the diabetic, one of the greatest developments since the discovery of insulin has been the work of Hagedorn and his associates with protamine . . . The Danish group anticipated that the addition of protamine to insulin might result in a preparation in which insulin was precipitated."

This protamine-insulin preparation required fewer daily injections than the use of unmodified insulin as experiments in Copenhagen and elsewhere had shown they held.

"The success of the work of Hagedorn has prompted continued investigations into means for prolongation of insulin action," but, many problems of a fundamental nature remained unsolved. "The biochemist has as yet no knowledge of how insulin is made in the human body . . . no one has succeeded in isolating insulin from the blood."

CONVICT REFUSES TO TESTIFY IN MURDER TRIAL

Crown Completes Case in Harris Case and Defence Not Expected to Offer Evidence

Whitby, Ont., Sept. 18 — (CP) —Crown theory is that Mrs. Audrey Lyons, 23, was strangled with her own pyjama jacket by Lorne Cecil Harris, 23, after she objected to an improper suggestion he made as she was preparing for bed the night of Nov. 9-10, 1945.

Crown counsel T. J. Rigney outlined this contention today to an Assize Court jury hearing the retrial of Harris on a charge of murder.

The defence did not offer evidence as the trial was resumed today.

In his address to the jury, Mr. Rigney said the 18-page statement Harris gave to police should be considered as if the accused had made it orally in the witness stand.

He outlined Harris' movements Nov. 9 and referred to the dancing and drinking witnesses said took place at Mrs. Lyons' home.

The Crown contended that Harris returned after the other guest had left. He was unexpected and uninvited and when he made an improper suggestion to Mrs. Lyons she objected.

Harris seized the woman by the throat and dragged her to a bedroom where she was assaulted, Mr. Rigney said.

"There was then no undue lingering on the part of the assailant and he left"

Harris was convicted last February and sentenced to be hanged for the murder of Mrs. Lyons but an appeal was upheld and a new trial ordered.

Mr. Justice G. F. McFarland at conclusion of the Crown's evidence late yesterday refused a defence application for a directed verdict of acquittal. The case was expected to go to the jury today after closing argument by T. J. Rigney, K.C., of Kingston, for the Crown, and Defence Counsel A. W. S. Greer, K.C.

The conclusion of the Crown's case yesterday was featured by refusal of a witness to testify. The witness was Clinton Gracey, now serving a sentence in Portsmouth Penitentiary, Kingston. Gracey, called by the Crown, told the court: "I'm a convict, and I have to live among convicts. "I've already had two beatings-up and I don't want any more."

Remanded in Custody.

Mr. Justice McFarland ruled that Gracey would be remanded in custody. He said he would decide about this incident later.

The Crown also brought to the stand Lillian Titus, Ajax girl who had been minding children at the home of Mrs. Nora Kyle near the Lyons' residence in Ajax.

Under defence questioning Miss Titus testified she had been in the Lyons' home about a week before Mrs. Lyons was slain and that Carl Linton, a previous witness, had come to the house somewhat the worse for liquor.

"Carl Linton took Mrs. Lyons by the throat and made her go to her knees," said Miss Titus. "Violet told him he had better stop, that he was getting too rough."

"A gem of understatement," observed Mr. Justice McFarland.

The girl added that Linton came again to Mrs. Kyle's home early on the morning of Nov. 10 where Mrs. Lyons was hiding. Asked why Mrs. Lyons was hiding, witness said "I don't know, I guess she saw him coming."

Sunspots Interrupt Overseas Services

New York, Sept. 18 — (AP)— Radio and cable operations to overseas points were seriously interrupted yesterday and early today by sunspots, communications firms reported today.

Mackay Radio and Telegraph Company, Inc., said the sunspots and atmospheric conditions arising from them hit radio communications in all directions during the last 24 hours and reception during the night was "very bad."

R.C.A. Communications, Inc., reported short-wave reception was bad throughout the night but long wave radio was not seriously affected. The company added that conditions began to clear up early today.

Western Union reported its trans Atlantic cables were affected. However, news services using Western Union cables to Europe said those lines were not affected as seriously as radio communications, which were "blacked out" at intervals during the night.

'Immigration' Becomes Increasingly Apparent in Language of Dominion

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 18 —(CP)— "Immigration," a word which paradoxically can mean prosperity or depression, wealth or poverty, is becoming increasingly apparent in the language of this Dominion, which many say must have greater population if she is to retain her hold on a half-continent and thrive.

It came up again and again during debates in the parliamentary session just ended and the talk finally was quieted when Resources Minister Glen, whose department handles immigration, disclosed that an inter-departmental committee now was drawing up a post-war immigration policy which he hoped would soon be announced.

Closely linked with this impending announcement are the current deliberations of the United Nations Social and Economic Council, which hopes to develop a scheme by which Canada, the United States and other lands of the New World will absorb some of the war-displaced, homeless peoples of Europe.

Prime Importance.

The problem was brought to the forefront recently by the Senate Immigration Committee, which told the Upper House in a profound report that immigration was of prime importance if "we are to hold our place abroad and maintain and improve our standard of living at home."

In a nutshell, it urged that the government start a vigorous policy of selective immigration as soon as shipping space becomes available and that Europe be combed for persons who would become real assets in Canadian life.

That report, based on the evidence of scores of witnesses over several weeks, trumpeted the call that has been sounded by private organizations and several private members of parliament.

Some of those appeals have been based on sentimental grounds, but others have developed from the cold, hard fact that a population vaster than the 12,000,000-odd persons now inhabiting Canada is needed if she is to experience the real throb of industrial and commercial life and take her place among the leading nations of the world.

The bars already have been partially lifted. In May, Resources Minister Glen announced the relatives of Canadians will be allowed to enter the Dominion from foreign countries, providing their Canadian relatives can support and house them.

Bring 4,000 Polish Vets.

Another immigration project has been the government's decision to bring to Canada for farm work 4,000 unmarried veterans of the Polish army which fought beside the 1st Canadian Corps in Italy.

But none of these measures has the scope and appeal urged by the pro-immigrationists.

Just three years ago, for instance, a prominent Canadian now living in Britain expressed belief the Dominion could support a population of 40,000,000 while Premier Drew of Ontario has suggested that his province was capable of housing 25,000,000.

An exception has been Quebec province, some of whose leaders have come out time and again against immigration on the theory that the Canadian people should be assisted first.

While there is emphasis on immigration there is equal stress on emigration. A surprise number of Canadians have turned to the south and are answering the call of larger salaries and greater opportunities in the United States.

Lots Waiting to Come.

Immigration officials admit, however, that there are a lot of persons wanting to come to Canada when the transportation situation settles — servicemen from Commonwealth countries who trained here, people who have heard about Canada from Canadian troops abroad and relatives of those already in this country.

Canada has had some unhappy experiences with assisted immigration. The last was the 3,000-family scheme started in 1924, under which the British and Canadian governments co-operated to place 3,000 families from the United Kingdom on farms in Canada in five years.

The project was carried out but the depression followed and today few of those 3,000 families still are on farms. Many drifted to the cities and still others were returned to Britain.

Suspect Arrested After $1,000 Bank Robbery

Hickson, Sept. 18 (CP)—In swift succession following yesterday's hold-up of the Hickson sub-branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, police found a stolen taxicab, abandoned nearby, and arrested for questioning an armed man walking along a road outside the village.

Inspector Clem Jordon of London, Ont., arrested the suspect on a road two miles east of this village, some eight miles north of Woodstock. Jordon refused to say whether any part of the loot, estimated at about $1,000, was found on the man.

The taxicab, found near where the armed man was picked up was stolen earlier yesterday from Robert Adlam, Brantford taxi driver. He told police he picked up a fare near Brantford's Y.M.C.A. building and drove him toward Paris. On the way the man forced him out of the car at gun point, and drove off down a side road.

The Hickson sub-branch was held up shortly before closing time by an armed man who forced the two staff men, Melville Hackett and Philip Ball, to lie on the floor while he took a bundle of bills. A customer, Lorne Curry, came in during the robbery and was told to join the others on the floor.

Hackett said he fired three shots at the man as he drove away in the car. Villagers said they had seen the man in the car around town for some time before the hold-up of the branch open only Tuesdays and Fridays.

CLAIMS CAPTURE OF CITY

Peiping, Sept. 18 (AP)— The Chinese government news agency yesterday claimed the capture of Hwaiyin, main Communist operational base in North Kiangsu Province, as military observers foresaw an all-out offensive against the Communists in North China and Manchuria in an effort to end the civil war.

The report from Nanking that the Grand Canal city had fallen followed closely Communist charges that the government was launching an offensive on seven fronts aimed at Hwaiyin, Kalgan and Harbin, the latter in Manchuria.

THREE CONVICTS KILLED

Rangoon, Burma, Sept. 18 — (Reuters) — Three persons were killed and three injured when several convicts made a dramatic midnight bid to escape from the prison at Insein, nine miles north of Rangoon, yesterday, it was learned here today. Prison guards fired in an effort to foil the convicts' attempt but 22 escaped. The outbreak is part of a worsening in the crime situation in Burma through the police strike which started two weeks ago.

London Letter

By NORMAN GRIBBENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 18 (CP Cable)— Off duty from Buckingham Palace, a lordly footman shorn of his finery was enjoying a quiet glass of beer in the tavern "round the corner" when a newspaperman upset his equilibrium.

"Excuse me, but are you a member of a trade union?" the reporter asked.

The footman set down his glass, surveyed the questioner in frozen horror.

"Good heavens, no," he replied in awed tones.

That was two months ago.

Things have moved fast since then, for now it is claimed that the "closed shop" has been established at Buckingham Palace— quietly and without opposition from the comptrollers of the Royal Household.

All 220 servants, male and female, on the Palace domestic staff recently joined the Civil Service Union and the Civil Service Union now has become affiliated with the Trades Union Council.

The union also has joined the London Trades Council and what is still more remarkable, one of the King's footmen has been selected as delegate to the London Council.

Unionized Royal servants include buttlers, footmen, cooks valets and ladies' serving in the Palace as well as those who personally attend on their Majesties and the two Princesses.

Organization of non-clerical workers in Buckingham Palace began last April, a civil service union official said. Rapid progress followed and the campaign since has been extended to Windsor Castle and Marlborough House. Residence of Queen Mary. The official said later that the union intended organizing workers at Balmoral Castle in Scotland and Sandringham in Norfolk other Royal residences.

The union now deals with the Labor Ministry, but a joint industrial council is to be set up later inside the palace at which wages and conditions will be negotiated directly between the household controllers and the workers.

The Blind Can Lead Useful Lives With Your Help

An only too common mistake among the sighted public is to speak and think of the "blind" as a closed corporation of people who think alike, act alike and who follow one of three occupations — music, begging or making brooms. Loss of sight does not automatically confer musical genius, the beggar's temperament or the broom-maker's skill. Blindness can happen to anyone.

The circle of the blind cuts the circle of every other social and economic group, rich and poor, young and old, professional men, laborers and housewives. The accident of blindness does not change a man into a different person. He still thinks and feels and enjoys the same things. Lack of sight may curtail his activities somewhat, but not nearly as much as many sighted people presume.

Sightless men have entered the insurance business, the real estate business and many other forms of occupational activity. There are blind professors, poets and preachers. There's a blind man in an Ontario town who edits his own weekly newspaper. There are several blind farmers. Any one of these people does a full day's work on the same basis as his sighted confreres. He has his home life, like anyone else. He plays bridge, skates, dances, bowls, or goes to the theatre. He may have a hobby such as carpentry. In his workshop he can produce anything from a neatly turned tool chest to a motor boat — and that has been done.

But each blind man does not do all these things. He has his own tastes and inclinations. He had them when he was sighted, and with careful training and ingenuity a sightless man may be able to continue his old hobby or occupation.

Such training is the part of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. One of the Institutes major undertakings is the rehabilitation of the sightless man as an individual. It is a long-term task requiring the teamwork of teacher and pupil. It, also, requires money. Your money and mine.

About sixty per cent of the Institute's funds are contributed by those Canadians who regard it as one of the responsibilities of citizenship to their blind fellows to give them the opportunity offered by the Institute to lead independent and interesting lives. The campaign being held by the Hastings County Advisory Board needs your support. The purpose of the campaign is to raise funds to carry on the Institute's program of service for the many blind persons of Belleville and Hastings County. C. L. Jewell, manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce here, will welcome any donation large or small.

A Regretful Loss

There will be universal regret over the loss of the Graham Ddier Foods plant by fire early yesterday. Besides the loss of valuable property there will be approximately 150 workers and prospective workers who will be unemployed for a considerable period of time. About 75 persons were employees of the Graham management, 50 were to have been given work by the Bata Company while the Clearite Company was expected to start in the near future with about 25 workers. The potential earnings of these groups of workers would possibly be about $2,500 weekly during the peak period and less when the Graham firm would reduce operations because of a shorter supply of vegetables.

This is a substantial payroll loss alone, and then farmers in the district will be further inconvenienced with loss of revenue from sale of produce which will now have to be marketed in another way. The outlook for quick restoration of the property and machinery is not too good considering the shortages of building materials. It is to be hoped that the different firms concerned will make plans for rebuilding and re-equipping their factories for operation as quickly as circumstances permit.

The Graham building, or the old canning factory as it was formerly known, was one of the landmarks of the city having served as a manufacturing site for a number of firms over a period of sixty years or more. We are informed that Hart and Smith were the first to use the plant as a stove foundry, followed by Carson, Morden and Anning who used it as a canning factory for some years. They in turn were followed by the Easy Tread Shoe Company and the Paper Box Company. Up until the time it was put to use by the present management it was vacant for a lengthy period. During the First Great War it was used as a barracks by the 39th Battalion, C.E.F.

Belleville has been fortunate in escaping large fires in recent years for which we must give credit to the vigilance and efficiency of the Fire Department. However, they were handicapped in this fire because it had gained such headway by the time they arrived on the scene, and the building, being an old one, was not of fire-proof construction. We can all be thankful for the fact there was no loss of life nor serious injury to anyone.

Brazil and Diamonds

The discovery, in June, of new diamond deposits in the states of Piaui and Goiaz adds new sources to Brazil's vast wealth of precious and semi-precious stones.

The largest diamond deposit ever discovered in central Brazil — according to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs — has just been brought to light near Sao Simao, in the southeastern section of the state of Goiaz. This deposit is located on the island of Capivara which is formed by a delta of the Paraiba River.

This new source is so rich that one diamond miner is said to have taken out about 200,000 cruzeiros or $10,000 worth of stones in one week, while other workers have made similar large quotas in the course of their work.

Post-War Dream Revived

With Ottawa at last offering R.C.A.F. discards at bargain prices, many an air-minded Canadian is again indulging in the dream of a "family plane."

Would-be plane owners waxed indignant when, at war's end, large numbers of costly planes were condemned to the scrap heap. They were never fully placated by explanations that the craft were no longer "airworthy."

The planes now going on the market all carry the official safety "O.K." Of course, it is up to those who would fly them to prove that they, too, are airworthy.

The prices? — Well, for $25,000 you can buy a smart job that should accommodate the whole family in comfort.

If you believe that three is a crowd, in the air or on the road, $800 or $900 will place you in the driver's seat of a "trainer" built for two.

—Montreal Herald.

The tomato is a highly valued food source of Vitamin C, but it seems that tomatoes too have their eccentricities, says Your Life Magazine. It has been discovered that small-fruited tomatoes (usually called plum or pear tomatoes) contain considerable more Vitamin C than the usual large-fruited varieties. Ripeness, humidity, and soil fertilization do not have much effect on the Vitamin C content of tomatoes, but the amount of sunlight to which the mature green fruit is exposed is a very important vitaminizing factor.

THE LESSER GLORY

Often it has seemed to me,
  There are posts I'd rather fill
Than some champion to be
  Surging with the will to kill.
Conquerors lose the final test.
  Surer it the lesser fame
Of a father at his best
  Or a grandpa worth the name.

He more soundly sleeps at night
  Who leaves none outside to fear;
No one with superior might Swiftly, surely drawing near.
He who keeps his home secure,
  Filled with song and laughter gay,
Holds his little throne secure;
  None can take his crown away.

Friend and neighbor none pursues.
  Honest toil unchallenged goes.
He has fame he'll never lose
  Who the love of children knows.
Though he never hears the cheers
  Given to skilful men and great,
He will live his round of years
  Safe from envy and from hate.

Eire News Letter

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Dublin, Sept. 17 — (CP) — Eire's position as a Republican member of the British Commonwealth of Nations, in which it regards the King as a chairman rather than a sovereign, was outlined in a recent address at Waterford by a junior member of the government.

The Irish people do not derive their sovereignty from the King, said Erskine Childrers, parliamentary secretary to the minister for local government and public health. They had not come from England as colonists and their history from the British point of view had been disastrous.

"I believe myself, it is in some ways a good example to the world that you can have a group of nations with a very close relationship — as between Canada and England — and then this new form of relationship — such as there is between Ireland and England — under which the King plays no part in our sovereignty. Our sovereignty is derived solely from the Irish people themselves," he said.

He said Eire always had insisted on its sovereignty in dealings with Britain, and the British government had come to respect Prime Minister De Valera as a man whose word could be relied upon absolutely.

"We have settled all our troubles with the English except partition," he said, "and when that trouble is settled I think there will be no country more friendly with Great Britain than this country."

Movie Views: Newly developed industries in Eire include the movies and executives of Hibernia Pictures Ltd. have their eyes on the export market.

No studio space exists at present and all movies in preparation are taken outdoors, with six under preparation.

"We are at the moment working on three short films, two 'interest' films and one documentary film," said Desmond Egan, managing director of the company. "Actual photoplay films will come later. These are projects at the moment, but not facts — yet."

Chances of an Irish film export trade "are certainly bright," Mr. Egan added.

"Whether we succeed or not depends entirely on ourselves. Quality will speak, and we are confident that we can give the world market just that quality."

Desperate Need Of Nurses For Mission Hospitals

Winnipeg, Sept. 18 — (CP) — There is a desperate need of nurses for Mission hospitals at Honan, China and Kangra, India, Mrs. Leslie Hunt of Toronto, told delegates attending the 61st annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary to the missionary services of the Church of England in Canada, here Monday night.

Mrs. R. E. Wodehouse, re-elected president of the organization at an earlier session, urged the importance of Christian living.

"Only when the brotherhood of man is established can we have a lasting peace, and such a brotherhood must be built on Christian living."

Right Rev. Derwyn T. Owen, Archbishop of Toronto and Primate of Canada, spoke briefly, praising the work of the Auxiliary. The Auxiliary, he said, aids not only the missionary work in the church, but all branches of the work.

Crown Completes Case Against Ronald Sears

Charged With "Slasher" Murder in Windsor, Accused Says Mind Blank When Alleged Confession Signed

Windsor, Sept. 18 — (CP) — The case of George Ronald Sears, 18, charged with murder in one of Windsor's "slasher" fatalities last summer, will go to the jury later today after closing addresses by the Crown and defence and by Mr. Justice Dalton Wells.

Sears is charged in connection with the knife-slaying of Sgt. Hugh Blackwood Price on or about Aug. 17, 1945. Hearing of testimony concluded yesterday afternoon, and today the jury was to be addressed by Crown Attorney E. C. Awrey and defence counsel James H. Clark.

Yesterday accused testified his mind was a complete blank after 9 p.m. when he allegedly signed confessions including one for the Price slaying, on the night of his arrest and questioning, last July 6th.

The crown called Dr. E. C. Tennant, superintendent of the Ontario mental hospital at Penetanguishene, Ont., and asked him whether after hearing of the youth's condition following the long question period, a complete loss of memory would result.

"It would not be unreasonable that he would be confused as to everything that happened or was said, but there is no reason why there should be complete loss of memory," the psychiatrist stated.

All a Joke

Accused yesterday also told the court that an alleged confession he had shown his twin brother Donald, and the latter's wife, was "all a joke."

"My wife took it sort of seriously," the accused's brother added. "Ronnie kept grinning and winking at me behind her back. I took it and burned it in the trash can."

Ronald Sears said that it was "ridiculous" to say that he killed Price. He also denied that he had returned home and wiped blood off his hands and off a knife as alleged in the statement previously introduced.

When shown the alleged confession to Price's murder the youth admitted his signature was on it, but said he did not know how it got there, and repeated that he could not recall anything after 9 p.m. that night.

The accused also denied that anyone had ever made improper advances to him. The Crown alleges that as a resudt of an attack on him as a child, accused had waylaid persons who made improper advances to him.

Verdict Against 22 Nazi Leaders Given on Sept. 30

Nuernberg, Sept. 18—(CP)—The International Military Tribunal announced Tuesday that its verdict against 22 leaders of Nazi Germany on war crimes charges will be handed down Sept. 30, instead of Sept. 23 as previously planned.

One source said it was "physically impossible" for the court, which recessed Aug. 31 to consider its verdict, to get through the mountainous heaps of evidence, exhibits and speeches heard during the trial, which lasted more than nine months, by Sept. 23.

There was no hint of disagreement among the tribunal's judges, representing Britain, France, Russia and the United States, and it was believed here the delay was due solely to the lengthy opinions which must be written.

The tribunal has made no announcement as yet on the manner in which the verdicts are to be handed down, but one tribunal source said it was believed the verdicts — guilty or not guilty —would be delivered Sept. 30, with sentences passed the following day. It was expected that presentation of the court's opinion would occupy at least a day, and possibly two.

Tennessean Rescued From Crowd of Negroes

Chicago, Sept. 17—(AP) — A Tennessean visiting Chicago was rescued by police from an angry crowd of Negroes, some shouting "Let's lynch him," during a Negro anti-lynching rally last night on Michigan Avenue near the Loop.

The white man, Leck Denton, 31, a Chattanooga delegate to an A.F.L. Bakers Union convention, was accused of cutting a rally microphone cable. He was charged with malicious mischief and disorderly conduct on complaints signed by a Negro woman.

Police said about 40 of nearly 2,000 rally spectators, most of them Negroes, surrounded Denton. Some shouted:

"Let's lynch him — treat him the way they treat us in the south."

WELL, THEN DON'T CALL IT CRI

No physician of standing and no health authority in this country has even attempted to define "the common cold." Until some such expert comes up with a definition or description that is unequivocal and clear enough to understand what the doctor is talking about when he uses that trick term, I shall continue to call it Cri.

Now, assuming that you are not an old plaster pot (with mind set like plaster of Paris and no longer susceptible to new impressions), what reasonable objection have you against calling any Common Respiratory Infection you may catch, by the name of Cri (coined from the initial letters of that cumbersome term), or, if you are not sure how to pronounce it C-R-I-, as people call pulmonary tuberculosis T-B?

The reason why I urge everybody to call any such illness or indisposition cri or C-R-I in the stage of onset, when the disease is most likely to spread, should be obvious to anyone but a plasterpot, a wiseacre or a sophomoron. The term is a reminder that the trouble, whatever it is proves to be, is probably communicable—so everybody should behave accordingly.

If this term should become the popular term for such illness or indisposition, instead of the misleading, disarming, often downright dangerous word "cold", the benefit this reform would bring to the public health is almost inconceivable. Under the present dumb custom of spreading all sorts of respiratory infections indiscriminately under the cover of "just a cold", no less than three-fourths of all the illness attended by physicians is due to respiratory infections, and this includes, of course, a great deal of nose, ear, skull, sinus, throat and chest surgery.

These diseases—anything and everything from mild sore throat, scarlet fever, diphtheria, influenza to meningitis, infantile paralysis, pneumonia, or tuberculosis—no doubt often do spread via open-face cough or sneeze spray. When the ignorant boor across the aisle, counter or car coughs or sneezes upon you heaven only knows what infection he or she passes to you. But, in my opinion cough and sneeze spray is comparatively unimportant. The great agent in spreading the respiratory infections is conversation spray—the invisibly and impalpably fine moisture spray that is given off from nose and mouth during polite conversation, and carries up to five feet. This conversation spray has a shorter range, but its range is enough to bring down many thousands of innocent—I prefer to say ignorant victims every day.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

ADULT TETANY

You said leg cramps at night indicate adult tetany from shortage of calcium and vitamin D. Being a victim, I began using a quart of milk a day and eating at least two eggs a day—you said milk and eggs are the best sources of calcium and vitamin D After a week the cramps ceased. But when I stopped using milk and eggs they returned, and ceased again when I resumed taking milk and eggs.

Answer—Yes, whole fresh milk and egg yolk are the two richest sources of calcium and vitamin D. Still, your experience may have been coincidence. If you tire of milk and eggs again and have a recurrence of the leg cramps, try supplementing your regular diet with calcium and vitamin D, as described in the pamphlet Adult Tetany and Growing Pains—mailed on written request if you inclose stamped self-addressed envelope. Do not use clipping.

GRAIN WEEVILS

Little black bugs in flour—is it dangerous to use such flour or should we throw it away?

(Mrs. M.A.)

Answer—It is not dangerous. Such weevils develop from the eggs (larvae) of the insect deposited in the grain. We have all eaten plenty of them in egg or larvae stage, in various grains or grain products. Sift the flour and use it. Of course cooking or baking destroys any such life.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Who is the Black Pope?

The General of the Society or Company of Jesus (Jesuits) is sometimes referred to as the "Black Pope" from his customary black robes and the fact that during certain periods he was believed to have an influence in the Catholic Church second only to that of the Pope himself.

This order was founded in Paris in 1534 to support the Catholic Church, to defend the Papacy and to propagate the faith among the heathen.

The Society of Jesus became a religious order of the Catholic Church in 1540 when Pope Paul III approved its constitution. St. Ignatius Loyola (1491-1556), the Spanish founder of the order, was elected the first General in 1541 and he served until his death from the "Roman fever."

The motto of the order is, "Ad mojorem Dei gloriam," To the greater glory of God."

Members of the Society of Jesus are popularly called Jesuits. St. Ignatius Loloya and his associates never used this term or its equivalent in other languages. It was first used about 1550 in derision by the enemics of the order. "Jesuit" in an anglicized form of "Jesuita," from Latin "Jesu," Jesus, and "ita," a suffix signifying "belonging to," "connected with" or "member of."

The founder had been a soldier and he incorporated certain military principles in the constitution of the Christian order of clerics that he established. The organization is divided into Provinces and the General, who resides in Rome adjacent to Vatican City, is chosen for life by the General Congregation of 150 fathers superior, corresponding to the Sacred College of Cardinals which elects the Pope and which is sometimes referred to as the Catholic Senate or House of Lords.

After the Jesuits had been expelled from Portugal, France and Spain, Pope Clement XIV in 1773 issued the Brief of Suppression by which the order was suppressed throughout Christendom. The Jesuits were noted for their work as educators, and Catherine of Russia and Frederick the Great of Prussia, neither of whom was a Catholic, opposed the edict of suppression and protected the Jesuits within their borders because they wanted them as teachers. In 1814 Pope Pius VII re-established the Jesuits as a world order of the Roman Catholic Church.

At the present time the Society has 50 Provinces with a membership of about 27,000 priests, scholastics and brothers.

Holloway St. Y.P.U. Holds Wiener Roast

Holloway St. Y.P.U. resumed its activities after the Summer recess on Friday evening, when members and friends journeyed to the 'Flat Rocks' at Foxboro for a corn and wiener roast.

The evening of fellowship began with a period of recreation led by Norma Arkles and Margaret Hillis, during which appetites reached the point where food became a necessity. Corn and wieners were roasted over the blazing campfire, with coffee and watermelon also finding a ready market.

The president, Maude Burke, welcomed everyone and announced the next meeting to be held in the church, under the direction of the four group leaders. A nominating committee was appointed to bring in a slate of officers for 1946-47 to this meeting.

Following an enjoyable sing-song a very effective worship service was conducted, with the moon on the river forming a beautiful worship centre. The service was built around the theme 'Faith' and was begun with a period of antiphonal singing, —the two groups coming together around the fire with the singing of "My Faith Looks Up to Thee". Kay DeClair read the Scripture lesson and the meditation on it was taken by Isobel Richardson. Maude Burke closed this period with prayer.

As the group stood in the Friendship Circle, many of the favorite camp choruses were sung concluding with "Spirit of the Living God, Fall Afresh on Me", after which Harry Denton closed the meeting.

WEDDINGS

BOYD—HULIN

Stirling, (Special.)—A pretty wedding was solemnized on Sept. 10, at seven o'clock, in the Dominion United Church, Ottawa, when Dorothy Mae Hulin, niece of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hulin, Stirling, was united in marriage to Harvey Kenneth Boyd, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Boyd, Lascelles, Quebec. The ceremony was performed by Dr. H. W. Anison, minister of the church.

The bride was charming in a rose wool suit with black plastic purse and shoes and black felt hat with gold trimming and corsage of pink roses. The groom's sister, Mrs. Emma Schimmens of Ottawa, attended the bride, wearing a blue flowered dress with black accessories and corsage of yellow roses.

Mr. K. Wiseman, of La Breton, was the best man.

The wedding dinner was held at the Chateau Laurier and the young couple will take up residence in Ottawa.

WILKINS—AUSTIN

Wooler, (Special.) — Wooler United Church, effective with pink and white gladioli and tall lighted tapers, was the setting for the marriage at four o'clock on Monday, Sept 16, of Roma Bell Austin, youngest daughter of Mrs. and Mrs. A. G. Austin, and Charles Russell Wilkins, of Trenton, son of Mrs. Wilkins and the late C. V. Wilkins. Rev. W. Delve performed the ceremony. Mrs. Karl Austin, sister-in-law of the bride, presided at the organ, and Mrs. J. C. Fetterly, sister of the groom, sang before the ceremony and during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, Mr. A. G. Austin, the bride was lovely in a blush ivory long-sleeved gown with sweetheart neckline, fitted bodice with matching braid, and bouffant skirt falling into a circular train. The full-length veil of silk embroidered net was held in place by a coronet of braided satin. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses, gardenias and bouvardia.

The matron of honor was Mrs. O. J. Anderson, of Renfrew, sister of the bride. She wore a princess gown of turquoise velvet made with off the shoulder frill and slight train. Matching shirred mitts were worn.

The bridesmaids, Miss Catharine Miller, of Toronto, and Miss Doreen Steinburg, were gowned alike in Normandy rose velvet made with fitted bodices, torso frills and bouffant skirts with slight trains. Matching shirred mitts completed their costumes.

All the attendants wore matching feather hats with shoulder-length veils and carried cascade bouquets of Sweetheart roses and bouvardia.

Mr. Ted Snider, of Smithfield, was best man. The ushers were Mr. Karl Austin, brother of the bride, and Mr. O. J. Anderson, of Renfrew, a brother-in-law.

A reception was held in the church parlors, where Mrs. A. G. Austin received wearing a dove grey frock with raspberry red accessories and a corsage of American Beauty roses. Assisting her was the groom's mother wearing black with gold lace trimmings, black accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses.

For a trip to the Laurentians, the bride's travelling costume was a three-piece ensemble of silver blue with matching hat, alligator accessories and Russian squirrel stole. On their return they will take up their residence in Kingston.

Many out-of-town guests were among the eighty who attended the wedding.

A Century of Charm

By PRUNELLA WOOD

IT WOULDN'T BE the truth to say that fashion editors are bored with fashion shows, but it is kind of unusual, at that, to get a big lift out of one. We got it this week, however, when a baker's dozen of little girls from Three to Fourteen walked out in their 1946 Kate Greenway frocks. The great Kate, of storybook fame, has her centennial this year and between you and me, no one has done more during the century to make little girls look prettily dressed than she did, way back there in 1846.

Helen Lee, a young designer with three daughters of her own, has researched like mad to adapt and express the original Kates for wear today. The charming child photographed wears a new blue dotted Swiss model with capelet collar and skirt insertion of embroidered lawn. Notice the hairdo, the gloves, the ballet slippers . . . . all new, old-fashioned style points.

Hastings County Girls Complete Garden Projects

Twenty-eight girls in Hastings County have completed their home garden projects for the year by staging three achievement days, according to Elsie S. Ervine, project supervisor.

The Cooper-Remington Club met on September 7th at the Hall in Cooper with Margaret Brady, Donna Phillips, Marilyn Parks, Donna Rollins, and Dorothy McCoy displaying vegetables from their garden and also showed their record books.

In the Department of Agriculture office at Stirling on Sept. 10, the Stirling, Bonarlaw and West Huntingdon clubs held their achievement day following the day school period. Exhibits were placed by Dora Rodgers, Laura McGee, Betty Cooke, Marion Mitts, Helen Eastwood, and Dorothy and Doris McComb.

At the home of Mrs. Violet Elliott, club leader, twelve members of the Plainfield club showed their garden exhibits on the evening of Sept. 12. These girls were Joyce Carleton, Helen Beatty, Dorothy Meeks, Mary and Marjorie Reid, Joyce and Doreen Lott, Marilyn and Dorothy Hodgins, Faye and Joan Rollins and Isobel Elliott.

All of these exhibits were commented on by Mr. H. W. Burns, assistant agricultural representative, who gave the girls pointers on choosing vegetables for exhibition and judging classes of vegetables. The girls then judged two classes of vegetables and answered a quiz on gardening.

All the girls participating received records of achievement and at Stirling four girls were presented with their County Honor certificates which they received for having completed six homemaking club projects.

These girls were Joan McCurdy, Jean Haggerty, and Joyce Wallace of the West Huntingdon club and Marion Mitts of the Stirling club.

NOVEL SUGGESTION

Victoria, Sept. 18 — (CP) — Senator G. G. McGeer has come up with a novel suggestion for the proposed new Canadian flag. Speaking at the 24th annual convention of Pacific coast building officials, he suggested that Canada, as a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations and a co-guarantor with the United States of the North American continent as a citadel of world hope, should have the Union Jack in one corner of her flag, the Stars and Stripes in another, and the Maple Leaf in between.

TO MAKE STOCKINGS

London, Sept. 18 — (Reuters) — The government is setting aside part of the Royal Ordnance factory at Nottingham to make machinery for the manufacture of women's stockings, it was disclosed yesterday. The first order will be for machinery valued at more than £1,000,000 ($4,000,000).

Receiving the guests were Mrs. A. G. Austin, Miss Roma Austin, Mrs. Eustacia McColl, great grandmother of the bride-to-be and Mrs. C. V. Wilkins, of Trenton. One hundred and fifty guests called during the afternoon. The living room was artistically decorated with gladolli and asters

The girls of the choir served the beautifully arranged refreshment plates, while Miss Helen Bentley replenished the tea table. Other assistants were Mrs. W. Oliphant, Belleville; Mrs. J. Carr, Frankford; Mrs. E. Scott and Mrs. John Alley.

UNEARTH MORE EVIDENCE

Canterbury, Kent, England, Sept. 18 — (CP) — Dutch and American students digging in blitzed areas here have unearthed more evidence of the Roman period. An ancient steam-bath has been unearthed, and indications have been found that it was part of a building housing several similar baths extending underneath buildings which still stand. On the site of the old Rose Hotel, a tiled Roman drain has been discovered running obliquely across the cellar and the district is honeycombed with medieval and Roman rubbish pits.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Welcoming Party for Her Brother's Bride

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. My brother is being married next month to a girl from North Carolina. Because of the expense and the time involved for travelling, no member of our family will be able to attend the wedding. After their wedding, they plan to live in this State, and we would like to give some kind of an affair to have all of my brother's family and relatives meet her. Would it be a "reception", or should we give a dinner? Since they are not starting housekeeping a housewarming party is "out". Who should plan for this, and who should pay the expenses involved?

2. When we introduce her to our relatives and friends, what form of introduction should we use?

R. T.

1. In this circumstance, generally the bridegroom's parents plan this "welcoming party", and, as hosts, they usually pay the expenses of the party. But naturally there can be no rule about this, for the planning and the party-budgeting depend on circumstances. If convenience makes it possible, the party would most appropriately be held in the home of the bridegroom's parents, even if their other sons and daughters contribute to the expense.

It is not necessary to give a dinner in honor of the couple. This would be the most expensive kind of party to give and would include the fewest guests for the greatest expense.

If the plan is to invite only members of the family, other relatives and intimate friends, I suggest you don't use the rather formal word "reception". Instead, as the invitations will probably be given orally or by telephone or by note, I suggest you invite the guests to "come to a party at our house to meet Jim's bride, Sally. We want to give her the heartiest kind of welcome".

2. If, say, your mother is making the introductions, she might say, when introducing her to Jim's aunt, "Aunt Miriam, this is Sally", or if it's necessary, add, "Sally, Jim's wife (or 'Jim's bride'." Or "Sally, this is Jim's cousin, Tom Allen". Or, to a family friend, "Mrs. Robinson, this is our Sally, Jim's wife".

Refreshments at a Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to give a bridal shower for a dear girl friend of mine, and I'm inviting twenty guests. Since the place where the shower will be held is small, how should I serve refreshments? Do you approve of my serving the type of refreshments I have in mind: small sandwiches, with various kinds of simple fillings, fancy cookies, fruit-juice punch, and perhaps assorted nuts? I will welcome any suggestions.

Puzzled

For a shower either in the afternoon or evening, the menu you have in mind is suitable, although I suggest that you also serve hot coffee. And this type of menu would best be served buffet, like a tea-menu. Either the dining-room table or a table along a wall in the living-room is attractively set with a centre-piece of flowers or the container filled with the shower gifts; at one end of the table the coffee service, at the opposite end the service for punch; and conveniently placed, piles of small plates, tea napkins, and the serving dishes of sandwiches, cookies, and nuts. And for the refreshment-serving you might ask two of the guests to preside over the table, one seated before the coffee service and one before the punch service.

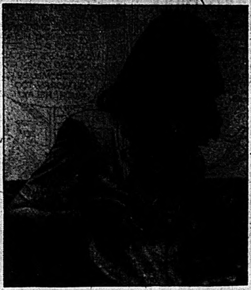
Pampering Your Permanent



A little cologne on your hairbrush gives you an aura of fragrance

By HELEN FOLLETT

Don't fancy that the finger wave is a new idea; it isn't. Wig making has been going on for years and years, and it was by wetting the hair, using the comb to form wave lines, that the makers of this form of camouflage were able to create the undulation.

The first permanents were not very successful. The was was too tight, the result a frizz. These treatments were much more expensive than they are now, costing often as much as $75 when the glorious crown was parboiled out of stringy straightness.

Results Not so Hot

The customers were not particularly enthusiastic about the results. Something had to be done. Some bright mind fancied that the waving method used on factory hair could be used on the feminine head. The finger wave has flourished ever since.

The girl who has a little natural curl will find that professional care will make the pattern stronger. A setting lotion is used, the trained eye observes which way the tresses want to go, encourages them by using the comb and her fingers.

On naturally curly hair cold water should never be used. Moist heat inspires the shafts to assume the coil quality. It is important that every particle of soap be removed after the shampoo; even a light film will straighten the natural curl, as it weakens the permanent one.

Wait Till It Dries.

After the finger wave, the hair should not be combed and arranged until it is as dry as a bone. The setting lotion must not be too heavy, if the hair is to be soft and fluffy, carry a lustre. A little cologne on your hair brush adds an aura of scent.

Certain hair dyes will destroy a natural wave. So, if you are a Curly Girl, are coquetting with the idea of changing the color of your glorious halo, make careful inquiries concerning the coloring medium that is to be used when you duck your head in the dye pot.

What Makes Ideal Figure?

Barbara Stawyck's chiffon evening gown emphasises the lovely lines of her figure

By HELEN FOLLETT

AS FAR as beauty is concerned, this is an age of individualism. We no longer tabulate women into groups and types. Of course, we shall aways have with us the short and the tall, the plump and the thin, but no matter what proportions one has, there are possibilities of cultivating dress personality.

There has never been a time within the memory of your good looks reporter when figures and fashions have been less standardized.

Women are not only giving thought to the clothes they wear, but to the framework that wears them. The ideal figure retains its natural loveliness of line. There are no distortions as there were in the period of the hoopskirt, the hobble skirt, the bustle, the wasp waist. Nature at its best offers the pattern for the smartly outfitted woman of 1946.

Graceful Lines

We have heard a good deal in the past regarding measurements and corresponding weights of the female form divine. They are not important. If lines the graceful, proportions pleasing, it is senseless to endeavor to conform to a certain scale.

Some smartie of the past figured the following "should be's":

The figure should be six times the length of the foot, the face from the middle point of the hair line to the chin should be one tenth of the entire stature, the hand from the tip of the middle finger to the end of the palm should be the length of the face.

The body when standing, with the arms extending straight out from the shoulders, should form at human Maltese Cross.

Width of Shoulders

The shoulders should be two heads wide, legs four times the length of the head, the distance from temple to temple the length of the face. Perfectly formed legs, when one stands erect, should touch at the thighs, the knees, the calves and the ankles.

Get out your tape measure now and have fun. If your figures do not come out precisely right, don't be unhappy. Few women would win on every point.

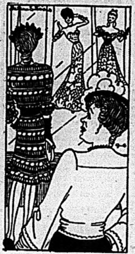
BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Keeping in Form



All Those Cute Clothes are Designed for Neat, Normal hips

Teachers of physical education will tell you that their greatest trouble is making women use their muscles. They're all for fewer and better exercises, the kind that have no lost motion. If you're going to be lazy about calesthenics you might better use your time for other beauty fulfillments. A strong, resilient musculature is the making of a good figure and graceful movements. Let your fibres sag and you're likely to have bulges here, there and elsewhere. When you get along in years you may waddle. That prospect should scare you into a state of activity.

All those cute duds you see in the shops are designed for neat, normal hips. Dress designers appear to take it for granted that every woman has balanced proportions. Our way of living is a handicap to slenderness and the youthful silhouette. We ride around in cars instead of walking. We lounge in cushioned chairs instead of sitting properly, with the spinal column extended. We eat too much rich food. The mere mention of the word exercise usually sets our teeth on edge. These facts account for the surplus of heavyweights among us.

There's no excuse for superfluous fat. It can be starved off and worked off.

When a woman consumes more sweets, starches and fats than she needs for the day's activities, she is feeding her fat cells and they multiply. She needs a certain amount of energy-making food elements and she should get enough exercise to burn them up; if she doesn't, they will be stored away. The trouble with the excessively thin girl is that she has little appetite for sweets and starches—lettuce and pickles are her prime favorites—and she tears around at full speed, suffering from malnutrition, nervousness and general exhaustion. Too bad that so little thought is given to the subject of health and well-being.

Should it happen that your hips have followed a policy of expansion and you visualize yourself as a customer for the "stylish stouts" department, do some hip-circling. Do it seriously. No lagging about it. Do it twice a day, ten minutes each session.

Stand with the feet wide apart. Lift the chest, let the arms hang easily at the side.

Endeavor to hold the upper portion of your body straight, sending the hips and thighs from side to side. Do not change the position of the feet when you do this. Of course, the torso above the waist will move somewhat, but the greater the effort of movement at the mid-section, the better the results will be and the more speedily they will arrive. When tired, place hands on hips, take ten long, deep breaths. Then at it again.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She Loves a Married Man in Her Office

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19 and considered rather attractive. I know that I can have any of a number of boys if I wanted to, but I don't. You see, I am very deeply in love with a married man who is four years my senior.

This boy returns my love, but we both respect and admire his wife to the point that we'd never hurt her, as the suggestion of divorce would do. You will probably suggest that I forget him but, due to the fact that he works in the office across from me, I can hardly do that. There are no children involved—nothing except his wife keeps us apart.

We lunch together every day and are in each other's office constantly. This has been going on for the greater part of two years and I have reached the breaking point. I can't live without him, but I can't live with him. It isn't that I don't love him eonugh, but it's just that we both have too many morals to do anything sinful.

"G. M."

I wonder what your idea of doing anything sinful is, G.M.? Don't you think that to lunch every day, for two years, with another woman's husband, and take every possible opportunity to be with him, comes very close to that? It seems to me that if you both had as many morals as you say, you would have taken steps to end this thing long ago.

You say you don't want to hurt this man's wife by suggesting that she divorce her husband in your favor. And yet you are doing, every day, things that would greatly hurt her if she knew about them. Do you think it is perfectly all right to do this merely because she doesn't know about them? You also say that 'nothing but his wife" keep you apart. It seems to me that is a lot.

My suggestion would be that one or the other of you change your job and have character enough to end a situation which is bad for both of you and can lead nowhere. Of course it will be hard to do, but this is no reason for not doing it. If you want to do the right thing, you will make up your minds to go your separate ways, and if there are so many boys eager to be friendly with you, it should be only a matter of time before you fall in love in a better way.

Pollett Tabbed as Another Carl Hubbell as He Wins Twentieth Game of Season

First Time Lefthander Has Won That Many Since 1937

By RALPH RODEN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

They used to call Carl Hubbell the "meal ticket" of the Giants when the great New York lefthander was winning pennants for Bill Terry about a decade ago.

Today, the experts are pinning the same tag on Howie Pollett, the hungry-looking portsider of St. Louis who will have to receive a good chunk of the glory if the Cardinals win their ninth National League flag this year.

Pollett hurled his 20th win of the season yesterday as the Cards hammered New York Giants 10-2 to protect their two-game first place margin over Brooklyn Dodgers who downed Chicago Cubs, 4-2.

Thus, the slim portsider became the first hurler in the league to win twenty games and also the first lefthander in the loop to reach the select mark since Hubble and Melton of the Giants performed the feat in 1937.

Enos (Country) Slaughter-supplied most of the batting power as Pollett coasted to his 13th win as against two defeats over the Giants during his career. The North Carolina belter batted in five runs on a homer and single to boost his league-leading runs batted in figure to 124.

Ten Left to Play

The Red Birds, who invade Boston tonight for a two-game series with the Braves that will terminate their final eastern trip of the year, have ten games left to play while Dodgers, who play host to the Pittsburgh Pirates in a three-game set that starts with a doubleheader today, have 12 games left. If St. Louis wins six of its remaining games, the Dodgers will have to cop nine of theirs to tie the Cards for the flag.

Brooklyn scored three runs against Chicago in the the first inning, sparked by Dixie Walker's two-run double. Rookie Russ Meyer relieved starter Paul Eirckson in this frame and held the Brooks in check until the sixth when they scored their final run on Augie Galan's double and Walker's single.

In the only other scheduled National League game, Boston Braves scored their fifth straight win by trouncing Cincinnati Reds 8-2. The Braves, who clinched fourth place Monday, now are only a game behind the Cubs.

Detroit Tigers won the only game scheduled in the American League, defeating Washington Senators 6-4. Hank Greenberg paced the Bengals attack by smashing his 38th homer with two on in the first inning.

ROYALS EXPECTED TO START NAGY AGAINST BEARS

Hold 3-2 Edge Over Newark and if They Win Will Meet Syracuse

(By The Associated Press)

The pennant winning Montreal Royals are scheduled to clash with the fourth-place Newark Bears tonight in what the Royals hope is the final game of their semi-final International League playoff set.

Leading the Bears, three games to two in their best-of-seven series, the Royals are expected to send Steve Nagy, the circuit's ace hurler against the visiting Bears to turn in the clincher while the manager George Selkirk of the Bears is countering with his rookie fast ball artist, Duane Pillette.

Nagy hurled the series opener then received credit for the 7-5 victory although he was knocked from the hill in the ninth inning when the Bears scored all of their five runs. Pillette tossed the second game for Newark and was charged with a 2-1 loss.

The speedster allowed the Royals only two hits and fanned six but wildness caused his downfall.

Should the Royals win tonight, they will join the runner - up Syracuse Chiefs, who eliminated third-place Baltimore Monday night in the final round.

Junior Softball Game Scheduled Today Postponed

The game between the Belleville Goodman softball juniors and a Toronto team, the first of the O.A.S.A. semi-final series, scheduled for today at 5:45 at the Fair Grounds, has been postponed, Goodman officials were notified by O.A.S.A. Secretary Frank Feaver late last night.

Feaver stated that the Toronto group has been unable to declare a winner and the game here naturally could not be played. The local team, which has done extensive advertising regarding the game, will be reimbursed, the secretary stated.

He also added that the Goodman team could claim the game by default, and play the second game in Toronto on Saturday. This the Goodman's refused to do, feeling they would rather win the championship on the field and not on paper.

Goodman officials and members of the team are distinctly disappointed over the matter, but there is nothing that can be done about it. It is presumed the team will make the scheduled trip to Toronto on Saturday, but at this time, even that is not definite.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Tonight in New York Joe Louis, the world's heavyweight champion will defend his title for the twenty-third time against Tami Mauriello, who is regarded in pugilistic circles as being on the eve of election to the Joe Louis KO Club. The wise men from the east, west, north and south give the dark-skinned Italian fruit boy as much chance against the lethal fists of the Dark Destroyer as a sitting duck against an atomic bomb.

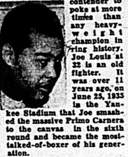
• • •

The story of Joe Louis from Golden Gloves to Mauriello is the story of a struggle both in and out of the ring, according to topflight New York boxing writers. Under constant pressure against great obstacles Joe has done more for the sport of boxing than any fighter who ever laced on a glove.

• • •

And the kid from the cotton fields of Alabama and the streets of Detroit has done more to help the Negro cause than any athlete in the long and bitter history of that race.

• • •



Joe has been around a long time now, according to Jack Sher, Gotham boxing expert. He's defended his title 22 times, put it up for every contender to poke at more times than any heavyweight champion in ring history. Joe Louis at 32 is an old fighter. It was over 11 years ago, on June 25, 1935 in the Yankee Stadium that Joe smashed the massive Primo Carnera to the canvas in the sixth round and became the most-talked-of-boxer of his generation.

• • •

All through the years, Joe has made it seem easy to do the things no other champion has ever done. He's made it seem like falling off a log. It hasn't been easy. For almost a decade, Joe Louis has been the champion and he always has known what to do about it, as a fighter and as a man.

• • •

Louis, states Sher, has never been called a great ring general. While Jack Blackburn was alive, Joe let the old trainer plan his fights and followed instructions from the corner. Early in his career Joe was most dangerous during the 1st minute and a half of any round. At the clang of the bell with the words of Blackburn fresh in his ears, Louis would fight Jack's way. Fighters who have stayed on their feet for fifteen rounds with Louis did it by keeping away from him. As the round wore on Joe had a habit of forgetting Jack's instructions.

• • •

Joe's famous easy shuffle has fooled many fight fans into believing he is slow in the ring. Joe is probably the fastest puncher in the business. His feet move slowly but you don't hit with your feet. When Louis went after Conn in the eighth round, the blows travelled so fast that even the experts at the ringside couldn't agree on how many punches Louis tossed before Conn went down. Some said three, some said eight. But none of this speed-punching was shown in training. It only comes when the chips are down.

• • •

Everything Joe Louis does is aimed at keeping his championship. There never has been a heavyweight champion to whom the title meant more. In his personal conduct in and out of the ring, Joe has tried to do it credit.

A champion, Joe believes, should always look and act like one. He stubbornly refuses to have his picture taken when he is overweight or out of condition. He neither drinks nor smokes and during his Army career he kept fit.

• • •

In a sport that long has been dogged by dirty tactics, phony deals and unsavory characters, Big Joe has remained untouched. It is well known that Louis will not endorse any product he doesn't use, or try to cash in unscrupulously on his fame.

• • •

A sports photographer from a national news service once tried to get Joe to pose eating a watermelon. Louis knows that pictures of colored people eating watermelon are comedy material. When he refused, the photographer was irritated and wanted to know why. "Because," the champion said seriously, "I don't like watermelon."

• • •

The lead-footed Mauriello will not be able to move fast enough to keep away from the champion, in this corner's opinion, and we'll go out on the well-known limb and predict that he'll be hearing the birdies sing about the third or fourth round—if he's not horizontal before that time. The fight is being broadcast and will start at 10 o'clock tonight.

• • •

The advance sale and interest — or lack of it — indicates a gate of little more than $300,000 at $5, $10 and $30. Louis gets 40 per cent, Mauriello 20. The measurements handed out by Mike Jacob's publicity department must have been dreamed up to make the challenger look more formidable. Louis' waist is given as 36 inches, Mauriello's 34½. From the appearance of the fighters in the recent pictures it looked as if the bloke that measured them made a 10 inch error in Tami's midriff.

• • •

As one boxing expert puts it: "There may be an exciting moment or two, however, which is more than could be said for the Billy Conn fandango."

• • •

"Here's to dear old Boston,
The home of the bean and the cod,
Where the Red Sox sell series stubs only
To the Lodges, the Cabots and God."

• • •

A number of city baseball fans who have had their eyes on the world series in Boston for some time received a jolt the other day when they were informed that no reservations would be accepted from places outside the New England States. It appears the Red Sox management have received a half million orders for a park that will seat less than 40,000.

• • •

Even as you read this the junior baseball and softball squads are battling on their respective diamonds for the honah of dear old Belleville. While the Goodman Juniors - Toronto game does not start until 5:45, the Kiwanis youngsters are out there at this minute — (unless it is raining) in the throes of their second game with the Ottawa Wrightvilles from Hull. Better get out there and cheer the kids to victory.

TOAR MORGAN

KARL DAVIS

A neat pachydermic tea party is scheduled for the Hume Arena, Friday evening when those two enemies of the mat, Toar Morgan and Karl 'Krippler' Davis, meet in the main bout. These two ponderous mastodons of the squared circles have been eyeing one another viciously ever since their meeting some time ago when Toar put the quietus on the Krippler and that little matter of last Friday when the dashing marine socked the Krip after the main bout with Whipper Billy Watson hasn't improved the mental attitude of either toward the other. They are not on speaking terms and each has blood in his eye. It will be a grudge battle from start to finish and there will be fireworks aplenty. The Krippler was plain fighting mad after his reception here last week and he is going about with a look in his eyes that means trouble for someone, especially a Joe by the name of Morgan. In the semi-final the villainous Lee Henning will meet the popular Pat Flanagan and that, too, has all the earmarks of a highly entertaining bout. In the preliminary, popular Ben Sharpe will tangle with Frankie Taylor. This pair are clean cut, clever, aggressive youngsters and they will serve up an appetiser that should please the faithful to no end.

BRUCE WOODCOCK KO'S LESNEVICH IN TENTH ROUND

Light Heavyweight Champ Did Not Have Title at Stake in Contest

By BILL MACKLIN

London, Sept. 18 — (AP) — Bruce Woodcock has put Britain back into the world heavyweight picture with his surprising knockout of world's light heavyweight champion Gus Lesnevich, of Cliffside, N.J.

British sports fans, who have spent much of the post-war era seeing their ring heroes defeated by invaders, were heartened by the Doncaster fighter's performance last night in sending Lesnevich to the canvas in 1:40 of the last frame of their scheduled ten-round non-title bout.

The triumph of the British boxer, knocked out by Tami Mauriello in New York City last spring, was witnessed by a sell-out crowd that paid $175,000 to get into Harringay Arena.

Woodcock, aiming for a return bout with Mauriello in London, boxed like a new fighter, displaying ring skill unlike anything he has shown in England before.

He kept Lesnevich at bay with a jabbing left and brought his right smash into action as early as the second round, when he put the American down momentarily for no count.

Lesnevich tried gamely to regain his feet after Woodcock applied the clincher in the eighth with a right smash to the chin. Gus was still on his knees, his fists immobile, when referee Moss De Yong finished the count.

The only setback the 25-year-old Woodcock has suffered in his career was the fifth-round knockout at the hands of Mauriello. Lesnevich, 31, has taken the full count only three times in his 12 years in the ring and his manager hinted after the fight that Gus might retire after two more fights. "I guess it just doesn't pay to tangle with heavyweights," said Vella.

LOUIS IS READY FOR 23RD DEFENCE OF HIS TITLE

Experts Agree Tami Mauriello Won't be Around Long in Tonight's 10-Rounder

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Sept. 18—(AP) — Joe Louis makes the 23rd defence of his heavyweight title tonight at Yankee Stadium, with Tami Mauriello of the Bronx being served up as the sacrificial goat.

There appears to be little doubt in anybody's mind, except possibly Mauriello's, that Louis will retain his crown by a knockout, but some 30,000 are expected to be drawn to the big ball yard in the chance of seeing a lot of fight while it lasts.

Tami is supposed to be of the Tony Galento breed. He knows only to move forward and slug it out. While this ordinarily is considered an admirable trait in a prizefighter, it cannot be recommended as a method of fighting Joe Louis.

Knowing Tami's ring habits, the odds-makers are almost positive he will get it early. They are offering even money that Louis knocks him out inside five rounds, and 9 to 1 — and even greater— that the champ wins.

This much more can be said. He boasts a much better record than a majority of those who have tried to fight the big Negro.

He has won 12 straight since 1944, and in his most recent bout stopped Bruce Woodcock, the British heavyweight champ, in 5 rounds. Only 23 he weighs close to 200, and is tough and confident. Also, he has trained for this one strenuously and earnestly.

Critics agree however, that the champion is in even better conditions than for the Conn affair in June. His legs are firm and he still is wonderfully fast for such a big man. There is a growing suspicion that he hits harder than ever.

A small card lead should not be viewed carelessly. Nor should you look upon it with suspicion. If you know how to make it tell you things, you can learn plently from it.

The lead of a small card is assumed to be the fourth best in that suit. Subtract the led card from 11. That will tell you how many higher cards in that suit are held in the other three hands.

The hearts in a deal are as shown here:

NORTH
♥J 8 4 3 2

WEST ♥Q 10 7 5 EAST ♥A 9 6

SOUTH
♥K

West leads the heart five. Subtract five from 11. The answer is six. That tells you north and east and south must have six hearts higher than the five. Remember, higher than the five.

South is declarer and north is dummy. East can see two hearts higher than the five in dummy. He can also see three hearts higher than the five in his own hand.

So, east knows that south has only one heart higher than the five. West would not have led away from a king. So, the only heart higher than a five in south must be the king.

In this way, east also learns that west has the heart queen and ten. And all the cards lower than the five are in sight. Therefore, east also knows the heart king held by south is all alone.

Dummy has two higher than the five. South sees only one higher than the five in his own hand. This tells south that east must have three hearts higher than the five.

South sees in dummy all the heatrs lower than the five. From this he knows that east has exactly three hearts and west has four hearts. It must come out that way or mathematics would be wrong.

You may not like mathematics even when they are as simple as this. But little things like that help a bridge player.

Hollywood Column

Hollywood, Sept. 18 (AP)—If you want to keep on Hugh Herbert's good side don't utter "woo-woo" in his presence.

I found this out when I mentioned how he got the biggest ovation of the stars at a premiere in San Diego. His name was mentioned and the audence began woo-wooing like mad.

"Yes, that was a bad break," he told me. "Billy Wellman, the director, was considering me for a dramatic role in his next picture. He was assured the public had forgotten the 'woo-woo' routine. When that audience went 'woo-woo' the role went out the window."

As Hugh tells it, the strange exclamation became associated with him during an old Wheeler and Woolsey picture, "Diplomaniacs." He and Louis Calhern were told they wouldn't have to work the next day because of rain. So they had a party. In the midst of festivities the studio called them to work, the weather man having erred.

The early morning scene called for two actors to perch in a windswept tree. As Herbert clung to the trunk, all he could say was "woo-woo." It stuck.

In the film palaces... "Gallant Bess" (MGM) is an interesting experiment, and, on the whole, a successful one. It makes good use of the new cinecolor, which is effective, except for a slight overcast of blue. Eager young Marshall Thompson and the educated horse, Bess, star in the unusual story which could have been told better at less length.

Spencer Tracy will tour the art galleries on his New York vacation, now that he's taken up painting ... Paulette Goddard's bath scene in "Unconquered" had to be postponed because soap suds reddened her eyes. They'll use meringue next time...Production difficulty: Seymour Nebenzal is seeking 75 camels for "Atlantis." Only one-humpers need apply. Could he mean dromedaries?

Indian Land, stablemate of Ensign Hanover, took care of the pacing feature at the Grand Circuit meeting at Delaware, O., yesterday. The speedy son of Scotland from Mrs. James B. Johnson's Lexington, Ky., stable was brought home in straight heats by Jimmy Wingfield.

Amid cries of "fake" from indignant fans milling about the ringside, the Halifax Boxing Commission last night withheld purses of Billy Tordiglione of Boston and Al Evans of Newport, R.I., after the latter lost by a knockout in the second round of their scheduled 10-round bout. It appeared Evans had gone down without being hit.

Three University of Toronto football players who have starred for Toronto Argonauts in Big Four competition this season are going to play under Varsity colors in an exhibition game with Toronto Indians this Saturday. The three were announced last night as quarterbacks Billy Meyers and Fred Doty and halfback Tommy Walden.

Fred Kijek, plunging and punting star of the 1945 Toronto Indians, was among the missing at the O.R.F.U. club's practice last night and Coach Brian Timmis expressed fear he may have joined Montreal Alouettes of the Big Four. Kijek had signed earlier with Alouettes and went to Montreal during the weekend.

The Florida State Racing Commission yesterday dismissed "for lack of evidence" charges against three jockeys and a jockey valet alleging that they attempted to "fix" a race at Miami's Tropical Park last April 17. The jockeys were Robert Keane of Toronto, Vincent Nordage of Havana and Leonard Loveridge of Tampa, Fla.

Toronto Simpsons were eliminated yesterday in the women's division of the Amateur Softball Association tournament at Cleveland when they dropped their second game of the competition, bowing to Tulsa, Okla, 1-0.

Los Amigos defeated California 6-4 yesterday in the opening game of the United States polo championship at Wesbury, N.Y.

New York, Sept. 18—(AP) — The trucking strike that has plagued New Yorkers in various ways will have an effect on tonight's heavyweight championship fight ... Promoter Mike Jacobs couldn't find any way to get the aluminum supports for the raised ringside sections transported to Yankee Stadium so the customers will have to depend on neck stretching to get a good look.

When Bellingham (Wash.) Bells won the state semi-pro baseball title, their hometown fans needed only 24 hours to raise the $5,000 needed for the team to fly to Wichita, Kas., for the United States tournament ... at Wichita, the Bells played two games, lost them both and were eliminated under the double defeat system ... When they got back to Bellingham, there was a band to greet them at the airport.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ALAN VICKERY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Sept. 18 —(CP)— The University of Manitoba is embarking on a new era of athletics by taking on powerful football squads from south of the border—and at their own game too.

While Winnipeggers were still watching fastball games, the farseeing Varsity Athletic Board made application for entry into the north central football conference. To date the application is still being considered by the conference board.

If the Manitobans do not get into the league this year, they have lined up a number of exhibition games with American colleges. But, the varsity board still have high hopes of being invited.

After the application was sent, the Atlantic Board scouted the mid-west States for a coach who could teach the Canadians the art of football as played under the American code. They chose Pat Twomey, a former Fargo and North Dakota State football star just out of the United States Army.

Now Twomey is faced with the task of applying Bernie Bierman's famed Minnesota formation to his new charges. Just what to expect from this collection of freshmen is the big question of Twomey, varsity fans and their opponents.

Twomey has plenty of material from which to choose his squad. Many war veterans have returned to the campus, and along with a few regulars from last years' High School teams, they will make up the bulk of the first-string team. The rest will come from the young hopefuls.

"They're green," says Twomey, "very green, and I'm not expecting too much this year. But they have plenty of fight and by the time next season rolls around, well, watch out."

If the varsity application is approved, they will meet such formidable opponents as North Dakota State, the University of South Dakota, Iowa State Teachers, Augustina College, and others.

Winnipeg fans will get a chance to view their opinions as to the pros and cons of the American game after the Varsity Bisons take on the University of North Dakota at Osborne Stadium, Oct. 12.

Dodgers Vote Full Shares To 29 Players

Brooklyn, Sept. 18 (AP)—Brooklyn Dodgers, still in a hot fight for the National League pennant, today announced their division of the world series spoils and, with characteristic generosity voted full shares to 29 players.

Also on the full share list were Manager Leo Durocher, coaches Charley Dressen and John Corriden, Dr. Harold Wendler, trainer; Harold Parrott, road secretary; Dan Comorford, clubhouse custodian, and his assistant, John Griffin.

The Dodgers revealed a grievance against Joe Tepsic, the Penn State athlete who in mid-season received a $17,000 bonus for signing with Brooklyn. Tepsic drew only one-eighth of a share, although he has been with the Dodgers since July 12.

The cause traces to Tepsic's refusal to go to the minors and thus make room for another player who would have been brought up for pinch-hitting duty. A clause in Tepsic's contract stipulates that he is not to be farmed out without his consent.

Among those receiving full shares was Calvin McLish, a right handed pitcher whose name has appeared in only one box score this year. McLish, who reported out of the army in mid-season, pitched to two batters in a game against St. Louis on the last western trip, got none of them out, and was yanked.

Five-eighths of a share will be divided among the batboy and clubhouse attendants.

CHAPTER 6

There was something almost admirable in so complete an armor. Avery was as unconscious of it himself as—well, as a canary, Isabel would think, looking about the children's nursery for a companion. He was completely sheathed in it. There wasn't any question about it.

He wouldn't say when he wanted his breakfast, no matter how touchy the cook and the butler got on the subject. Some times he liked it at eleven, in bed; sometimes he was restlessly ranging about the dining room at seven o'clock. He would, or he wouldn't, go to the Havisham's dinner. "Call 'em up and say we'll come."

"But Avery dear, the last time we did that you wouldn't go, at the last minute. You went off and played poker with Billy's crowd, and I had to pretend I was down with flu and give up two lunches and the symphony!"

He would not be listening.

"Did a feller come here about my golf clubs?" he might demand, out of a moment of abstraction.

Curiously, everyone forgave Avery his bad manners, and so Isabel might, she reflected ruefully, just as well forgive him too. Women laughed at him, liked to gamble with him at dominoes and bridge and backgammon; and men said he was a sport and a darned good sort, and murmured with him for hours about chukkers and trout flies, deer trails in the Sierras and the old days of hunting in Ireland. Avery had no reason to suspect any imperfections in himself.

But Isabel had not been married to him six weeks before she began to experience moments of bewilderment and resentment. One person had no right to absorb another person's life so completely! She couldn't mold Avery to her will; she couldn't feel free.

Mold him! She couldn't reach him at all. There was no such think as quiet reasonable conversation between them. He was heavily asleep in the morning; he wanted to be waked at eleven, he had to be at the office at one. He was looking over his clothes, his guns or rods, for some trip. He was cursing busily as he dressed for dinner, or regaling her with jokes told that day at the club luncheon. He was far away from her, down the length of someone's dinner table; he was flushed and excited over his backgammon game, and then he was heavily asleep against her shoulder on the drive home. After they got home there was no use talking to him; swiftly, silently, with sudden stumbles and plunges he got himself into bed. Isabel had always roomed with Dennis, during their almost six years of marriage; granted any affection at all for your husband, it was the thing to do. But then Dennis had not snored; Dennis had never in all their years together distressed her by drinking too much.

Lying awake she would review the advantages of her second marriage. Tremendous advantages. From being an absolute nobody in a small country town she had escaped to Dennis Hardisty's arms; a great step up, although Dennis was by no means rich, nor was he a conspicuous figure, just one of the city's hundred fine serious engineers. But from Dennis to Avery was an even more remarkable advance. Now she was of the very inner sanctum; now she wore furs and emeralds and had her box at the opera and the symphonies. Presently, when the war was over, and life began to spin and shine and whirl again, she and Avery would be driving everywhere in the low-slung cream-colored car; they would be sailing for Antibes and Rio and all the other fascinating places of the world. They would be the centre of brilliant groups on yachts and in the theatre lobbies; they would go to dinners...

And so comforting herself, she would sleep.

"Yelta," she said this morning, "Mr. Latimer gets back from Catalina tonight, and we will be dining out and leaving tomorrow for luncheon and dinner in town. I thought that perhaps you might take the girls in to see old Mrs. Hardisty tomorrow, or on Monday."

"No-o-o!" exclaimed Pussy and Catherine together, in loud lament.

"They don't want to go," the nurse said, in quiet satisfaction.

"Well, it's their grandmother. They haven't been in for weeks," Isabel said, hesitating. "What do you want to do, midgets?" she asked.

"We want to play with Yelta and Deddy!" the little girls chorused.

"Deddy? Oh, Edna" Isabel said, surprised but not displeased. If her daughters were happy with grim Yelta and the equally uninteresing upstairs girl,, so much the better. She only wanted them to be amused. "What do you do?" she asked.

"We walk by fountains and dip in our arms," Pussy said, with a reminiscent giggle, "and we made a fairy house in a tree."

"You climbed a tree?"

"No," Yelta elucidated, "they take acorns and little leaves and make houses in the oak bark."

"Oh well, that sounds fun. I may not dwell upon the moment of departure," Isabel said to the nurse. "It will not be until we are temporarily unconscious—"

Yelta gave her a knowing nod, as she and the children went away. Not that it mattered, really, Isabel mused, for they were so accustomed to parting from her that they never made any fuss any more.

No, she was completely free from maternal cares, and yet she had two funny, charming little daughters. She could go into their nursery at any hour she liked, Yelta and the Thursday nurse were always respectful and sympathetic; Isabel could buy them whatever clothes or toys she fancied; it was to have all the joys of motherhood without any of its restrictions.

Not all the joys. She had moments of missing their old dependence upon her. She had moments of remembering the days when she first knew Nancy Strait, and would linger downtown with Nancy, at one lounge bar or another, late into the afternoon, knowing that the little warm arms, the wild little wet kisses were waiting for her. She remembered looking at her watch, murmuring in alarm, "Oh, darling, it's after six! I've got to get home. My poor mother-in-law will have had those babies of mine all afternoon!"

"Which she probably simply adores," Nancy would reply.

"Well, she probably does, but still—"

And Isabel would hurry home, rush in, smiling guiltily, fly upstairs to find the little nightgowned forms already in bed.

"Oh, Gran, you angel! I really did try to get away early and give you your suppers, darlings," she would exclaim, sinking on her knees between the two small beds, avoiding her mother-inlaws eye. And immediately the dreaded moment would be over, the girls would be climbing over her and kissing her wildly; the elder Mrs. Hardisty would make some mild report upon Pussy's cough or Catherine's lost rubbers, and all would be amiability and calm.

Sometimes, when she was Avery's wife, Isabel would remember those old days with a little homesickness. She and Dennis's mother had been oddly companionable; now there was no woman to whom she could talk in that comfortable, intimate way. Old Mrs. Hardisty had loved her as a daughter; Isabel missed that love. Dennis's mother liked to eat her dinner to a rattling fire of chatter from her son's wife, and as an old resident of the pioneer city she could supply the younger woman with many a detail regarding the city's distinguished families.

"The Bicknells?" she would echo surprisedly. "Why, I don't know how the Bicknells can take that position toward the Gracies, exactly. Mrs. Joe Bicknell was a Furlong, and the Furlongs..."

It was apt to be kindly comment; Mary Hardisty was never bitter or snobbish, but between the two Dennis's wife and mother managed to keep going a sufficiently absorbing conversation. They could always talk of Dennis, too, and of the children.

Her husband's mother must have missed her terribly when she had so suddenly swept the children off to Reno, Isabel would reflect, with a little pang of compunction. It was just one of the many pricks of a divorce. But every life, no matter how one lived it, has it pricks. Probably the elder Mrs. Mardisty was over it by this time. Certainly she didn't seem any too eager to have the small girls go in to town with Yelta to call upon her. She would have ice cream and sponge cakes waiting for them in the dark dining room Isabel remembered so well; Catherine and Pussy would come home with little gifts of handkerchiefs or sewing boxes or gaily colored books from Grandma. They would sidle quietly into their mother's room murmuring pleasedly: "Look what Grandma gave us!" They always seemed especially to prize these inexpensive little presents.

"Leave them with me for a while, Yelta," Isabel would say, if they found her resting or dressing.

"Well, I'll stay," Yelta would answer primly. "Mr. Latimer may be coming in."

She would withdraw into shadows somewhere; it was a big room, with old-fashioned alcoves and curtains, and Pussy and Catherine would squeeze themselves gingerly into one chair and sit regarding their mother in silent adoration. Conversation did not get very far.

"Yelta'll be gone Thursday," Isabel would reflect, "and then I'll have them to myself. I'll telephone Miss Anna not to come."

But Thursdays had a maddening way of filling themselves with other engagements. Unimportant engagements, but ones that Avery expected her to keep. Her dentist, or a luncheon she really wanted to attend, or a concert. There was a surprising number of important weddings in wartime, too.

"You're going to show up at the Bagleys'?" Avery would ask.

Isabel might be lying propped on her pillows, enjoying her breakfast, the newspaper, and the mail, while he dressed.

"Oh, heavens, is that today? Thursday—"

"Why? Make another date?"

"No-o-o. Just that it's Yelta's day off."

"Doesn't little What's-her-name the one with the pretty legs — isn't she on the job?"

"Anna Beattie, oh yes. She's coming. But I thought I might do something with them this afternoon."

"Well, you'd better have another think, honey. We've got to take in the Bagley thing, Connie'd be crazy if we didn't."

"I'd forgotten it. Where'll I meet you?" But if the conversation had taken this tone Isabel's thoughts might be neither with the wedding plan nor the children. They were often sent off upon an uncomfortable tangent by some such references as this of Avery's to little Anna Beattie's legs.

Avery could not seem to keep his eyes, his thoughts, or his conversation away from the visible charms of any pretty girl he saw. He would crane his neck to look out of a restaurant window, turn in the street to follow some slim little stranger with an absorbed glance, refer at odd moments for several days after meeting her to this one's "cute little figure bunched up that way in front," or that one's "soft little neck, like a kitten's."

Often he identified women by their physical characteristics.

"Who was the cutey whose bra kept slipping tonight?" he might ask his wife. Or, "That girl at Millie's—the one with the round knees, who was she?"

"Homely?" he might say of some newcomer. "Yep, maybe she is. But take a look at those legs! Get an eyeful of her topside. Every man in the room was watching her last night."

"I hope someone tells that girl someday what an exhibition she is making of herself," Isabel might reply mildly.

"Tell her! You think she didn't know it? My dear girl, that kid would have followed me right out of the room if I'd snapped my finger," Avery would retort. "She knows what she's got!"

Even worse was the fact that every one of his own group apparently recognized this trait in Avery. There was a general tendency to refer to it amusedly.

"Wait until Jed's girl trots that shape of hers down here in her bathing suit," someone had said at Pebble Beach that summer. "Avery Latimer will be off the high dive."

"Don't miss anything, Avery," hummed sophisticated Clarissa Burnham, on an occasion when a particularly daring effect of brassiere and shorts strolled by, displayed on a sun-browned slim young form.

In the beginning of her marriage Isabel, a little affronted and a little upset by this, would protest good-naturedly, "Oh, stop it, Avery, it's disgusting!" Later she treated it with dignified unconcern. When the women she met—and they were invariably cordial and hospitable to Avery's beautiful wife—hinted to her of his affairs with this beauty or that, she followed the same procedure. Once or twice she felt a strong impulse to ask him about his friendship with Sally della Farese, but she conquered it. When Millie Tait said to her affectionately one day, "If ever you're curious, come to me, and I'll tell you exactly what there was in it, and it wasn't much," Isabel merely smiled and answered, "I'll wait until I'm feeling strong, some time."

All she knew of Sally, Contessa della Farese, was that she was a pretty thin little woman with a high, nervous voice, and that when Isabel and Avery, just home from their honeymoon in the East, attended one of their first dinner parties, the American-born countess created a scene in the Harmons drawing room. She turned from a fireside group, said incredulously to someone near, "Who? Who was married? I've been away. Who?" and upon being informed that it was Avery Latimer who had been married and that he was here, with his wife, stammered something incoherent, choked, and slipped in a faint to the floor.

A dozen voices instantly broke into explanations to every one in general and to Isabel in particular, although she was too confused and surprised to get the values of the situation at all. Sally had been ill, she had been away, she was still weak, the room was hot, she'd be all right.

Dinner was announced in the midst of this, and as Ann Harmon presently descended the stairs with the announcement that Sally felt fine, but she was going to rest awhile upstairs, and nobody else seemed to have anything to add, Isabel almost forgot the incident. She had never heard the name of the Countess della Farese before. But afterward she did hear it, and often, and Sally called, and made matters much worse by explaining that she had always like Avery so much, and his wife mustn't mind, for they were just the dearest of old friends.

"It was just—so silly of me at Ann's—" stammered the countess. "But nobody had told me about Avery's marriage."

"It was in the papers," Isabel reminded her, in surprise.

SPORT-TIPS by "Ace" Percival

Formerly a star athlete, now Canada's top coaching expert, "Ace" says: "Part of every athlete's success is due to right training, part to right eating, part to knowing 'inside' tricks. Here's a way to improve your basketball score."

BASKETBALL #34 . . . PIVOT SHOT

WHEN TO USE IT
Use the pivot shot when you have the ball, but your back is to opponent's basket and you are closely guarded. Use only when you are quite close to basket.

FAKE TO ONE SIDE
Hold ball well out in front, fake to one side by twisting upper body around. Take short step in same direction. Make this fake really convincing.

JUMP AND SHOOT
After fake, pivot quickly to opposite side. Leap high in air, twisting body to face basket. Shoot with one hand push "set" shot at height of jump.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Sept. 18 —(AP)— The bears resumed control of today's stock market and depressed prices for leaders by fractions to two or more points.

A few resistant spots cropped up at a fairly active opening but most failed to follow through and the general direction soon was downward. There was a relatively active selling flurry in the first hour. Dealings then slowed and a number of extreme losses were trimmed near the fourth period.

Easiness prevailed in the Canadian group. Hiram Walker led the morning decline, off a point at mid-day. C.P.R. eased 3-8, Dome Mines and McIntyre 1-4 each and Distillers Seagrams 5-8.

HEADED FOR THE LAST ROUND-UP

Here is an example of the death defying Tee-Bone Crash, one of the featured stunts of the 12 event program of the "Lucky" Lott Hell Drivers who will perform at the Belleville Fair on Sept. 23, afternoon and evening. The Hell Driver circles the race track, races up on an elevated rampway, plunges his car through space, sending it smashing and crashing into another old jallopy placed in its path, causing both cars usually to roll over and over while the driver is at the wheel. There will be a number of new and thrilling stunts attempted on "Lucky" Lott Hell Drivers day at the Belleville Fair.

Truman Faces Critical Decision

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, Sept. 18 — (AP) — President Truman faced one of the most critical decisions of his administration—whether to sanction further criticism of his foreign policy by Henry A. Wallace or, possibly, to ask his secretary of commerce to resign.

Mr. Wallace, who declared his intention Monday of keeping up his fight for changes in the conduct of American international affairs, was scheduled to see the president Tuesday or today.

High among the considerations obviously involved in that across-the-deep meeting will be the fact that the United States Congressional elections are only seven weeks off.

Republicans already are making political capital of Mr. Wallace's speech in New York last Thursday and the resulting controversy over it, while Democrats acknowledge privately that they consider the incident their toughest "break" this year.

As for Mr. Wallace, friends represented him as pleased over the results of his initial efforts to make a national issue of the state of American relations with Russia.

In Paris, State Secretary Byrnes maintained complete personal silence on the whole question of Mr. Wallace's demands for a softer policy toward Russia. But there was ample evidence that State Department officials here were considerably disturbed by what they regard as an appearance of American disunity to the rest of the world.

It was understood from top officials that State Department leaders are considering a recommendation to Mr. Truman that any further speeches by Mr. Wallace on foreign policy should at least be subject to State Department clearance.

"Daddy is Back to Work"

(Written by the Rev. H. W. Rogers Tayler, D.D., D.C.L., rector of St. George's Protestant Episcopal Church, Schenectady, N.Y. It appeared in a volume of his poems "Alexandra and Other Poems," issued in the year 1921. Mrs. R. P. Cretney of 10 Grier Street, Belleville, is a niece of the poet and it is from the volume which he presented to her in that year these stanzas are taken.)

Christmas will soon be here, Jim, and things is running low,
With the strike still on and nothing ahead. Will it always be so?
Just as things was coming our way, pleasant and easy like,
You had to throw down your tools and quit; in order to go on strike.

I ain't complainin' a bit, Jim, maybe you know what's best,
Maybe you sort o'felt a call to stand right in with the rest;
But it's going to be mighty hard, Jim, just at this time of year,
When coal is high and there's things to buy for the little kids over there.

I've nearly worked my fingers raw and my back is well nigh broke,
And I know how true the saying is that striking ain't no joke,
I can work all day and most of the night, but it makes my heart most bleed,
To see the children, suffer, Jim, for food which little ones need.

I got some things from the grocer, but he smiled unpleasant like,
When he says, says he, "How long do you think your husband will be on strike?
I felt like flinging the goods in his face, but I thought of the children and you,
For I had to get you something to eat, for you and the children, too.

There ain't much coal to burn, Jim, and when the last is gone,
Do you think the strike will still hold out, that the strike will still be on?
And Christmas a-coming very soon, and Mary, she says to me,
"If daddy stays on strike, mother, won't we have no Christmas tree?"

And I promised little Joe a nice new pair of skates,
And Jennie a little doll's house, with bright red-painted gates;
There's poor little Ben, he feels the worst, for his clothes are almost gone,
But yet how brave he tries to be. Oh, he is the bravest one.

• • •

What's that you tell me? Called it off? Oh, Jim, that's dandy news!
Here, Benny, father is back to work, you can have your clothes and your shoes!
The strike is off! Here Jennie, dear, yours for the house with gates;
And, Joe, when Christmas comes around, yours are the shining skates.

And daddy will buy a Christmas tree, and trim it with tinsel and gold,
For the strike is off, and we need not fear the blast of the winter's cold;
Thank God, thank God, that strike is off, that my Jim is at work again,
Praise God from Whom all blessings flow. Amen, Amen, Amen.

• • •

That night the little ones scampered to bed, and visions of Christmas came
To bless the slumbering childhood that trusts in the Holy Name;
The father who loved his children his duty he would no more shirk
For he heard Ben breathe in his slumbers: "Daddy is back to work."

Russian Regts. Report Denied On Greek Border

London, Sept. 17 — (CP)—Tass news agency today denied reports published abroad to the effect that two Russian regiments had been stationed in Albania along the border of Greece.

In a statement broadcast by the Moscow radio, Tass said:

"The New York Times published the other day a dispatch from its Rome correspondent alleging that two Russian regiments were in Albania, stationed along the Greek frontier, that Saseno Island has been secretly ceded by Albania to the Soviet Union and converted into a big air base, and a number of other false goods.

"Tass has been authorized to state that all these reports are invented from beginning to end and evidently are calculated to justify and cover up provocative actions of Greek Royalist Fascists on the Albanian frontier."

The New York Times reported from Rome last week that Albania had "been steadily concentrating large forces, including two Russian infantry regiments, on the Greek border for the past 2 weeks."

The dispatch, which quoted "very good authority," said Albanian troops were being aided by Russia military advisers and strengthened with Russian planes and armament.

MEN FASTEST ON BRAKES

Columbus, O., Sept. 18—(AP)—Men were .05 of a second faster getting from the accelerator to the brake than were women during drivers' reaction tests conducted at the recent Ohio State Fair. The State Highway Department reported today that more than 1,000 persons were tested on a perception-reaction machine and that males averaged .57 of a second to get on the brake when a red light flashed, while women took an average of .62 seconds.

Diet Therapy Still is Vital Diabetic Treatment

Toronto, Sept. 18 — (CP) — Despite the development of insulin, only known control of diabetes, diet therapy still is vital to successful treatment of the disease, Dr. Frank N. Allan of the Lahey Clinic, Boston, said Tuesday at the sixth annual session of the American Diabetes Association.

Treatment should be based on the standpoint of relieving or preventing the patient's symptoms and of dealing with the underlying disorder, he said.

Dr. I. M. Rabinowitch of McGill University, Montreal, said high carbohydrate-low calorie diet had been proven successful at the Montreal General Hospital's clinic for diabetes.

"We now expect (in the hospital clinic) one patient only in about 3,500 who attend regularly to develop diabetic coma and, of three such cases, only one to die," he said. "We now teach that diabetic coma is inexcusable, except where it is precipitated accidentally by an infection."

Dr. Priscilla White of the New England Deaconess Hospital, Boston, said observation showed abnormalities when pregnancy is complicated by the mother suffering diabetes. Among the physical abnormalities were the large size of the infant, congenital defects and jaundice.

Efforts were being made by dietary measures to reduce fatal deaths. Of 300 diabetic cases at the Deaconess Hospital, 51 fatal deaths and one maternal death had occurred.

"Only one woman in 1,000 in the United States of child-bearing age has diabetes," said Dr. White. The hospital advised against intermarriage of two diabetics or a diabetic and a known hereditary carrier of the disease.

Loud Opposition Against Agreement Of Bretton Woods

By FRANK HODGE

Auckland, N.Z., Sept. 18—(AP)—Opposition to the ratification by the New Zealand Parliament of the Bretton Woods agreement is becoming louder in New Zealand.

Following criticism of the agreement by the leader of the House of Representatives, S. G. Holland, two government backbenchers spoke strongly against ratification. Now a conference of ex-servicemen of the Auckland province has raised its voice in criticism.

Speakers contended that the agreement contravened the principles of the Atlantic Charter.

"We are now in the process of having a gold standard even more severe than in the past imposed upon us," said one delegate, who added that ratification of the agreement would have the effect of removing control of New Zealand's finance from the government and placing it in the hands of people who were aliens.

President A. Postlewaite of the conference said Bretton Woods would provide a dictatorship of international finance, which in the past had been responsible for trouble among nations.

The conference decided to ask the government for a referendum of electors on the subject.

Given 7 Years For Armed Robbery Of Carlisle Bank

Hamilton, Sept. 18 — (CP) — Thirty-four-year-old Victor Brain of Toronto was sentenced by Judge William F. Schwenger Tuesday to seven years in Kingston penitentiary for the armed robbery of the Bank of Toronto at Carlisle last May 23, when $800 was taken.

Witnesses testified that three armed men held up the bank, and Brain, a war veteran who served in Jamaica, was identified as one of the trio by the "laughter lines" on his face.

"If any one of those guns had gone off at the right moment,' Judge Schwenger told Brain, "you might have found yourself charged with a more serious offence, and have been the cause of much grief in the community . . ."

"Your offence is one of the most serious in the eyes of parliament" His Honor said. "Any offence in which there are firearms, are severely frowned upon by our courts."

Brain was identified as one of the gunman by Miss Theresa Hunter, 18-year-old bank teller; J. M. Dick, accountant and son of Crown Attorney Wm. Dick of Halton county; and a woman who saw the trio enter the bank, Mrs. Isobel Bowman, Freelton.

A second man charged, Harry Arones of Toronto, was acquitted on the same charge, but later pleaded guilty to car theft and skipping bail. He was sentenced to 3½ years in penitentiary on the two charges.

Calls For An End Of Retribution For Disarmed Germany

Former P.M. Gives Address At University of Zurich

By ERNEST FISCHER

Zurich, Switzerland, Sept. 19 —(AP)— Winston Churchill called today for "an end to retribution" for Germany once she is stripped of the power to make war, and for French and German partnership in "some kind of United States of Europe."

The wartime prime minister's speech at the university of Zurich was the second within two weeks to cheer the Germans. State Secretary Byrnes of the United States at Stuttgart Sept. 6 advocated speedy establishment of a democratic provisional government for Germany and gave notice that Germany's eastern borders had not been finally determined.

Mr. Churchill made no reference, however, to the foreign policy controversy arising from Commerce Secretary Wallace's recent speech and letter to President Truman on Russia.

After citing Germany's crimes, Mr. Churchill said:

"The guilty must be punished. Germany must be deprived of the power to re-arm and make another aggressive war. But, when all this has been done as it will be done, as it is being done, then there must be an end to retribution."

Mr. Churchill called for a federal government for Germany, saying "The ancient states and principalities of Germany, newly joined together into a federal system, might take their individual place among the united states of Europe."

"There is no reason why a regional organization of Europe would in any way conflict with the United Nations," he declared.

"There must be a spiritually great France and a spiritually great Germany because a United States of Europe would make the material strength of individual nations less important."

Mr. Churchill said the atom bomb was now in the hands of a country (United States) which would use it only for peaceful purposes, but that in a few years it might become the agent of widespread destruction.

The League of Nations did not fail because its principles and conceptions were wrong, he contended, but because the states which created the league had deserted it.

To create a United States of Europe, Mr. Churchill added, "all that is needed is the resolve of hundreds of millions to do right instead of wrong and to take as a reward the blessings instead of the cursings."

"If Europe were once united in sharing its common heritage, there would be no limit to the prosperity, happiness and glory which 300 or 400 million persons would enjoy."

Must Take Lead

Declaring that "We dwell strangely and precariously under the shield and protection of the atomic bomb," Britain's wartime prime minister said Europe needed a regional organization within the United Nations.

"France and Germany must take the lead together," he said. "Great Britain, the British Commonwealth of Nations, mighty America and, I trust, Soviet Russia — for then, indeed, all would be well — must be the friends and sponsors of the new Europe and must champion its right to live and shine."

Mr. Churchill made but the one reference to Russia.

The first step in dealing with "the tragedy of Europe," he said, "must be a partnership between France and Germany. In this only can France recover the leadership of Europe. There can be no revival of Europe without a spiritually great France and a spiritually great Germany."

Quivering Mass

Over wide areas of Europe, Mr. Churchill declared, "a vast quivering mass of tormented, hungry, careworn and bewildered human beings gaze on the ruins of their cities and scan the dark horizon for the approach of some new peril, tyranny or terror. Among the victors there is a babel of voices, among the vanquished a sullen silence of despair."

"That is all that the Germanic races have got by tearing each other to pieces and spreading havoc far and wide," he said, adding "Indeed but for the fact that the great republic across the Atlantic Ocean has at length realized that the ruin or enslavement of Europe has involved their own fate as well, and has stretched out hands of succor and guidance; but for that, the Dark Ages would have returned in all their cruelty and squalor."

Trans-Pacific Flight Completed At Vancouver

By LEE BUTCHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Vancouver, Sept. 19 —(CP)— The forerunner of a fortnightly trans-Pacific service between Sydney, Australia, and Vancouver was completed today as the Australian National Airways' Skymaster "Wagana" settled on the tarmac at the Vancouver airport after a 5,348 mile flight.

The big four-engined plane, carrying 33 passengers and a crew of nine, made the cross-ocean flight in 40 hours and 17 minutes actual flying time with stops along the route at the Fiji Islands, Honolulu and Oakland, Calif.

At the airport, a crowd of 1,000 greeted the passengers and crew, and present were Reconstruction Minister Howe, H. J. Symington, president of Trans-Canada Air Lines, and Mayor J. Cornett of Vancouver.

The inaugural flight was termed "easy and exceptionally good over water," by Cmdr. P. T. L. Taylor, flying superintendent of A.N.A., and pilot.

The passengers included several Australian war brides, and sweethearts of American service men, bound for Seattle.

Capt. Edgar C. Johnston, deputy director of civil aviation in Australia, was aboard the plane on a mission to arrange an agreement with United States authorities for reciprocal landing rights.

Veterans' Housing League Will Stage March to Ask King for Quick Action

Ottawa, Sept. 19 —(CP)— The Veterans' Housing League will stage a "march" to Parliament Hill next Saturday to ask Prime Minister Mackenzie King for immediate action on the housing problem, it was announced at a league-sponsored public meeting here last night.

The league has installed more than 100 persons—war veterans and their families—in vacant army buildings here since it organized its first march to the parliament buildings a month ago.

The meeting approved resolutions for presentation to Mr. King demanding that the government "quit stalling and promising and turn over accommodation for housing units for at least 500 families... and acquire land in Ottawa and area to erect at least 500 veterans homes by Jan. 1."

The league also proposed formation of Citizens' Committee, composed of representatives of the city, the league, veterans' organizations, labor and business to handle the "emergency".

Earlier, a possible move to evict veterans families now occupying Kildare Barracks and an army hut on Porter's Island in the Rideau River was foreshadowed in a report that Deputy Defence Minister Alexander Ross had consulted the Justice Department regarding the proper eviction procedure.

Defence Department officials declined comment on what future action the army might take.

Regarding possible eviction F. E. Hanratty, League President, told the meeting: "They can't shoot veterans and that is the only way they will ever get us out."

Meanwhile, Mayor Stanley Lewis announced that 90 housing units would be created in a former R.C.A.F. Women's Division Barracks at Rockcliffe Airport which had been made available to the city. It is expected 15 units would be ready for use within two weeks.

CANADA URGES TRIBUNAL TO SETTLE DISPUTE

Will Support South Africa's Proposal To Enlarge Free Zone Of Trieste

Paris, Sept. 19—(CP)—Canada today urged the peace conference to establish for the projected free state of Trieste a tribunal similar to the Canadian - American joint commission, designed for peaceful settlement of frontier disputes.

The Canadian delegate, Health Minister Brooke Claxton, said there had been frictions and real conflicts of interests between Canada and the United States during the last century.

"The significant point, however," he said, "is that, to deal with such disputes, the two countries have worked out orderly and judicial processes through the international joint commission."

Mr. Claxton said the Canadian delegation would support South Africa's proposal to enlarge the free zone of Trieste to include Italian communities on the Istrian coast, because of what he said was the predominant Italian population in the area. He reminded the commission that the area now was Italian and not Yugoslav territory.

He spoke after the United States served notice on the Slavic bloc that the four-power agreement on Trieste and the Italian-Yugoslav frontier was "all one decision" which would stand together or not at all.

In reply to Mr. Claxton, the Soviet deputy foreign minister, Andrei Vishinsky, described the South African line as "geographically, ethnically and economically unjust." He accused the South Africans of "trying to revive what is already dead," saying it was the British line previously submitted to the four-power foreign ministers.

Mr. Vishinsky said the British had since abandoned their line to support the French line for the Italian-Yugoslav border.

In expounding the United States' view on Trieste, James C. Dunn, American ambassador to Italy, told the Italian political commission that the American agreement included the creation of a truly free state of Trieste.

"The United States' agreement to one part of that program," he said, "is contingent on the acceptance of all parts of that decision and the creation of real rights and guarantees to assure the free territory's security and integrity."

ABANDON SEARCH

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 19—(AP)— The Coast Guard yesterday announced abandonment of search for 14 persons who are missing after the foundering of the Norwegian tanker Marit II in a storm off the South Carolina coast last Friday. Planes and surface craft searched the seas for hundreds of miles in all directions, but failed to find any trace of the missing men.

Miss Agatha Chapman, Bank Economist, Held On Espionage Charges

Ottawa, Sept. 19. (CP)—Miss Agatha Chapman, economist for the Bank of Canada, was taken into custody today and charged before Magistrate Glenn Strike with conspiring with members of the Russian spy ring operating in Canada to obtain and communicate secret information to the Soviet Union.

The 18th person to be charged as a result of the Royal Commission inquiry into the espionage activity, Miss Chapman had been identified in the final report of the Royal Commission as a partner in the spy ring and surrendered to police headquarters this morning when informed that the Crown intended to prosecute.

Taken before Magistrate Strike, she was arraigned and elected trial by jury. The case was adjourned until next Monday.

Neatly attired in a light blue dress with a black hat and purse, Miss Chapman sat quietly through a roll of routine cases in the drab, Victorian courtroom awaiting her turn before the magistrate.

When her name finally was called, she fidgeted nervously while the clerk recited a lengthy document charging her with conspiring with other Canadians similarly charged and members of the Soviet Embassy to obtain and communicate sketches, models and other information for the Soviet Union.

Her counsel, W. H. Fyfe, K.C., elected trial by jury and after brief discussion bail was set at $2,000.

In its final report, the Royal Commission quoted lengthy extracts from the testimony of some of the spies accused to show that they had met at Miss Chapman's Ottawa home in study groups for discussion of "Communistic writings and teachings".

POWER SHORTAGE MAY RESULT FROM STRIKES

Already Affects Power Commission's Construction Program

Kingston, Sept. 19. (CP)—Present strikes in Ontario industries may ultimately cause a serious power shortage in the province, Dr. T. H. Hogg, chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, said today in an address prepared for delivery at the annual meeting of the Eastern Ontario Municipal Electric Association.

He said shortages of manufactured articles had already affected the Commission's construction program.

"If they continue, the inevitable result will be that the Commission will be unable to complete additional power plants and transmission and distribution facilities in accordance with its carefully planned long term program.

"Although closed factories reduce the demand for industrial power, a settlement of industrial disputes leads to an intensified production program which may cause a tremendous upswing in the demand for power which the Commission may be unable to meet in time. Thus it is quite possible that due to today's production difficulties there may develop in the province in the course of a few years a serious power shortage.

Shortages of supplies had made it necessary for the Commission to curtail rural line extension to a district quota basis, he said.

"In the near future," said Dr. Hogg, "the Commission plans to construct a transformer station at Russell, midway between Ottawa and Cornwall." Elsewhere in eastern Ontario surveys are under way for a 60-cycle, steel-tower line from Stewartville to Barrett Chute and for another line from Barrett Chute to Peterboro and then to Oshawa.

Under consideration was extension to Owen Sound of the Oshawa-Barrie tie-line and construction of a transmission line from Heely Falls to Mountain Lake for possible extension toward Haliburton. The Stewartville development was making progress but was hampered by shortages of materials and equipment.

In this connection the Commission has in mind the possibility that it may be desirable to develop other medium-sized plants on the Madawaska and elsewhere to supply additional power pending the completion of the major development at Des Joachim which it may not be possible to complete before an acute power situation develops.

Some 150 delegates attended the one-day convention.

HARRIS ACQUITTED OF MURDER; CROWD CHEERS

Demonstration Reflects No Credit on the Community Says Judge in Dismissing Accused

Whitby, Sept. 19—(CP) — A spontaneous outburst of applause broke out in the courtroom last evening when the jury foreman announced a verdict of "not guilty" and Lorne Cecil Harris, 23, was acquitted at his second trial for murder in the strangle-slaying of Mrs. Audrey Lyons.

A wild cry of "hurrah" went up and the spectators crowding the courtroom clapped their hands. Mr. Justice G. F. McFarland declared: "That demonstration which has just taken place is a disgrace to the whole system of justice in the Dominion of Canada. It reflects no credit on the community."

Harris had been sentenced to hang at his first trial for the death of the 23-year-old woman whose body was found, strangled with the tops of her own pyjamas, in her home at nearby Ajax early last Nov. 10. The new trial was ordered by the Ontario Court of Appeals on a question of law concerning the judge's address to the jury.

Following the jury's verdict last night after deliberating for 3½ hours, His Lordship said: "I have no comment. Harris, you have been found not guilty. You are free to go."

Harris joined his wife, who had been among those clapping hands in the courtroom, and they left immediately for Toronto.

Suggested Papers "Planted"

His Lordship's charge to the jury drew attention to the defence suggestion that a packet of cigaret papers bearing Harris' signature found on the dead woman could have been "planted." The Crown had argued the cigaret packet was conclusive evidence. The defence argued there were opportunities for it to be placed on the body after the woman was killed.

Steel Strikers Bucked Up by Wage Increase To Western Coal Miners

Toronto, Sept. 19—(CP)—Officers of the United Steel Workers of America (CIO) conducting a wages-hours strike in basic steel plants since July 15, said last night that the grant of a wage increase of 17½ cents an hour to western coal miners this week had strengthened the steel union's determination not to accept an increase of less than 15½ cents an hour before calling off the steel strike. The Toronto headquarters of the U.S.W.A. also said that district director John Mitchell had reported to the National Advisory Committee that the Steel Workers Union in the United States had promised full financial support of the Canadian union.

TRUMAN-IMPOSED GAG SIDELINES HENRY WALLACE

Will Not be Allowed To Discuss Foreign Policy Until End Of Peace Conference

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 19—(CP)— Commerce Secretary Henry Wallace, oratorical hope of the Democratic party in the forthcoming Congressional election campaign, today stepped out of the controversy over United States foreign policy as a temporary presidential gag kept him from making any public utterance until the end of the Paris Peace Conference next month.

But the dispute he started raged unabated inside President Truman's cabinet.

Top administration officials made clear that the compromise truce does not settle any of the basic issues Mr. Wallace raised—either concerning American relations with Russia or the commerce secretary's own future in the cabinet.

Mr. Truman acted swiftly yesterday to make public shortly after he ended his two-hour and 23-minute conference with Mr. Wallace, a joint Army-Navy declaration that the United States has no thought of making war on the Soviet Union.

In the statement War Secretary Patterson and Navy Secretary Forrestal denounced as untrue a Wallace charge that one "school of military thinking" advocates a "preventive war" against Russia before Russia makes atomic bombs.

Yields Temporarily

As for the public debate over relations with Russia which Mr. Wallace began in New York last Thursday, the secretary himself made clear that he had yielded only temporarily to the president's efforts to silence him. Observers believe the temporary truce is to avoid embarrassing Mr. Byrnes in his dealings with Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotov and others at Paris.

If the conference ends on schedule Oct. 15, Mr. Wallace still will have three weeks before the Nov. 5 Congressional elections in which to carry his cause to the American voters. In his New York speech that sparked the controversy, Mr. Wallace advocated softer treatment of Russia, less collaboration with Britain, division of the world into British, Russian and American spheres of influence, and criticized the administration for lack of a realistic foreign policy.

Await Byrnes' Reply

Meanwhile, the capital awaited some indication from Mr. Byrnes whether he is satisfied with the compromise settlement in contrast with Mr. Truman's re-

Hints on Development of New Terror Weapons by U.S. Scientists Given

By ELTON C. FAY

Washington, Sept. 19 — (AP) — More or less cryptic hints of terrifying new weapons of death came from three directions today.

One was tucked away in Commerce Secretary Wallace's controversial foreign policy letter to President Truman — a passing but significant reference to radioactive poison gas.

Another was contained in a radio address by editor-scientist Dr. Gerald Wendt, who spoke of a "super-deadly" poison so potent a single ounce could kill every person in the United States and Canada.

Finally, Maj.-Gen. Alden H. Waitt, chief of the Army's Chemical Corps, frankly acknowledged that his experts have worked with toxic agents that have "power far, very far beyond anything we had known in previous chemical warfare research."

Gen. Waitt's remark to a reporter was a guarded commentary on the address at Schenectady, N.Y., last night by Dr. Wendt, editorial director of the magazine Science Illustrated.

Dr. Wendt said the poison was an innocent- looking crystalline toxin that had been developed by the Chemical Corps.

Discussing the tactical and strategic use of such a weapon, Gen. Waitt asserted that it "has a flexibility the atom bomb does not have — it can be directed against individuals" but he declined to speculate how it could be spread.

The chemical warfare service commander said he preferred to avoid discussion of Mr. Wallace's unamplified reference to radioactive poison gases.

This much is known about radioactivity:

The atomic bomb, in detonating, produces radio-activity, not only at the instant of detonation, but also from the creation of fission products representing roughly the ash of nuclear fission. In itself, this characteristic of the bomb represents one form of poison warfare.

It might be assumed this "ash" could be "bottled" for peaceful use in hospital therapy — or stocked up as the charge for radioactive poison gas bombs.

Five Survivors Seen; Rescue Party On Way to Scene

Search Plane Finds Craft 22 Miles From Gander

Gander Airport, Nfld., Sept. 19 —(CP Cable)— Through densely forested country near 30-mile-long Gander Lake a land search party was pushing its way today toward the wreckage of the crashed Belgian Sabena Airlines C-4 aircraft sighted earlier by a search plane.

Though the crew of the search plane reported it had seen no survivors, coast guard headquarters at New York reported that five survivors were seen near the wreckage. The plane was carrying 37 passengers and seven crew members from Brussels to New York.

Locality where the Belgian aircraft crashed is completely unoccupied country some 22 miles southwest of Gander airport and a few miles south of Gander Lake.

May Take Long Time

Observers believed the inland journey of the search party over the "Trappers' Country" might take at least 24 hours.

Last contact with the Sabena Airlines plane with 37 passengers and a crew of seven aboard was made at 4:37 a.m., A.D.T., yesterday when the aircraft made an instrument approach to the field here.

With a ceiling of about 500 feet the plane flew over the field once and then disappeared.

All available aircraft at Gander scoured the district surrounding the airport yesterday but adverse weather conditions hampered their search.

Today the skies were brilliantly clear in the airport area and searching planes were able to make a thorough coverage of the wooded district near the field.

The plane left Brussels Tuesday night and made a refuelling stop at Shannon Airport, Eire, before heading out over the North Atlantic. It was piloted by Capt. Jean Ester, R.A.F. and Belgian Air Force pilot.

Best Pays Tribute To Laboratory Dogs

Toronto, Sept. 19 — (CP)—Dr. Charles H. Best, co-discoverer with the late Sir Frederick Banting, of the insulin treatment for diabetes, last night told members of the American Diabetes Association that fewer than 25 dogs were used in experiments which led to discovery of insulin. Tribute to the dog and the part it has played in helping mankind through medical science was made in a resolution passed by the Association, which criticized "the misguided efforts of so-called anti-vivisectionists who constantly try to hamper the adstantly try to hamper the advancement of scientific education."

Justice Admits Two Statements Of the Accused

Guelph, Sept. 19 —(CP)— As the trial of William Callahan on a charge of murdering William Norrish was resumed, court officials expressed the opinion Defence Council could conclude testimony today and that a verdict might be reached by this evening.

Crown evidence was concluded late yesterday afternoon after Mr. Justice G. A. Urquhart admitted as evidence two statements by accused.

Callahan was quoted in the statements as saying that he killed Norrish the evening of Mar. 30, after Norrish "got ugly for some reason and threatened to knock my Irish head off."

The statement said Callahan and Norrish quarreled and Norrish must have tripped and fallen to the floor. Callahan was quoted as saying, "I guess I got my Irish up and I took the shovel and hit him on the head."

The statement added that Callahan hit Norrish three times with the shovel knocking him unconscious, then "finished him off" with an axe. That evening the body was buried in a spot where it was later found under the foundation of the house.

Discovery of the body was by police after two sons of Norrish found bits of their father's clothing in the basement.

Toronto, Sept. 19 (CP)—Beer rationing may end in Ontario Oct. 1, the Telegram reported today, adding that one official of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario said that "continued rationing of beer depends on the bottle shortage situation."

The newspaper said a meeting of Brewers and the Brewers' Warehousing Company is being held today and that rationing is so be discussed.

H.&P.E. Regt. To Honor Next of Kin At Picton Reunion

Members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will pay honor to a former commanding officer, the late Lieut. Col. Bruce Sutcliffe who was killed in action, at their second reunion in Picton on Saturday when they will march past a reviewing stand where Mrs. Sutcliffe will take the salute.

This year, former Regimental Sergeant Major Angus Duffy said today, the reunion will be dedicated to the next-of-kin, mothers, fathers, wives and sweethearts who waited and watched through the long years of heartbreaking separation.

With Mrs. Sutcliffe on the reviewing stand will be Mrs. Campbell, mother of the late Major Alex. Campbell and Mrs. Chas. Reed, wife of the late heroic sergeant Reed of regimental fame.

The march-past will take place at the Picton Armouries at 1 p.m. Saturday and the regiment will leave the fall-in place at 12.30.

In the evening the annual general meeting of the Regimental Association will take place and honor to a farmer commanding for the ladies who will form a regimental auxiliary.

On Saturday night a grand ball is being held and on Sunday all personnel of the regiment and other veterans will take part in a Drumhead Service. The service will be held at 2 p.m.

HARRIS ACQUITTED

His Lordship said "The continuation of that (defence council's argument), I suppose, would be that the packet with his name on it had been filched from Harris or that somebody had forged his name. But I wonder how the person forging the signature, if that was the case, would have the opportunity of so familiarizing himself with the signature of the accused as to produce a signature said by an expert to be 'very probably that' of the accused."

His Lordship also asked the jury to consider whether Harris was physically capable of such an attack as the woman suffered; to consider evidence about an encounter between the victim and Carl Linton, a Crown witness, a week before her death, and defence counsel's suggestion that the murder was "a two-man job."

The defence counsel, A. W. Greer K.C., told the jury "This murder was a two-man job. Could any one man have committed this murder? This was a healthy woman with good fingernails. Wouldn't she, before this garment was wrapped around her neck and tied with a square knot have done plenty to defend herself?"

T. J. Rigney, K.C., of Kingston, said the theory of the Crown was that after Carl Linton and his brother had left the Lyons' home with the accused, the accused had returned to the house, Mrs. Lyons then being in the act of disrobing.

Horse and Cattle Display Features Tweed Fair Which Attracts Record Crowd 5,000

A record crowd estimated at in excess of five thousand persons jammed their way into Tweed Agricultural Park Wednesday afternoon to enjoy a splendid show which varied all the way from a top-notch animal display to the ever popular baby show.

It was a good show with the horse exhibit being possibly the best ever to be seen in the fair grounds as practically every horse class in the prize list was well filled. The heavy draught classes were especially good with the showing taking up practically the entire afternoon and the ever-popular horse drawing contest not being completed until long after the supper hour.

Fine Display of Cattle.

The cattle display also ranked with one of the best seen at the fair as the Holstein classes especially were well filled. In addition there was a fine display of Ayrshire cattle by Elmer Wood of Crookston and of Jerseys by Garnet Kerr of Campbellford. These two men swept all prizes in their particular classes. Polled Angus and Shorthorn cattle were also displayed to the interest of those partial to beef type cattle. Leonard Trotter, Madoc, was a heavy winner in Shorthorn.

The horse and cattle barn erected by the fair board last year was used for the first time in its completed state as for last year's fair the barn was not completely finished. Rounding out the livestock show was a fair display of sheep, swine and poultry.

Although the agricultural display was of good variety, possibly the number of exhibits were not up to some former years but practically every type of garden vegetable as well as fall wheat, buckwheat, oats and barley were exhibited. The cheese show with more than a dozen cheese shown created a special corner of interest to the dairy minded farmer.

TAKE 2 — HORE AND G3gf xm

Display of quilts, comforters and other fancy work in the women's department was both interesting and varied while the display of school children's work has its own spot of interest for members of the younger generation.

30 Babies in Contest.

Fair officials were practically swamped with the number of entries in the baby contest with no less than 30 babes in arms and toddlers up to eighteen months being entered in the competition. It took judges Mrs. Bernard Hunt and Mrs. Harold Varty most of the afternoon to arrive at a fair decision. Winners were James Long, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Long of Tweed; Mary Jane Hunt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Hunt of Tweed and Carl Meyers, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Meyers of Sulphide who tied for second position; Catherine Coulter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Coulter and Donald Cotton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Cotton.

The twin special was won by Bernice and Rita Fleming, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Fleming.

And besides the regular fair features there were numbers of special attractions which held the interest of a fair minded crowd. Tommy Mason of Belleville was again in his element in announcing events over the public address system, while Allan Meagher acted as master of ceremonies for a vocal, instrumental and dancing program staged by Mrs. Larry Meaghers' group.

Many Dance Numbers.

Taking part in the program were Arthur Duby with vocal numbers; Bill Navin at the piano; dance number by Barbara Thrasher; dance number by Ronald and Barbara Donovan; Marilyn Corradi, soft shoe dance; Kay McGowan, soft shoe dance; Diane Lee, tap dance, and a song and dance number by three Tweed girls, Margaret McNeill, Diana Champayne and Jeanneatte Forbert.

Stirling band under the direction of band leader Morris Bell filled in between special attractions and provided music during the racing program.

And from a fun standpoint the kiddies were not forgotten as the merry-go-round was well patronized both by the youngsters and oldsters. The Al. Hewitt shows of Winnipeg were also on the grounds with their midway which saw good patronage.

Brothers Win Sawing Contest.

Using a saw which would possibly bring tears to the eyes of an experienced woodsman a brother act of Bernard and Vincent Abrams of Tweed won the log sawing contest with second place being won by Clare Rivers and George Barry, also of Tweed. Bob Goulah and Leo Clement of Stoco won the third slot with Stafford Cassidy and J. Cassidy, also of Stoco, coming in for fourth place.

Race winners were:

Classified:

Guy Worthy (H. Engles) 2-2-1; June Bars (A. Pacey) 1-1; Burlington (A. Pacey) 3-3-2.

Free-for-All:

Grattan Lee (Engles) 1-1-1; Baldwin (T. Roy, Trenton) 3-3-3; Lee Vola (A. Pacey) 2-2-2.

Running race:

I Remember (Boyce) 1-2; Roy Revenge (Boyce); Miss Orland (Sheppard, Codrington) 2-1; My Fancy (Sheppard) 3-4.

Starter: Ross Turley, Frankford.

The list of prize winners for livestock and other contests will appear in a later edition.

Charge of Melon Theft Dismissed

Inability of the complainant to identify the accused as having been seen by him in his melon patch resulted in the dismissal of an attempted theft charge against Bryce Patrick in county police court, Thursday morning.

Patrick was charged with the attempted theft of melons from the patch of Charles Smith, 6th concession Sidney township, but when Mr. Smith was unable to identify the accused as having been seen in his patch the charge was dismissed. Like charges against five other Frankford district men were withdrawn at the request of the Crown.

Appearing on the stand Mr. Smith told of seeing a car pass his place on the night of September 8th. The lights had been turned off and later he had heard footsteps approaching his melon patch.

In company with his hired man, Mr. Smith had seen a man climb through the fence into his melon patch and when the party stooped to pick up a melon he had called. The man then disappeared through the fence and with a party of others had run down the road.

Provincial police had been called by Mr. Smith and following investigations the six Frankford district men had been arrested for attempted theft of melons.

Following presentation of the Crown evidence, Defence Counsel R. D. Arnott moved for dismissal of the case for lack of evidence.

Several traffic cases were listed for the morning court docket which was heard before Magistrate T. Y. Wills with Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan and Assistant Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson sharing in the presentation of Crown evidence.

ported plan earlier to give Mr. Wallace only the choice of shutting up on foreign policy altogether or leaving the cabinet.

Under a barrage of questions as he left the meeting with Mr. Truman, Mr. Wallace said that the president did not raise the question of his resignation.

He added he still stands "absolutely" on his foreign policy speech in New York which marked the public opening of his campaign for a change in American policy toward Russia.

Asked specifically what led to his decision to give up his public campaign temporarily, Mr. Wallace replied: "The fact that I am an honest man." Some who heard this assumed that he meant he preferred silence to having his speeches censored by the White House or the State Department.

As a result of the decision Mr. Wallace cancelled his scheduled speech next Tuesday in Providence, R.I., and also an earlier radio speech which he had planned to make specifically on foreign policy.

Many Well-Known Horses Will Appear at Fair for Races

Government Reply Will be Delayed Two, Three Days

Ottawa, Sept. 19 —(CP)— A Labor Department official said yesterday it may be two or three days before the government replies to latest proposals of the national advisory committee of the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) for settlement of the 11-week old strike in Canadian steel plants. The committee after a meeting Tuesday said the union was prepared to start a back-to-work movement if the steel companies and the government agreed to wage adjustments of 15½ cents per hour.

The proposed wage adjustments are to be made up as follows: 10 cents an hour retroactive to April 1, 1946, as proposed by the government; further wage adjustments of 5½ cents an hour, to be effective from the date of settlement.

The committee also called for adoption of a vacations with pay plan and for submission to arbitration such issues as union security, hours of work and cost-of-living compensations.

The Labor Department official said there appeared to be little difference between the latest proposals and those put forward earlier by the union.

The government was in the position that it could not force arbitration on either side, some company officials had intimated it would not be acceptable.

The government spokesman said the steel strike was different from the situation in the western coal mines, where a strike appeared imminent until the wage agreement granting an hourly increase of 17½ cents was reached yesterday. The miners and the operators will have to apply to the National War Labor Board for authorization of the increase and there appeared to be no reluctance on the part of either side to make the application, he pointed out.

In the steel strike, however, there was a refusal to submit anything to government boards.

WILLING TO NEGOTIATE

Hamilton, Sept. 19 — (CP) — First indication that negotiations may be resumed in the 10-week-old strike at the two Hamilton plants of the Canadian Westinghouse Company Ltd., came last night in a surprise announcement by the company that it is willing to resume negotiations on the wage question if the United Electrical Workers (CIO) reduces its present demand for wage increases from 18½ cents to 15 cents.

BETTER TO REVISE HOURS

Toronto, Sept. 19 — (CP)—Revision of Sunday Church hours to a time that would be better for "all the family," was suggested by Ven. Frederick John Sawers, Archbishop of York at a convocation ceremony in Trinity College Wednesday. He pointed out that few attend evensong at 7 p.m. and said 9.30 would be a better hour.

$5,000 Set As Salvation Army Appeal Objective

Objective of The Salvation Army's 1946-47 National Home Front Appeal now going on is $2,000,000 it was announced by Air Marshal William A. Bishop, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., D.F.C., LL.D., chairman of The Salvation Army National Advisory Board.

"Increasing demands for Salvation Army social service and relief work have made it necessary to raise the objective over the $1,500,000 asked last year," said Air Marshal Bishop.

"In the total sought is money needed for the rehabilitation and expansion of Salvation Army social service facilities. During the war, The Salvation Army concentrated on serving the members of the armed forces, and assisting war victims. The expansion of its work in Canada was largely postponed. Even repairs were put off. Nearly one-third of The Salvation Army's total personnel was engaged wholly or principally on duties having to do with the war.

"Salvation Army efforts for the reclamation of the fallen and for the care and guidance of those in trouble constitute a national service to Canada," said Air Marshal Bishop. "Its mission of succor to erring humanity is worthy of far greater financial support than is asked."

The campaign opened Sunday, September 15, with special services in Salvation Army Citadels across the Dominion. The canvass for funds began Monday, September 16.

Belleville's share is the campaign is $5,000 and all residents are requested to help this humanitarian cause. Greet the canvasser with a smile and some money and assist those who are so ably assisting the less fortunate people of the city and district.

Kiwanis Juniors Win Thrilling 14 Frame Duel With Wrightville To Even Count in Playdowns

Third and Deciding Game Will be Played in Megaffin Stadium, Kingston, on Saturday

In one of the most thrilling baseball battles ever seen in this city, the Belleville Kiwanis Juniors evened their Ontario Baseball Association junior series with the starry Ottawa Wrightville squad when they defeated them at the Alemite Field Wednesday afternoon 3-2 in a stirring fourteen-innings battle.

The teams will settle their baseball differences at the third game which will be played at the Megaffin Stadium, Kingston, on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock.

Belleville was defeated by the classy French-Canadian outfit in Hull last Saturday by a 6-0 score.

It was a game that will live long in the memory of baseball fans here. And over 2,000 of them thrilled and chilled as two gallant teams of youngsters fought tooth and nail for the break that did not come until five innings of overtime had been played.

Reeves' Hit Did It

Then youthful but husky 'Huck' Reeves won the baseball Victoria Cross. With the sacks loaded in the fourteenth innings the stocky young catcher got hold of a fast ball and drove it far over the heads of the crowd scant feet inside the third base foul line. It was a home-run in any man's park, but according to rules and regulations was scored as a single.

"Huck" didn't get any further than second base. The fleet-footed freckled kid was tearing around the base-paths kicking his mates ahead of him when he ran into a shouting, shrieking crowd of fans. Huck pulled up at 2nd and a big grin spread over his sweaty, grimy face as excited fans kissed him, slapped him on the back and finally hoisted him shoulder-high and took him to the dugout where hundreds of other members of the baseball populace awaited him. The kid was literally slap-happy by the time his feet reached the ground.

The game was worthy of two teams of the calibre of the Kiwanis and the Wrightvilles. Two stout-hearted squads went out there and battled tooth and nail behind superb hurling and sensational fielding. It was touch and go after the early innings and the large crowd waited breathlessly on every pitch.

Baseball was sold solidly to Belleville fans out there on the Alemite Field and it is doubtful, if two more efficient salesmen ever "put over" a product than did these sterling youngsters from Hull and Belleville.

Both hurlers, Bobby Bunton, tall righthander for the Kiwanis and Bob Cloutier of Wrightville went the fourteen innings route in the game. Both flingers went all-out in every pitch and it must be said that in the fourteenth innings, Cloutier's error actually paved the way for Reeves' smashing drive that won the game.

Bunton, stouthearted kid that he is pitched with his head and his heart and in those last four thrilling innings with his heart only. He was taken ill on the bench but went out there under fire and gave all he had—and his battery mate came through with the smash that brought the blonde hurler a well-deserved victory.

Bobby Cloutier with his heart almost broken when he walked four men and hit another in the second innings to make a gift of two runs to the Kiwanis steadied down and hurled superb ball until the fateful 14th innings.

The fielding was one of the outstanding features of the game with both infields and outfields turning in sensational performances. Outstanding was the job done by Semark, Belleville rightfielder who pulled down hard hit flies that were ticketed home runs, in sensational catches. The infield, although committing two errors clicked like a wristwatch, and that goes for the Wrightville team as well. It is doubtful, if two more evenly matched teams ever crossed baseball swords here.

It is difficult to pick out an outstanding star on the Belleville team, but from a hitting and fielding point of view dusky young Verny Green deserves an accolade. True he committed an error which did not prove costly but he drove out three of Belleville's six hits and came through with a second-base chore that was little short of sensational. With Dicky Fitzpatrick, the shortstop, the young second base man engineered two sparkling double killings that had the large crowd on its feet.

Equally effective was the defensive play of the losers. The youthful French Canucks are a squad that defensively is one of the best to play here. Their infield did a swell job and their outfielders pulled down drive after drive that zoomed high off the Belleville bats.

Looked Bad in 1st.

In the first innings it looked as though the game was in the bag for the visitors. Bunton was unsteady and the Wrightville sluggers got to him for three of the nine hits he allowed them. Three singles in a row and an error by Bunton sent one run across the plate, but the tall righthander steadied down, struck out the next two batters, and forced the third to ground out.

In the second innings Cloutier developed a streak of wildness that netted Kiwanis a brace of runs. He hit Bush with a fast ball and walked Bud Green and Semark in a row. He struck out Lockyer, then walked Bunton and Verny Green forcing in two runs.

But after that the youngster who is tabbed for a major league team next year was invincible until the fourteenth. He allowed but six hits and struck out seven. Bunton whiffed six and walked but four.

Wrightville tied the score in the fourth innings when Bobby Fortin's triple drove in Bob Cloutier who had singled ahead of him. After that it was all Bunton and the defensive work of his mates.

Both teams had chances to win the game but failed to hit in the clutches. On one occasion Dicky Fitzpatrick attempted to steal home and was caught by a mile.

Verny Green paced the Kiwanis hitting with three singles. "Huck" Reeves got the famous game-winning single-home run. Fitz got a double and Bobby Bunton came through with a single.

Garneau got a triple and a single for Wrightville with M. Fortin coming through with another three-baser.

Action Well Taken

The decision of the council to authorize the Public Utilities Commission to proceed with the installation of new lighting system for the business section of the city is one that is long over-due. Were it not for the window illumination of many of our stores the downtown area would be reminiscent of wartime lighting.

One of the best advertising mediums any city can use is a well-lighted business district. This is particularly true during the tourist season when folks who are stopping here over night like to spend an hour or two viewing the goods on display in store windows. And the merchants can do their share by seeing that their windows are well lighted and merchandise attractively arranged.

Perhaps the best example of this policy can be seen in Syracuse, N.Y., where every store is brilliantly lighted and the street lighting system is exceptionally efficient. In fact some visitors to that pleasant city say it is the closest example to the "Great White Way" in New York City that they have seen. While we cannot hope to do as good a job as has been done over there we are moving in the right direction by making a start. The Mayor and the council are to be complimented for the action they have taken on this matter.

A Lovely Park Needs to be Seen

Perhaps there is a good reason for it but we have wondered why the beautiful park just west of the C.N.R. station is so well-hidden from the travelling public by a number of passenger coaches between it and the main rail lines.

Probably there is no more attractive spot on the line between Toronto and Montreal than this garden but it might just as well be a mile away for all that can be seen from the passenger coaches. Travellers see little enough of the pleasant parts of the centres through which they pass but here is a lovely area that should be exposed to the gaze of all who pass through. It would be good advertising for the divisional management and good advertising for the city. But, then, as we've said before, perhaps there is no other place those coaches can be parked . . .

Weekly Newspapers a Guiding Force

The News Letter of the Ontario Historical Society, a pamphlet which is published quarterly, has a notation to weekly newspaper editors which calls their attention that they should promote interest in the history of their communities. It goes on further to say that nationalism allowed to run wild is a breeder of wars and other evils, a healthy interest in one's country and community undoubtedly enriches the lives of the citizens and provides some community purpose. The Society is well aware that few influences can affect the mental attitude of a community as much as a weekly newspaper, and at the same time must record that the great majority of weekly newspapers in Ontario provide a guiding force for good too seldom realized.

The last portion of the above paragraph contains an arresting thought; weekly newspapers provide a guiding force for good, too seldom realized. Most editors of weekly papers have the welfare of the town in which they live always in mind, and it has been our observation that they do everything in their power to promote the prosperity of the home town and district. Usually they have a leading place in the affairs of their town or village and are well respected members of the community.

The news contents of the weekly newspapers consist almost entirely of reports of local events and this results in a closer bond between the editor and publisher, generally the same person, and the residents amongst whom he lives that is not too common in larger newspapers of cities and metropolitan centres. While the publisher of the latter may be just as interested in his city he knows fewer people by reason of his environment and for that reason lacks some of the common touch that the weekly editor enjoys.

People living in the smaller towns in Ontario are as well informed these days on current affairs as those living in the cities for they have their daily newspapers and radios but to a large extent are dependent on their home newspaper for news of events in the community. In these circumstances the country editor is well aware of his responsibilities, and lives up to them.

We know that most country editors are quick to espouse causes for good and are equally quick to reject the spurious. For that reason we agree with the sentiment as expressed in the News Letter, that the weekly newspapers are not given the credit for the good they do in their communities. Freedom of the press is safe in their hands for they have the sense and good judgment to use it for the common good and not to promote causes that are alien to the interests of their fellow citizens. We are glad to be able to pay our tribute to this group of fine men. They have earned a high place in the respect of all who know them.

Edict on Skirts

The National Wool Growers' Association has asked the Civilian Production Administrator to permit the lengthening of skirts by two inches. Administrator John D. Small has said no—on the ground that this lowering of the hem line might cost the national economy 50,000,000 yards of fabric a year.

Frankly, we haven't noticed any standard skirt length to begin with. We think the ladies are somewhat circumventing Administrator Small. On the other hand, we doubt that there would be a rush to lengthen skirts even if the wool growers did get their way.

Our opinion is that the whereabouts of the hem is dictated entirely by such things as the prevalence of nylons, the mechanics of getting in or out of automobiles and particularly the contour of the individual's lower extremities.

—Detroit Free Press.

"Reverend" Deaconesses

The title of "the Reverend," a distinctive dress, and recognition as "an ordained member of the parish staff" is among the important changes in the standing of the Order of Deaconesses in the Church of England which have been decided upon by the Anglican bishops.

In its modern form the order dates from 1862; it has some four hundred members, mostly employed in parish work among women and children. While a life-long vocation is usually expected at the time of ordination, there is no vow of celibacy and no marriage bar. The minimum age for ordainment is twenty-five.

The new provisions will allow them to read the services of morning and evening prayer, to preach at any service except holy communion, and to baptize in the absence of the minister.

—Manchester Guardian.

Motor Cars Show Endurance

Many a car owner, still waiting in vain for a new auto, is being continually surprised by the endurance of the old one. Before the war, 40,000 was considered to be pretty high mileage on an automobile and when that figure was reached on the mileage dial most owners were in the market for a new one. Today 100,000 is not exceptional mileage for an auto of pre-war vintage and vehicles that have travelled that much and more are still going strong. Of course, such cars have to be checked often and closely for safety reasons, says Boston Post.

FIRST BABY

When the first wee baby comes
All the house with gladness hums.
Those who love it, near or far,
Instantly promoted are.
Who was husband, who was wife,
Will be Pa and Ma for life;
Who was father down the years
As a grandpa then appears.

Kin, with that first lovely cry,
Put their time-worn titles by.
Some old bachelor, dour and glum,
Promptly uncle has become.
Sisters, one or two or three,
Henceforth aunts will always be;
Two sweet women, both on hand,
Add to mother one word: "grand."

It may be with heart elate
One achieves the title "great!"
Children playing round about
To the neighbors all may shout,
(Not quite understanding how)
We are changed to cousins now.
Thus, by names that babe bestows,
Happier every family grows.

Belleville seems to be on the up grade now, sure enough. After passing through her time of trial she seems now to discern the silver lining to the cloud. As a property owner said recently: "If a man had known four years ago that real estate in Belleville was going to advance the way it has recently, what a lot of money he could have made." which reminds us that most of us would be rich and clever if our foresight were only half as good as our hindsight.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Who was the first American admiral?

Up to the time of the Civil War the highest rank in the American navy was that of captain.

On July 16, 1862, Congress authorized appointment of nine rear admirals. David Glasgow Farragut, the hero of the naval battle of New Orleans, was the first rear admiral appointed.

In 1864 Congress authorized appointment of a vice admiral from the rear admirals. Farragut, the hero of the battle of Mobile Bay, was the first vice admiral appointed.

In 1865 a bill was passed making Farragut admiral and authorizing appointment of one vice admiral. David Dixon Porter was appointed to the altter rank.

When Farragut died in 1870 he was succeeded as admiral by Vice Admiral Porter and Stephen Clegg Rowan was then appointed vice admiral. In 1875 Congress provided that the ranks of admiral and vice admiral should not be filled by promotion and should be abolished upon the death of Amdiral Porter and Vice Admiral Rowan.

There were no more full admirals in the U. S. Navy until 1899, when Congress authorized the President to appoint "An Admiral of the Navy." George Dewey, the hero of the battle of Manila Bay, was appointed and was "Admiral of the Navy" until his death in 1917, when under the law the rank and title ceased to exist. In 1915, however, the commander-in-chief of the Atlantic, Pacific and Asiatic Fleets had been given the rank of admiral while on duty. The next year the Chief of Naval Operations was given the temporary rank and pay of admiral, and in 1917 the top Fleet commanders were given the pay as well as the rank of admiral while on duty. Since then there have been many men who have held the temporary rank of admiral.

Farragut was the first rear admiral, the first vice admiral and the first full admiral in the United States Navy.

"Admiral" is believed to be of Arabic origin and it is an interesting coincidence that the first American admiral could speak Arabic fluently. Farragut also spoke Spanish, Italian and French.

It is supposed that "admiral" is a shortened and corrupted form of "Amir-al-bahr," commander of the sea. "Amir" or "Ameer" (English "Emir") is still a title of nobility in some Arabic countries. Apparently the French and English forms of "admiral" were influenced through confusion with Latin "admirabilis," admirable. The first admirals were appointed in England and France in the latter part of the 13th century. Republican America refused to adopt the title for more than 85 years on the ground that it smacked too much of monarchy.

Boyce Convicted On Murder Count

London, Sept. 19 — (CP)—Arthur Robert Boyce, 45-year-old house-painter, today was convicted of murder and sentenced to death in the slaying of Miss Elizabeth McLindon, pretty London housekeeper for the Greek Royal Family.

Miss McLindon was found shot to death June 14 in a Chelsea mansion she was preparing for occupancy by Princess Catherine, sister of Greece's King George II.

Defence Counsel Derek Curtis Bennett had pictured Miss McLindon as a "girl of many lovers" and said that Boyce was the "reigning lover" at the time of her death.

Miss McLindon's body was discovered in a chair by a telephone, shot through the back of the head with a .32 automatic pistol.

Vancouver, Sept. 19—(CP) — Chief Justice Wendell B. Chief Justice Farris gave Ruth Ellen Elizabeth Moring and Roy Chester Barkley until Oct. 18 to show why Barkley should not pay $5,000 damages to the husband, Herbert James Moring, a returned soldier.

KEEP THOSE CALORIES OUT OF YOUR HAIR

The basic health diet as outlined here last Tuesday yields more than 2000 calories a day.

A man lying quietly in bed and not using any energy even to sit up, feed himself or turn over, requires only 1,700 calories a day (basal metabolism); a woman 1,300. Basal metabolism means the amount of energy (number of calories) required to keep the vital functions going (breathing, heart beat, circulation, digestion, excretion, body temperature) during complete rest and sleep.

It takes how many glasses or pints of milk, therefore, to prevent failure of the vital functions in a woman who lies quietly at rest all day and night, asleep one-third of the time? A glassful (8 fluidounces, one-half pint) of milk yields 160 calories, a pint 320 calories. I never guarantee my arithmetic, but as I compute it, a man and wife, keeping well under the covers and not moving about or using energy in any way, would have to consume altogether at least a gallon of milk each twenty-four hours to keep warm and alive.

So, you see, the purest, richest, finest fresh milk is hardly "fattening," as so many imagine —in order to gain any size or weight on milk you'd have to lie about or sit on your ischial tuberosities 24 hours a day and drink not less than three quarts of milk a day.

In the pamphlet "How to Gain Weight" (ask for it in writing and inclose stamped self addressed envelope) I say: "Any one who will take a pint of milk with a slice of plain or whole wheat bread and butter, with or without sugar, each night at bedtime, will gain 20 pounds in a year." But that is in addition to the ordinary diet, and milk isn't the half of it.

A calory or calorie, unit of measurement for the fuel or nutritive value of foods, is the amount of energy in the form of heat required to raise the temperature of a gram of water one degree Centigrade.

A teaspoonful of sugar, molasses, honey, syrup, corn-starch or ice cream contains 30 calories, more or less. In other words a teaspoonful of any of these foods, when oxidized in the body, yields that amount of energy, which may be expended in muscular work, play or exercise or converted into fat and stored in all the well known places as reserve fuel.

This reminds me of the interesting observation made by a young woman recently returned from service in the military government in Okinawa. "I saw most of the 300,000 inhabitants of that island and all of the 12,000 natives of nearby Kume Shima," she says, "and I never saw a fat one. They get plenty of iodine in their fish and sea weed." So this young woman writes in for instructions for taking iodine. Instructions are given in the "Iodin Ration" pamphlet available on written request, if you provide stamped self addressed envelope. There may be a good deal of truth in the young Wave's (or is she perhaps a Spar?) observation, although no doubt Okinawa natives are not so lazy, indolent and inactive as Americans are.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Dry Cleaning

I work in a dry cleaning plant, operating a machine which uses carbon tetrachloride as cleaning solvent. Sometimes it makes me feel nauseated. Will it have permanent harmful effects?

(W. H. C.)

Answer — In cleaning plants where there is good ventilation such workers rarely suffer impairment of health. For your own protection it is a good rule to stop work whenever the exhaust or fan ventilation equipment fails. Breathing air containing considerable carbon tetrachloride vapor — as when the liquid is sprayed from a fire extinguisher — produces nausea, headache, torpor, itching eyelids, loss of equilibrium, twitching of muscles, helplessness and finally loss of consciousness.

Whitehall Notebook

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 19 —(CP)—(by mail) Publication of a new book has jogged the memories of Labor party veterans about an old question: "Is Victor Grayson dead?"

For Grayson, who went to college at the same time as Ellen Wilkinson, minister of education, and Lord Woolton, former minister of food, once was talked of as a future prime minister who would lead a Socialist government.

In 1920 he left a half-finished drink in a London hotel and disappeared. Since then there has been much speculation about the fate of this first Socialist member of parliament as about Ambrose Small, the Toronto millionaire who vanished as mysteriously in 1919.

As far as Scotland Yard officers recall, the last inquiry as to the whereabouts of Grayson was undertaken in 1942 at the request of a sister living in the Danforth district of Toronto.

Grayson was less than 40 when he vanished but he had made himself famous. He was elected in 1907 as a Socialist and attracted even his political critics with his fine delivery.

His oratory did not save Grayson from defeat in 1910, and to earn a living he went on a lecture tour.

He was seriously wounded in 1918 but after the First Great War resumed political activities. His domestic life was shadowed by the death of his wife, the former Ruth Nightingale, an actress.

At various times since 1920 former associates of Grayson have thought they recognized him in London but they have never been sure.

Reg. Groves is the author of the latest book on the case, "The Mystery of Victor Grayson." After studying all the evidence, Mr. Groves concludes there is no proof that Grayson is dead and other indications from Europe and America suggest that until recent years he was alive.

Noble Objection: Lord Piercy, created a peer by the Labor government last year, does not approve of the House of Lords but obediently became a member when his party requested. Faithfully, he followed the ancient forms set out for a man about to take his place in the Upper House and his behavior in its sessions has been exemplary.

But one thing he will not do is to take a coat of arms as is usual with persons given a title. With stamp duty, fees to designers and the like the cost is more than £100 ($400) and this is an expense Lord Piercy gladly avoids.

Wallace and Columnist Squabble Over Letter

Washington, Sept. 19 —(AP)— Commerce Secretary Wallace said yesterday he is happy to take columnist Drew Pearson's word that the latter obtained a copy of Mr. Wallace's foreign-policy letter to president Truman from sources outside the commerce department.

"I will be interested in knowing where he did secure the letter," Mr. Wallace said in a brief statement.

To that Mr. Pearson commented:

"Mr. Wallace must know that newspaper men's sources are confidential."

The exchange was precipitated when Mr. Wallace's office released the letter generally—over Mr. Truman's opposition—yesterday with this preface:

"In view of the fact that a copy of Secretary Wallace's letter of July 23, 1946 to the President was filched from the files and is in the hands of a newspaper columnist, the secretary of commerce is today releasing this copy of the letter."

Mr. Pearson promptly threatened Mr. Wallace with a libel suit.

The Daily Mirror went from eight to 16 pages. The Herald Tribune remained at 12 pages.

Two of Soviet Union's Big Canals Back in Service

(Written for The Canadian Press)
By LEV LAVRINOVICH

Moscow, Sept. 19—(CP)—Two of the Soviet Union's big canals, wrecked by the Germans during the war, now are back in service.

One is the White Sea-Baltic ship canal, cutting almost 3,000 miles from voyages between Leningrad and Archangel through a 375-mile seaway opened in 1933.

The other is the Dnieper-Bug canal, connecting the Black Sea and the Baltic, which was almost destroyed during the German occupation. Nine flood gates, five dams and five locks had to be rebuilt and five locks repaired.

When German and Finnish troops invaded Russia the White Sea - Baltic canal became a line of defence at which the Red army stopped the enemy. Artillery fire and bombing destroyed locks and dams, flooding entire towns.

Even before the war ended, restoration work began for the waterway was vital to operation of pulp and paper mills, sawmills, brickyards and factories which its construction had attracted. The first lock was operating by early last July and now full navigation has been resumed.

TO SET DATE MONDAY

Ottawa, Sept. 19 —(CP)— The date will be set next Monday for the trial of William M. Pappin, Ottawa passport office clerk, on three charges arising from an alleged attempt to issue a false passport for use by a Russian agent seeking to enter Canada.

At conclusion of a preliminary hearing here Tuesday Magistrate Glenn Strike decided the Crown had presented sufficient evidence to commit Pappin for trial and indicated formal committal and announcement of the trial date would be made Monday.

Last night Det. Sgts. George Holmes and Adolphus Payne spotted a car with a piece of eavestrough missing. They arrested Walter Crosmaz, 35, on a charge of theft.

WEDDINGS

CAMPBELL—WILKINSON

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Wilkinson, Tweed, Ont., was the scene of a very pretty wedding on the afternoon of Saturday, Sept. 14, when their only daughter, Lois Ottaleen, became the bride of John Edwards Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Campbell, Edmonton, Alta.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. L. Sisco, B.D., before the fireplace, which was banked with baskets of gladioli, Fall flowers and ferns. Entering the living room on the arm of her father, to the strains of Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin, played by Mr. Fred Porter, the bride was radiant in a traditional gown of pale ivory slipper satin, fashioned with fitted torso, silk net yoke, and long sleeves, ending in points at the wrists, her full skirt sweeping into a short train. A full length veil of silk net was caught to the head with a satin halo headdress. She carried a bouquet of Better-time roses and baby's breath.

Little Miss Linda Wilkinson was her aunt's only attendant, looking winsome in a floor length dress of pale blue taffeta, trimmed with ruffles, and carrying a basket of snapdragons and sweetpeas.

After the ceremony the bride's mother received wearing a gown of fuchsia satin with a corsage of American Beauty roses. The groom's mother, who assisted wore a gown of purple and mauve crepe and a corsage of pink roses.

In the dining-room the table, centred with a beautifully decorated cake, was attractive with a lace cloth, tall white tapers in silver holders and bouquets of sweetpeas. During the serving of a buffet luncheon to about thirty relatives and close friends of the bridal couple, Mrs. Joseph Emerson, aunt of the bride, poured tea. The young ladies acting as serviteurs were Misses Roselyn and Beth Robertson, Enid Dawson and Joan Connor.

The bride chose for travelling, a black dress with lime and cherry trimming, a cherry colored coat with silver trimming, black accessories, and a corsage of Talisman roses.

After a motor trip through Algonquin Park, to Muskoka and Huntsville, the young couple will take up residence on Apple Grove Ave., Toronto.

Mitchell sang.

Given in marriage by her brother, Raymond Francis, the bride wore a gown of white satin with lace insets in the bodice. Her veil of English embroidered net was caught with white daisies and she carried crimson roses.

Miss Rebecca Francis, as her sister's bridesmaid, wore pale pink sheer and carried yellow roses. The flower girl, Miss Gail Harrison, wore pink taffeta and carried a nosegay of mixed flowers.

Charles Martin was groomsman and ushers were Kenneth Carroll and Eugene Wright.

The reception was at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Francis wearing mauve flowered silk and corsage of roses. The groom's sister, Mrs. L. McKay, Kenora, was in old rose.

For travelling to Nova Scotia, the bride donned a tailored suit of grey wool with black accessories. They will return to Picton to reside. The groom formerly served in the army.

Miss A. Nicholson Honored by Staff

Fine friendship and good fellowship walked the halls of The Ontario Intelligencer building, Wednesday afternoon, when representatives from every department gathered in a group to express regrets and extend good wishes to one of their number, Miss Ann Nicholson; regrets for the severance of congenial business associations, and good wishes for the future.

Serving in the capacity of a very successful social editor during the past year, Miss Nicholson has won the esteem of all the members of The Ontario Intelligencer staff. She is now severing her connection with the paper to enter Queen's University in the near future. On behalf of the staff Miss S. "Light-Tone" Furs Make Headline Fashion News

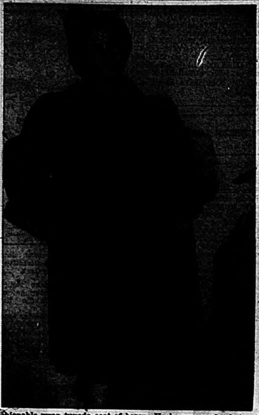
Lovely, lovely "light-tone" furs — definitely the biggest news in furs for Winter '46! In fact, it's the biggest news ever in the fur fashion world! Breathtakingly flattering and excitingly new, these new light-tone furs combine glamour with practicability because they are wonderfully fashionable as they are wearable and versatile.

Originally introduced in such luxury furs as mink, sable and platina fox, their adaptation for popular-priced furs is another tribute to the skill, artistry and talent of the American designers and furriers. Underscored for big success, you'll see new beautiful ash-blonde blends in your favorite mink muskrat in lovely shades from pale honey to deep rich beige tones. Silver-blue or platine muskrat, light-toned and silvery, is expected to be another big favorite. Mouton lamb and golden seal are other ash-blonde stars. Also following the important trend to "light" furs are let-out Australian oppossum and platinum sealskin, platine dyed fox — excellent examples of light gray tones. Even spotted furs such as natural blonde spotted cat. South American ocelot, spotted skunk and leopard stencilled marmot show this new light look. These furs, along with Australian oppossum and mouton lamb are underscored for big success with college and career girls. Superbly styled into 36-inch coats, these furs are smart, warm, flattering—wonderfully fashionable and budget priced!

Silhouette Stars 36" Coat

Because it is young and smart, because it fits the mood of formal or tailored costumes, the 36-inch fur coat bids fair to take top fashion honors this season. Very popular last year, it is expected to be the No. 1 fur coat silhouette for Winter '46! Designed with luxurious swing back, deep turn-back cuffs, smooth collarless back necklines with convertible tuxedo fronts, the 36-inch fur coat is definitely fashion's favorite. The fur silhouette is easy and luxurious. Backs have a graceful full flare often achieved by circular shoulder yokes from which deep pleats fall. Soft details also lend a dressmaker feeling to shoulders either with pleats, gathers, shirring or front saddle shoulder treatment. The cardigan collar with convertible tuxedo facing is the most favored neckline of all, achieving that fashionable elegant look. Sleeves are definitely new and news! Distinctly new are "bloomer" and "bishop" sleeves. The "bloomer" sleeve (also described as the balloon sleeve) is fitted at the wrist with elastic or a band so that it can be worn pushed-up style. The "bishop" sleeve is made with buttoned cuff to hold the fulness snugly at the wrist, and lends a high fashion flavor. Of course it is so luxurious looking and smart, the cuffed mandarin sleeve will continue to be the most important of all with the newest version of it wider at the wrist and finished with a deep turn-back cuff.



Fashionable wrap tuxedo coat of brown Hockanum suede cloth with luxurious muskrat tuxedo and cuffs. Hat by John Fredericks.

Furs for Every Budget

College or career girl, suburban wife or busy matron, there are smart sturdy furs priced to fit every budget. And because regardless of price, a fur coat is a many-season wardrobe investment in beauty, warmth and wear, it should be chosen carefully with an eye to lasting style and wearability. Heading the list of budget furs is good looking mouton lamb, fashionable as it is warm and sturdy. Beautifully blended to resemble rich beaver and wonderfully flattering, mouton lamb is slated for big success with college and career girls as well as busy matrons. Designed with popular tuxedo front and deep turn-back cuffs, its versatility and smartness make it perfect for casual or dress wear. Silver-dyed raccoon (again the light-tone trend in furs!) is another wonderful choice for a smart fur coat that can take it. Seal-dyed coney, mink or sable-blended coney are other excellent budget furs. As for the dressier-type furs that are inexpensively priced, black persian paw is a big favorite. If you prefer a light-tone fur, South American grey dyed-lamb is a marvelous choice. Of course these are just a few highlights in the budget fur world — do see the entire collection of them at your favorite shop today.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

To Give a Large Wedding Anniversary Reception in Their Home City

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. My husband and I were married during the war. We had hoped to have a large wedding and reception, but "orders" made this impossible, and we had only the smallest of receptions in New York when our wedding took place before my husband was sent overseas.

Next month we will have our second wedding anniversary, and to celebrate it I have a plan about which I would like your help. Since we do not live in our home city, I still haven't met all his relatives, nor he mine, and I am wondering if it would be proper for us to have a large reception on the date of our second anniversary, in a suite in a hotel in our home city. Would you approve of this?

2. I would like to wear an evening gown, if this is proper. How would this affect what the guests will wear?

3. How would the invitations be worded? And should I sent one to his parents and to mine, or just invite them verbally?

4. Should there be a receiving-line? Our parents have met, but my parents don't know most of my husband's relatives.

5. What should be served? And may we have a wedding cake?

S. S.

1. Yes, I heartily approve of this plan for celebrating your second wedding anniversary, and you might incorporate in this reception, many of the features you had planned to have at your wedding reception.

2. If you plan to wear an evening gown you will indicate that your party is to be on the side of formality (which is, of course, quite proper, if you wish), and then all your other plans should be an the formal side. Your invitations would then indicate a degree of formality, and the guests would dress according to the indication of the invitations.

3. Under these circumstances and if you wish to register some formality in your invitation, it may read:

1944—1946
Mr. and Mrs. John Alden Smith request the pleasure of your company at the Second Anniversary of their marriage
Tuesday, the first of October at nine o'clock
in the Rose Suite if the Park Hotel
R.s.v.p.
(Give your address here)

The parents of each would be invited orally first; then an engraved invitation would be sent.

4. There may be a receiving-line, if you wish, perhaps including those you would have had at the wedding reception you planned: first, you and your husband, as hosts; then your mother and father, your husband's mother and father, and last, perhaps your attendant. In this way your parents would be in a position convenient to receive the introductions to your husband's relatives.

5. For the menu you should consult with the maitre d'hotel or whoever makes the party-arrangements in that hotel: he will make various menu-suggestions at a certain price per guest. And yes, you may have, and I think should have, an anniversary cake, which should be similar to a bride's cake (a white cake, white-frosted). On this may be the dates (1944-1946), the initials of each; the cake may be as elaborately decorated as you wish; and you, the "bride" cut the first peace and share it with your husband, the "bridegroom", as you would have done at the wedding reception.

Fashion Flashes

ROOMINESS, making for ideal travel use, marks many of the ne walligator bags. Brown, red, green or blue alligator is used for a handsome number, a boxy model shaped like a book, the top rounded. It opens wide from the centre, with the concealed frame legs reaching to the base of the bag at the sides.

It is noted that the world "stylish" has returned to describe the new afternoon frocks. Out of fashion for about three decades, the word surely does describe the elegance and richness of the new fashions.

Just the thing to go with a mid-calf length dinner-and-dance frock is a petite bonnet of white ermine trimmed with tiny green ostrich plumes held by white velvet bows.

The scarf dance weaves in and out of the new modes. A sweeping scarf lines gives a symmetric drape to a smart cocoa-brown crepe frock. It gives a half-cowl effect at the left, sweeps to the right shoulder and drops down over the skirt at front to a point below the hemline. Softly shirred skirt is held by a wide self belt trimmed with gold kid and nailheads.

A good foil for separate furs and smart accessories is the finely detailed unfurred coat, so important this season. Beige wool is used for a coat trimmed on one side of the bodice with trapunto scrolls outlined with tiny beads. Drop shoulder seams, deep armholes, tiny turn-back cuffs on wide sleeves, and small turn-over collar add to the smart effect.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Can She Recapture An Old Love?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Five years ago I was going with a man of fine character, but, at that time, there were no serious thoughts between us. He left for college and later went into service, and we corresponded only seldom.

Since then, I fell in love with another man who is a friend of the family. He told me he loved me and I believed him. But now he's changed and says he no longer loves me, but somehow, I can't believe it.

Now my friend of five years ago has returned and proclaimed his love for me, and says he wants to marry me immediately. I feel as if he is the right one and I do love him, but I can't seem to erase the memory of my other love. Until I find a solution, I won't feel right in saying yes to his proposal. I have tried desperately to forget the other one, but it seems hopeless and somehow I believe he really loves me, as we were so close at one time.

"Hopeful"

I wonder if you are not deluding yourself when you say you believe that this second man really loves you. As a rule when men tell a girl they don't love her, they mean it.

Since you feel the man of five years ago is the right one, and that you love him, I shouldn't think you would have any hesitation in saying yes.

Certainly I wouldn't try to revive a romance that has obviously died. It is only natural that one should remember a past romance, but that doesn't mean it should be given precedence over the real thing. Why not simply close the book on a love interest that's over, and be glad you have another to take its place?

Shall She Try to Disentangle Him From His Mother's Apron-strings?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 24, and very much in love with a man of 25. He has been in service, and has been discharged for some time now.

While he was overseas, he asked me to marry him when he got home, but when he reached home he never said anything about it. I very seldom saw him after he came home. Now we don't see each other at all.

I believe his mother has quite a bit to do about it. When he gets home from work, she tells him to stay home, or if he goes anywhere, she wants to know where he's going. She's got him practically tied to her apron-strings.

Shall I go on loving him the way I do, or what? I love him a great deal, but don't know if he care for me. Do you think I ought to call him up, or forget him?

P. D.

I don't quite see how you can be in so much doubt as to whether or not this man cares for you, P.D. Since he apparently makes no effort to see you, and has never referred again to his suggestion, while overseas, that you marry, it seems fairly oobvious that his feelings have changed. You don't want to run after him and try to hang on to a man who's indifferent to you, do you?

And why would you want such a "Mama's boy" anyhow? There's never anything but trouble for the girl who marries one.

My own opinion is that you're much better off without such a chap, and I'd advise you to put him out of your mind completely.

Shall She Do Housework for a Man Living Alone?

Dear Mrs. Fairfax:

I am a middle-aged woman and do housework for a living. I have been offered a job doing parti-time housework for a man who lives alone.

In order to do this job, I would have to be alone with this man for hours at a time. Do you think this would be all right?

Eleanor B.

I assume that you have seen and talked with your prospective employer. Weren't you able to form an opinion as to what type of man he is?

A great many women do housework for men living alone, and there is no reason it would not be proper for you to do so. If you are completely business-like about the job, do your work and then leave promptly, I don't see why you shouldn't make out successfully. If you find things not going well, you can always quit.

Her Boy Friend is Trying to Play John Alden

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl in my late teens, and I like a boy who for a while seemed to like me.

Then he got the impression that I liked a boy with whom I'm very good friends and that this other boy liked me. Now he is trying to fix me up with this boy, although he knows I still like him and he has admitted to one of my friends that he likes me.

How can I convince him that I don't like the other boy, and get him back?

Mixed-Up

You really are mixed up, aren't you? But I don't believe it should be so very hard to un-mix this situation.

Why not just tell your boy friends to stop "trying to fix you up" with the other boy? Suggest to him —not in any quarrelelsome fashion, but in a gay, casual way—that you'd prefer to manage your own affairs. Can't you say: "Hey, you Who do you think you are—John Alden? Well, I'm no Priscilla, so just lay off!" Something like that. Make a joke of it.

You don't have to explain that you're more interested in him than in the other boy. But if he understands that you're not serious about anyone else, then he may realize that he has a clear path to your affections if he wants it. And that's about all you can do,

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

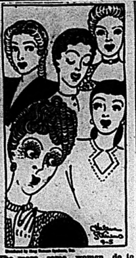
Play Your Cosmetic Tricks Cleverly

It sometimes happens that the more a woman does to make her complexion attractive, the worse she looks. She puts on so much powder that it accents lines, if she has any. She is lavish with the rouge compact, has never bothered to find out whether her factory blush should be placed high, low or in the middle. She goes all out with the lipstick, pins her faith to a vivid hue that may make her ski nlook sallow. She applies mascara and lid shadows until her eyes look like two burnt holes in a blanket, the poor misguided dear.

Her make-up code: "If a little is good, more is better, so I'll shoot the works." You see her evrey day. You get a fleeting glimpse of her and her face is so lithographic you pause to take a second look, wondering if she is wearing a mask. Well, if that makes her happy—

Here comes another type. The make-up slicker! Just enough powder to give the soft, velvety finish. A ghost of a blush, up high, bringing out the sparkle of the eyes. Lipstick of rich, dark crimson, suggestive of natures coloring. No eye shadows. She wouldn't be caught dead with them on before seven o'clock in the evening. She uses make-up; the other one abuses it. She also uses her head .eHr survey in the mirror is keen and critical.

Make-up can be ruined by a wrong choice of powder, rouge and lipstick tints, also by wrong application. Don't forget, there are pitfalls ahead when you are wandering along the beauty way. Be observing ,and ayou will avoid them. Make experiments. Do not be afraid to make radical changes; you may have got off to a wrong start in the first place.



The more some women do to make complexions attractive the worse they look

If you are using a powder foundation, be stingy. Put it on too lavishly and the skin will be caked. If too much is used, its purpose may be deefeated and your face will shine. Fluff on powder lightly, a little at a time. If you wham the pad over your complexion, you may not be able to remove the surplus powder evenly. The results may be spotty. Addition is safer than substraction.

It is not easy to use the rouge compact so that the edges of the application will do a fade-away. The secret is in blending. Use a special pad for the purpose of thinning the rouge film where it unites with the powder. Those round red blobs on the cheeks are sometimes pretty terrible. Often they don't match, one being higher than the other, or one being of deeper tint than the other.

If you use a cream rouge, put it on in little dots, then bring them together with light friction. Cream rouge sticks better than compact rouge. You won't have to make yourself a new face every few hours.

LARGE QUANTITY BRANDY STOLEN

Paris, Sept. 18 (Reuters) — Police from the French brandy town of Cognac, near the western port of La Rochelle, today were investigating the theft of nearly $3,000,000 worth of brandy. They made seven arrests.

36,000 MEAT STORES CLOSE

Chicago, Sept. 18 (AP)—Lack of fresh meat since retail price controls were re-established in the United States Sept. 9, has resulted in the closing of at least 36,000 American butcher shops, says the National Association of retail meat dealers.

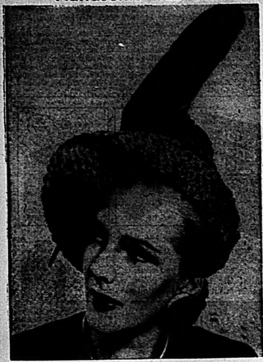
Handsome Suit Hat



By ALICE ALDEN

All is not fuss and feathers when it comes to fall millinery. There are smart but simple suit hats awaiting your inspection, hats of interesting design, strikingly accented, yet essentially simple. Lenesta is responsible for this well-handled hat, a swagger profile made of crocheted chenille. It's made in the neutral "smoky blonde" shade and is pierced by an oversized black quill. Emerald green belting ribbon is added to make a nice color combination.

May Produce Persian Lamb

Sydney, Australia, Sept. 19 —(CP)— Persian lamb, one of the luxuries of the fur trade, may soon be produced in Australia, according to experts investigating the possibility of introducing the karakul into this country. Persian lamb is a fashion favorite with Australian women, and karakul, from which the pelts are obtained, thrive in semi-desert country.

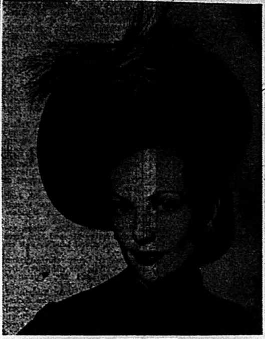
Sponsors of the new project claim that the animal, a cross between a sheep and a goat, would flourish on many waste areas of the Northern Territory, thus making those areas productive. Interior Minister Johnson has decided to consider a definite plan for putting the scheme into operation. Promoters are considering importing stud stock from South Africa, Persia or France, and are prepared to spend substantial sums if suitable land can be secured. Meanwhile, feminine hopes run high.

AIRLINE HOSTESSES DON'T MARRY MONEY

Miami, Fla., Sept. 19 —(CP)— A survey of 100 Pan American Airline stewardesses here showed that the glamorous beauties seldom if ever wed millionaire passengers they meet on flights. More than half the girls do their centre-aisling with airline personnel — pilots, airport managers, traffic men and pursers. The remainder marry childhood sweethearts, just like other girls.

However, they do marry — and fast. On the average, P.A.A. stewardesses last 8.7 months before the love bug bites them.

Handsome Hats



By ALICE ALDEN

Even before the war, there were many fashion-conscious women to whom the hallmark of millinery merit meant a John Fredericks hat rather than a Paris model. The latest collection shown by this house revealed extraordinary handsome and wearable hats. Here is one of Mr. John's new designs, a dashing, upswept profile hat of black felt, topped with graceful black and white twin feather brushes. And very becoming it is, too, besides having the unmistakable John Fredericks look.

MT. PLEASANT W. M. S.

Rawdon.—The September meeting of Mount Pleasant Woman's Missionary Society was held on Wednesday, September 11 at the home of Mrs. Percy MacMullen with 23 ladies and three children in attendance.

The service opened with quiet music played by Mrs. Ross Hoard. The Vice President Mrs. MacMullen, presided and gave the Call to Worship based on "Attainment". A special service of worship, "Daily Tests of a Christian Life", was given by Mrs. Kenneth Weaver with Mrs. Allan Bailey offering prayer. Mrs. Ormel MacMullen read the Scripture while Mrs. Burton Sharp delighted with a vocal solo.

The October meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Roy Thrasher. All the ladies were urged to attend "The Crusaders' Cavalcade" at Belleville and the sectional rally at Cannifton in October. The treasurer reported nearly $5 and another fee paid.

Mrs. O. B. MacMullen gathered the offering amounting to over $9 and this was dedicated.

Mrs. Sid Demorest read an item from the new blue book re the marriage of Miss Wilma Paddock and Rev. D. M. Stinson.

Mrs. MacMullen introduced the new study book "India at the Threshold" by L. W. Bryce, and outlined the first chapter entitled "I'm Proud of India". She was assisted by Mrs. John Mulheron, Mrs. Don Campbell, Mrs. Frank Smith, Mrs. Bert Jeffs, Mrs. Cyrus Summers and Mrs. Roy Thrasher.

At the present time India is 43 flying hours from Canada with nearly 400 million people anxious to bring their contribution to the world. India is at the threshold of a new day. The old India is passing and modern India yearns to be more like Canada. Canadians should be anxious to learn more of their fellow Christians in India.

Glitter, Drape Feature N.Y. Styles of Formal Wear

By ANN WORCESTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, (CP)— Gold and silver threads woven into stiff brocades, duchess satin in shining copper colors and an abundance of softly draped silks—real silks—will be important features in this winter's wardrobe.

Leading United States dress designers showed an already well-dressed audience at the Ritz how they could become better dressed at a fashion show sponsored by a firm of silk manufacturers. Among the designers represented were Hattie Carnegie, Adrian, Omar Kiam, Jo Copeland, Nettie Rosenstein and Suzanne. Most of the dresses shown were evening gowns and formal cocktail dresses.

Skirts ranged from elongated fish tails to elaborate bouffant. The former was admirably illustrated by Joe Copeland's emerald green satin evening gown glittering with gold and silver fishes. Under rounded hips swathed in a softly draped slash the bias skirt tapered to the ground.

The sash around the hips was repeated in an elliptically draped cowl neck line. What might have seemed angular and straight is softened into a long curving line.

Most striking dress in Miss Copeland's mermaid outline was a slim black crepe slashed to the waist and further enlivened by a poison green fringed scarf dipping low in the back and drawn up through the belt in front.

Colors Metallic

Hattie Carnegie, eschewing such underwater fancies, prefers more elaborately draped hiplines and full skirts. Her designs were ultra-feminine featuring a modified leg o' mutton sleeve whose fullness tapers softly to tightness on the forearm and a mysterious dark metal color which she calls Gavelin blue.

Most romantic of all the evening dresses shown was her floral brocade with voluminous skirt and tightly fitted, draped bodice in a darkly metallic, shimmering purple.

Adrian showed a dramatic copper tinsel and black brocade dress which he named the "atom smasher". The upper part, shining black with large round copper spots ended diagonally in the middle of the skirt which continued in spangled copper with black spots.

That designers no longer want to turn women into Regency bucks or Victorian milkmaids should comfort everyone. Only history-inspired dress in the collection was a straight, short black crepe whisper from the 20s by Nettie Rosenstein with a jet-lace bolero thrown over bare shoulders. The show's basic color scheme was dark with light and bright—and what glittered brightly was often gold.

Pure gold was Omar Kiam's gold-threaded damask gilded with pale gold sequins. His elegant poppy-red taffeta ball gown with its wide skirt, full over hips and stomach, and with poppies springing from the shoulders illustrated well the timelessness of his own contributions.

The dresses exhibited were not high fashion but high style—the kind that can be worn with pleasure for years.

RUBBER EXPORTS HIGHER

Singapore, Sept. 18 —(CP)— Rubber exports from the Malayan peninsula during August totalled 76,649 tons, 40 per cent greater than July shipments of 45,938 tons, the Registrar of Statistics reported today. The Singapore Free Press said expanding stocks had forced local rubber prices down sharply. In some cases, it added, values sank 10 per cent.

Three Persons Indicted In Torso Murder

Hamilton, Sept. 18 —(CP)—Indictments charging three persons with the torso murder of John Dick, 40-year-old streetcar motorman, will be presented to the Wentworth county Grand Jury when the fall assizes of the Supreme Court start here next Monday.

Charged with the murder are Mrs. Evelyn Dick, 25, widow of the slain man; her father, Donald MacLean, 68, and William Bohozuk.

If true bills are returned by the Grand Jury the trial will start Oct. 7 with Mr. Justice F. H. Barlow presiding.

Mrs. Dick and Bohozuk also were committed for trial on a charge of murdering an infant identified as Peter David White MacLean. Police said the baby's body was found encased in cement in a suitcase during investigation of Dick's death.

Dick's dismembered torso was found last March 16 by children playing in a remote section of Hamilton Mountain. The arms, legs and head were found later.

John J. Sullivan, counsel for Mrs. Dick, said today the attractive young woman has "gained some weight" during the five months she spent in jail after being committed for trial by Magistrate H. A. Burbridge.

We see how designers have captured the appeal of the classic silhouette in a cap sleeve nightie of fine rayon tricot. The sleeves can be worn low on the shoulder to give a Directoire air, a soft frame for a lovely neck and shoulders. It's a definite reflection of the ormantic, the softly feminine trend in women's clothes. The lady-like look is everywhere in the new lingerie. In slips, housecoats, and pajamas as well as nighties. Styles are copied from Greek, Regency, and Victorian periods. One of this season's most effective collections contains gowns with the Empire influence. They are simple but have a smooth grace that moulds the figure with well balanced folds and drapery and a ribboned waistline.

RONALD SEARS SENTENCED TO HANG DEC. 3RD

Found Guilty of Murder in Knife - Slaying of Sgt. Hugh Price

Windsor, Sept. 19 — (CP) — Eighteen-year-old Ronald Sears last night was found guilty of murder in the knife-slaying last summer of Sgt. Hugh Blackwood Price, and was sentenced to be hanged on Dec. 3.

The youth still faces another murder charge and three charges of attempted murder, in connection with knife attacks on five men that had Windsor in turmoil a year ago. With consent of counsel, the other charges were laid over to the January Assizes.

The jury foreman announced the verdict of "guilty" in the Price death in a low voice and it appeared the youth did not hear it. He leaned over in the prisoner's dock and asked a guard a question. Then he straightened up. He showed no great emotion, but his cheeks were flushed.

Gasps were heard in the courtroom, some from relatives, as Mr. Justice Dalton Wells imposed the death sentence.

The jury took 1½ hours to reach its verdict. His Lordship had told them that in his opinion they could return a verdict only of guilty or not guilty; it was not a case that could properly be defined as manslaughter and the defence had not raised the question of manslaughter.

Depends on Statement

His Lordship said that the case depended almost entirely on the statement introduced by the Crown in which Sears allegedly confessed the attack on Price and others and also was quoted as saying that he had long brooded over an attack on himself by a sex pervert when he was a child. The Crown's contention was that the accused had lain in wait for persons making indecent proposals.

"Looking at the confession itself I don't think there is any suggestion of the questions (by police), leading him on," His Lordship said. "Unfortunately Sears can't help us as he can't remember."

Defence counsel James H. Clark told the jury that if accused was found guilty "it will be because the amazing confession the boy signed is believed." He charged that part of police testimony concerning taking of the statement was perjured. Sears himself testified that he could remember nothing after 9 p.m. on the night he was arrested and questioned.

BUGS PRESENTED

London, Sept. 19—(CP)—More than 5,000 "walking-stick" insects were donated to the Banting Institute today by the president and 11 members of the London Kinsmen Club. The elongated bugs, used in cancer research, were collected on a Lake Huron beach 30 miles northeast of the city.

USEFUL OIL

China cracks tunk oil to produce motor fuel, diesel fuel and lubricants. In the United States this oil is used principally in paints and varnishes.

Law Students in Church House — Because the number of aspirants to careers at law is in excess of the number of seats available for them in lecture rooms at Osgoode Hall, this group of second-year students took up their new-term studies in Metropolitan Church House. The future legal-eagles looked anything but unhappy about their new classroom when school opened.

John Corcery, Peterborough (middle), found a pleasant spot from which to take up his studies. A few drab courtrooms should be brightened considerably when Joan Heath (left) of Toronto, and Mhora MacInnis, Sault Ste. Marie (right), take up practice.

Not Known When Cocktail Lounges Will be Opened

Toronto, Sept. 19—(CP)—It's anybody's guess as to when Ontario government will proclaim the regulations governing sale of liquor by the glass and pave the way for the opening of cocktail lounges in the province's five cities with a population of more than 50,000 — Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton, London and Windsor.

Although Queen's Park officials shy off answering questions it is learned that the regulations have been drafted although they are subject to revision after Attorney-General Blackwell consults with interested parties about them.

Mr. Blackwell himself is out of the city just now but a few days ago he announced he would hear representations. He also indicated then there was a possibility that the regulations might be proclaimed before the end of this year.

The last session of the Ontario Legislature approved the new Liquor Act legalizing sale of liquor by the glass in the five larger cities and giving local option privileges to smaller centres. The Act was to become effective on proclamation by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council.

Three Factors Caused Delay

It is reported that three factors have delayed proclamation: the lengthy task of preparing the regulations; shortage of building materials; shortage of such liquor as Scotch and Rye whisky.

Political sources say that the building situation ranks high in government consideration of when to proclaim the Act and the regulations. Remodelling of hotels and restaurants for cocktail lounges would tax the supply situation and might divert materials urgently needed for housing.

Scotch and Rye whiskies are still scarce and the shortage is becoming more acute because of the bottle shortage, growing out of the strike at the Brunner-Mond plant at Windsor, which has cut off Canadian production of soda ash used in glass manufacture.

It is reported that the government considered sidestepping the whisky shortage by permitting cocktail lounges to open but prohibiting sale of Rye or Scotch. This is said to be still a possibility.

Woman Pastors To be Discussed By U.C. Council

By George Burman

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Sept. 19. (CP)—The contentious case of Mrs. Margaret F. Butler, of Montreal, whom the United Church has thus far denied a pastorate charge separate from that of her husband, will be referred to at the church's 12th General Council tomorrow in a sessional committee report on the ordination of women.

An indication of the decision to be reached may be contained in a statement last week by Rev. Gordon A. Sisco, General Secretary of the United Church, in a pre-council address to the lay advisory council: "It is my judgment tha twe should proceed to such study over the next two years in order to arrive at a wise decision."

Dr. Sisco said that marriage very often made it impossible for an ordained woman to perform the functions of the ministry, and yet there was no way to "unordain" a minister. On the other hand, if women ministers are barred from marriage, it results in a celibate ministry which is not applicable to men.

Last night's session dealt mainly with recommendations by the Board and Sessional Committee of Evangelism and Social Service. Resolutions adopted embraced:

GAMBLING—To urge provincial attorneys general to give public assurance to apply the Canadian criminal code's anti-gambling provisions.

TEMPERANCE—To call upon members of the United Church of Canada to practise total abstinence in regard to beverage alcohol, not to serve it to others, not to invest money in corporations engaged in the production and sale of alcoholic beverages. Provincial governments were asked to sponsor temperance education and to use a part of their profits from liquor sales for the rehabilitation of alcoholics. Ministers were urged to form temperance committees to encourage temperance education.

FOOD AND CLOTHING NEEDS—To support aid-to-Europe plans and to make personal sacrifices in food consumption.

INTERNATIONAL PROBLEMS—That the government do its share to reduce any threat to peace. The friction between Russia and other nations was viewed "with grave concern". Great Britain was offered support "to continue her task in Palestine," and commended for "recent constructive undertakings" in India.

DIPLOMACY — A resolution was adopted opposing the appointment by Canada of a representative to the Vatican.

Creates Furore

Rev. R. G. Katsunoff, of Montreal, created a brief furore when he attempted to explain "a possible lack of inside information" concerning Russia by the fact that Canadians knew only what they read in the press, and added: "probably we haven't a freer press here than they have in Russia".

As the moderator, Rev. T. W. Jones of Montreal, asked the speaker to withdraw his remark about free press, Mr. Katsunoff went on to relate that a statement by a number of ministers had been denied publication by several newspapers. He did not state the nature of the statement, nor name the papers.

Following several interjections by the moderator, Mr. Katsunoff agreed to withdraw the offending remark.

Earlier, the council voiced approval of the principle of civil marriage, reaffirmed its position discouraging "mixed" marriages, and deferred for at least two years a recommendation that the method of choosing a moderator be changed.

Bloused Crowns, Brief Brims Tell Fall Hat Story

By the crowns you will know the new hats of Fall 1946. Soft bloused crowns, rounded dome crowns, puffy beret crowns, manipulated crowns with an unblocked look and streamlined stovepipe toppers reach a new high in fashion this year. Brims, too, are looking up and there is a definite suggestion of height in all types of hats this fall

The trend to larger and more important crowns was seen back in the early spring collections of the topflight New York milliners when a number of high, rounded silhouettes were introduced.

Many of the new fall felts carry on with full, rounded contours of the so-called "pop-over" and "muffin" crowns. The bloused "Windsor" beret with a small brim has a higher, more stylized look in fall felts and fabric combinations. Postillions with high crowns wider at the top are a favorite tailored type with the swagger suggestion of the topper worn by Beau Brummel. Most of these new high-crowned hats have balanced width and brief brims, often with a cloche look.

Another important fall silhouette which is an outgrowth of earlier trends is the high young bonnet. The Directoire influence which was seen in a few extreme summer styles from the leading designers has wide appeal in the new modern versions. This is the scoop bonnet or "coal skuttle" silhouette with a modified head-fitting crown and a flaring brim that lifts high over the brow and is seen both in larger and smaller hats. The poke bonnet with a round crown, flat at the back is also popular in young hats for children as well as misses. The shallow little Victorian bonnet that sits high on top of the head is another young and charming fashion with cleverly draped or individually blocked crowns that give it importance.

Felt Plus Fabric

Although fine felts are well adapted to the new manipulated treatments, many interesting and unusual fall hats are made from fabrics or combinations of felt and other materials. Velvets, velveteens and satins are very good, both alone or in combinations of color and material. Novelty wools and rayons, rayon or wool jerseys, faille, foulards and stitched felt skirtings are used both in the streamlined and softer styles for fall. Trimmings, used with discretion, often emphasize the new higher lines. Soaring quills, ostrich curls, vivid hackle, natural gamebird feathers and other types of feather trimmings are very popular and there is a great deal of variety in the treatment of grosgrain and other ribbon trimmings. For fall glitter there are afternoon and evening hats trimmed with bright beads, buttons, sequins and metallic embroidery. Fewer veils are seen and these are usually confined to close-fitting mask veils of interesting novelty meshes.

News in Russet Tones

Among the most interesting fall colors are russet and copper tones, coffee, and brown; vivid and dark greens, as well as greyed olive; greenish peacock blue, grey blues and vivid electron blue and surprisingly — for fall — navy; bright red and deep wine tones, raspberry and cherry shades; wine grey and other neutrals; and perennially popular black. Hats may match the rest of your costume or contrast and with so many lighter dresses and coats, due to dye shortages, a hat of deep, rich color will be smartest of all. Chic combinations include peacock with gold; chocolate with deep turquoise; pine green with orange; tile with lime; and black raspberry with electron blue. Because a hat adds that well groomed, completely finished look to every costume, do plan to have a hat wardrobe this season. For your tailored suit, one of the new cloche brims; for your short black dinner dress, one of the enchanting little glitter hats. And of course, one of the new bloused crowned charmers for your topper. Whichever your favorite . . . large hat or small . . . they will be a definite asset to your wardrobe. A careful choice with an eye to suitability will bring dividends.

MOVING, PACKING, SHIPPING and STORAGE

The well-organized linen closet needs at least one extra all-wool blanket for guests or emergency use. The young lady is pictured putting away her new blanket. A good blanket is the best economy in the long run, for it will outlast three or four of inferior grade. It will stand up under cleaning or laundering, and will hold its shape and size even after years of service because the fibres are pre-shrunk. Its fine workmanship gives a close texture that means substance, and the double nap lends warmth and durability. Store blankets on a 22 inch shelf if they are heavy. (A 12 inch shelf is sufficient for lighter ones.) On a drawer is an excellent storage place if shelf space is not available.

STEEL DELIVERIES HEAVY

New York, Sept. 18 — (AP) — It will take the steel industry six months to supply all consumers adequately, the Iron Age, national metal-working paper, predicted today.

Most consumers already are receiving steel at a rate considerably above pre-war years, the paper said, but the tremendous steel demand and pressure for delivery will swamp the mills till next spring.

Despite the scrap shortage there has been an unprecendented peacetime output of steel ingots since the latter half of June. The rate this week climbed a half point from last week's revised rate of 89 per cent to 89.9 per cent.

Western Canada Coal May Be Raised 50 cts. Ton

Calgary, Sept. 18.— (CP)— Sources close to the Western Canada coal industry today predicted an increase of about 50 cents a ton for domestic coal mined in the West as the dispute between some 9,000 miner and coal operators appeared near settlement with the miners conceded a $1.40 per day wage increase.

Yesterday a joint statement issued by the United mineworkers of America, the domestic operators and bituminous operators said the wage increase had been agreed to. The increase must now be ratified by the War Labor Board and the Miners' locals.

Other concessions granted the miners that are expected to increase the price of domestic coal include the Welfare Fund royalty of three cents a ton, reduction from a 48-hour to a 40-hour work week, with mine maintenance costs remaining the same and new holiday provisions.

An increase in the price of coal would have to be ratified by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

The wage increases is expected to put an additional $3,000,000 in the miners' annual paycheques. Original demands of the Union were for a $2.50 per day wage increase, a five-cent royalty for a Welfare Fund and a 40-hour week.

DOLMAN SLEEVES, CURVED SHOULDERS NEWEST SILHOUETTE DETAILS; SMALL WAISTLINES BIG NEWS; FURRED TOPPERS STAR

There is an excitingly "new look" to the fall fashion silhouette! Newest and most significant details are noted in deep dolman sleeves, curved broad shoulders, cinched-in waistlines — all of which achieve that fashionable new broad shouldered, small-waisted look. Deep dolman sleeves steal the spotlight definitely in the new season collections! Dramatically flattering (and important point, wonderfully comfortable!) they are noted in everything from sophisticated date dresses to smooth casuals. In fact, they carry right through the coat and suit picture too! Wonderfully chic and new looking are the black afternoon dresses with deep dolman sleeves, suave high neckline, small waistlines and slim or side draped skirts. Depending completely on line for drama, their great simplicity makes them marvelous background dresses for your most impressive accessories. Then too dolman sleeves lend themselves beautifully to brilliant color contrast with vivid bands of color outlining deep armholes and very often repeated in shoulder lines. Curved is the word for shoulder lines and they predominate throughout. Very flattering, you'll see dropped shoulder lines, curved shoulders, sleeves cut-in-one with the shoulder. More color contrast is achieved by combining vivid dolman sleeves with solid color dress. For examples, brown dress with gold or yellow sleeves, black with aqua or rose-red, beige with brown. Draping plays a very important part in the fall fashion dress picture, with modified draping highly favored for fluid young lines. Sarong-draped hiplines, side and centre draped skirts, asymmetrical bodice and hipline draping are noted. Bodices take to draping too. Asymmetric ideas are shown in bodices which repeat the side drapery of the skirt. In fact, draping is smart fashion insurance against rigid unflattering line.

Smart Back Interest

Smart back talk is noted in many of the new season collections too! Bustle back dresses which are so figure-flattering because they minimize waistlines and camouflage hiplines are well favored. Many feature the partial belt starting just in front of the hipline and drawn into a provocative bow at the back. Windswept backlines are also noted, this achieved by slightly flared skirt fullness at centre back. Pannied drapes, pert back peplums as well as back draped hiplines are other examples of smart back interest! New versions of the peplum are noted, many of which are simulated rather than real peplums. You'll see the peplum effect achieved via hipline yokes with tied effect at the side. When the true peplum does appear, it is either partial and flat, or if a complete peplum it is narrow with a minimum of flare, which of course is concentrated at the back. Underscored for tremendous success are the little peplum suit dresses — perfect from desk to date because they are simple yet excitingly flattering! One of the big favorites featured black velveteen jacket with rippled peplum plus slim black wool skirt, definitely a costume that offers smart versatility to busy wardrobes! Collarless necklines are most popular. Definitely dual personality costumes, you can wear the velveteen jacket fashionably over vivid wool skirts—over dancing dresses too! Because of their great flattery and wonderful wearability, they are featured with little button-up jackets, tie-front jackets, one- button models too. Of course they all feature the all-important dolman sleeves, tiny waistlines, slim skirts.

Newest of the new casuals go off the deep end for deep dolman sleeves! Needless to say, they have never been smarter, more comfortable, more versatile! The junior miss, the college and career girl love them — definite proof they are slated for tremendous success! So watch dolman sleeves give your favorite casuals that new, "soft" look, all of which makes them sophisticated yet young, right around the clock! Take the coat dress for example. The 1946 version features smooth rounded shoulders, deepened armholes, collarless or small rever neckline, and for added smartness is set off with bright contrasting belt and buttons. Wonderful choice is the pastel gabardine casual with smooth saddle stitching outlining dolman sleeves and collarless necklines, repeated in button to hipline closing. Because of its easy wearability, flattery and young sophistication, this type dress will definitely be a fashion hit with busy American women. The lumberjack dress is also slated for the front ranks of fashion and lends itself beautifully to curved shoulder lines and dolman sleeves, with more fashion interest in cinched-in belted waistline and buttoned cuffs. The two-piece long torso model is another favorite, here again dolman sleeves. As for fabric, rayon gabardine is again the big favorite. Rightly so too because gabardine is good looking, easy to wear and it tailors beautifully. Smooth wool flannels, wool jersey and wool-like rayons are next in line. Various fabric combinations are also noted. Colors include beige, grey, Chinese cherry, lime and of course fashionable black. Black incidentally makes some of the smartest wool dresses for fall. High necklines deep dolman sleeves and slim skirts are highlighted of course. And for that one touch of drama we all love, these black wools show bands of color at dolman sleeves, at the shoulders, or in some cases depend on a brilliant belt for vivid accent. Little black wool suit dresses, checked wool suit dresses as well as lumberjack types are other fashion winners.

Coats Go Short

Introduced last season, the short furred coat is gaining fast momentum in the fashion world and is underscored for bigger success than ever this season. Because it is young, smart and versatile, because it affords all the warmth, and twice the smartness of a full length coat, it has become an American favorite. You'll see it in stunning belted tunics with wide fur revers, in fashionable tuxedo toppers with young swing backs, in furred tuxedos that can be worn belted or loose. Because they are generally featured with a matching reed slim wool skirt, they are a complete costume in themselves and of course the toppers can be worn over all your dresses and suits. Deeper armholes, flange or rounded shoulders characterize the smartest of them and make for comfortable easy wearability over suits. Deep fur cuffs are noted on many for that luxury look. Mink blended honey muskrat, mouton lamb, beaver, black persian are favorite fur trims. Very fashionable are the light long-haired fur trims such as lynx-dyed fox, Canadian wolf — following the trend to the light look in furs so important this season. Furlined toppers are also noted and feature flat furs such as persian lamb. Of course the furred tuxedo topper is still a big favorite for all around warmth, versatility and wear. As for untrimmed coats, fashion forecasts a brilliant future for untrimmed belted casual coats and for velvet trimmed dressmaker coats. A very big season is forecast too for the untrimmed short coat, tunic or boy style! One very important example of the untrimmed dressmaker coat features deep dolman sleeves, smooth collarless neckline and small cinched-in waistline.

Perhaps the hat voted to be the most successful in the class of autumn 1946 is the neat little black satin affair all done up with a touch of fine feathers. Florence Reichman is responsible for this neat little number, good for wear with sleek dinner suits or late afternoon frocks. It is fashoned of sleek black satin and gilt-flecked black glycerined ostrich curls gracefully over the front of the small cuffed brim.

CAN'T AFFORD TO LOSE THEM

London, Sept. 18 —(CP)— Commenting on reports that 500 skilled craftsmen now are leaving Britain every month for South Africa, a daily graphic editorial today said: "It is to be hoped that the magnet of high wages and attractive living conditions will not draw from Britain too many of our skilled craftmen—We can ill afford to lose them."

4,049,000 Gallons Pumped for Plant's All-Time High

Officials of the Belleville Purification Plant marked down Tuesday, Sept. 17th., as a red-letter day in the history of their operations.

For an all-time high was established in pumping operations as flames swept rapidly through the large Graham Dried Foods dehydrating building on lower Pinnacle Street causing a quarter million dollars damage.

Responding to the immediate need as the fire burst savagely from four points of the roof, the pumping station sent 4,000 gallons of water per minute streaming through its pipe lines from 2 a.m. until 7 a.m.

City pumpage on Tuesday reached an all-time gallonage record of 4,049,000. In addition to this, 170,700 gallons were utilized to wash the sand filters after the operations, making a record day's usage of 4,219,700 gallons.

The level of the city reservoir was lowered from a height of 14 feet to 9 feet 5 inches during the day.

Trim Blue Uniforms Puzzle Americans

Saskatoon, Sept. 19 —(CP)— Though mistaken several times for a Russian sharpshooter, ex-R.C.A.F. Leading Airwoman Peggy Ferguson of Toronto found Americans "keen" to show her their country during a two-week air hitch-hiking tour of the United States.

Visiting here on the last lap—by train — of her discharge leave jaunt, Peggy has time to add up the mileage of the trip during which she made stops at Buffalo, New York, Washington, Jacksonville, Fla., Memphis, Tenn., Denver, Col., Sacramento and San Diego, Calif., and so on up the coast to Seattle, Wash., from where she crossed back into Canada.

It was the air arm of the U. S. Navy all the way for the party of three girls. Peggy says, wryly, that the U. S. Army has regulations against taking stray passengers.

In their R.C.A.F. uniforms the girls were a mystery to most Americans. Besides being mistaken for Russian army personnel they were often hailed as Salvation Army people.

Most exciting moment of the trip occurred when an oil leak developed in one of the engines of the aircraft taking them from Washington to Dayton, Ohio. They were given parachutes and told what to do "when you jump." There weren't any "ifs," Peggy says.

However, the plane landed safely at Dayton and the girls were soon on their way again in another aircraft.

Peggy was in the air force just under three years and worked chiefly in control towers on the coast of Canada — and would like the same type of job in civilian life.

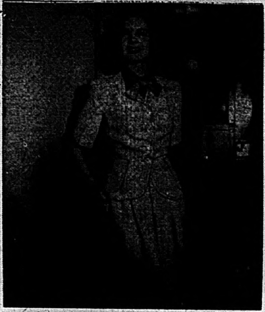
New England Fashions



By ALICE ALDEN

Coast costumes are to American fashion what regional dishes are to our national food tastes. By now we're all familiar with the colorful clothes from California. So it is good to welcome equally colorful and charming clothes from the East Coast. To Boston must go the credit for "New England Revelation" a veritable revolution in the American wardrobe. Since New England, third largest apparel market in the country, supplies among other things, 37% of the nation's total mill fabrics it is only logical that there should be New England fashions, a heritage of the arts and crafts as well as the manufacturing sources of this great region. From the Verney mills comes, crush-resistant shantung for this Boston-designed slack suit. Worn with the trim trousers is a short-sleeved, cardigan jacket in specially dyed Cape Cod colors, made with big patch pockets and large pearl buttons. It is nice with or without a blouse and just right for resort wear.

Transport Equipped With Parachutes

Ottawa, Sept. 19 —(CP)— The Dakota transport which crashed at Estevan, Sask., last Sunday with a loss of 21 R.C.A.F. personnel was equipped with parachutes, air force headquarters said today.

Officials offered no explanation as to why the parachutes were not used when it was found the Dakota's elevator control was not moveable and that a landing therefore would be dangerous.

What appeared likely was that the passengers, 20 of whom were experienced pilots and several of whom won the D.F.C. for flying in difficult circumstances overseas during the war, held some sort of consultation and decided to attempt the landing despite the fact a control locking device had made the elevator control useless.

While a dangerous manoeuvre, this is not considered by pilots to be too difficult.

Like Cavalry Regiments Police Forces Have Gone Mechanized

By H. DENT HODGSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

That fine figure on horseback—the mounted policeman — has had his day.

Like cavalry regiments, police forces have gone mechanized, and the neat "tlot-tlot" of well-shod hooves has given way to the sharp sputter of the motorcycle and the soft purr of the squad car, a Canadian Press survey shows that throughout Canada there are only about 150 horses engaged in police work.

And that includes the force that horses helped make world-famous — The Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who today are less "mounted" than ever. The horse has almost disappeared as the policeman's best friend.

With his disappearance fades a chapter in Canadian history which associated horse with man in all walks of life; a romantic tradition, reared when Canada was young, which bred into the gendarmerie a prestige and dash that earned Canada a riding reputation.

R.C.M.P. Commissioner S. T. Wood, a noted horseman in younger days, seems none too happy about the trend and declares: "There's nothing like a horse to bring out any weaknesses in a man."

Few Horses Left.

The Mounties still have about 30 steeds at Rockcliffe in Ottawa, 27 at Regina and another 50 in pasture at Fort Walsh, where fine R.C.M.P. strains are being maintained. But where the recruit to the force used to receive 1,000 hours in the saddle as part of his training test, he now has little schooling in horsemanship.

Toronto, although it reduced its mounted division of its city police by 14 horses last spring, still is one of the remaining strongholds of the mounted policeman, with 31 horses.

Police find the beasts most useful for handling crowds and part of a Mountie's training used to be "riot work," where horse and rider were trained to circulate in milling throngs of people and automobiles.

The Toronto mounted section, with an 80-year tradition behind it, used horses most successfully in the recent Canadian seamen's like strike. The section also shines at parades, fairs and football games.

Great Sentiment Developed.

Several men on the Toronto force have spent from 10 to 20 years with the mounted section and have developed strong sentimental attachments with their mounts. When the depletion of the stables shifted some men to motorcycle work, the officers found it hard to accustom themselves to their new charges.

"We're making the best of it," one said, "but it isn't the same. We're still putting lumps of sugar in our tunics, and who ever heard of giving sugar to a motorcycle?"

It has not been decided whether the R.C.M.P. will ever revive its famed "musical ride," a masterpiece of precision showmanship which was last seen in the United States in 1939. This crack display required almost eight months of constant training for horse and rider.

QUICK, MR. DENYES, THE ASPIRIN!

A bottle of aspirin wouldn't necessarily cure the headache that could result from the brick wall crash as shown below, but the "Lucky" Lott Hell Drivers have an uncanny habit of climbing out smiling after crashing the jallopy automobile through a wall of solid brick that are stacked 3½-feet thick and five feet high. On "Lucky" Lott Hell Drivers day at the Belleville Fair, the people of Belleville district will get the chance of a life time to see authentic motion picture stunt-men in 12 neck risking events, as these ex-service men, fresh from the far flung battle fronts of World War Two take this means of rehabilitating themselves to civilian life. There will be two performances on Monday, Sept. 23, afternoon and evening.

RAF Airmen to be Given Comforts He Would Receive in Civilian Life

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 19 —(CP)— The R.A.F. won't recognize itself when Marshal of the R.A.F. Lord Tedder puts into effect the "square deal" for airmen which he hopes will spur lagging recruiting.

With only half the enlistments he seeks, he has sent out mobile exhibitions to show the public what life in the R.A.F. is going to be.

"Because a man is in the service, serving his country, is no reason why he should have to accept some standard lower than that generally enjoyed by his fellow citizens" — that is Lord Tedder's principle. Already rates of pay have been increased.

Now the barrack-room dormitory will be thrown aside. Single airmen will have a choice of individual rooms or four-man compartments. For each there will be wardrobe cupboards, a writing table and book-shelves, comfortable chairs — even a reading lamp of his own.

Each air station will be a self-contained community with its own stores and entertainments. The general layout will be "similar to a well-planned rural development estate in which the housing and free-time facilities are within easy reach of the actual site of the man's work, but on not of it."

A small park will separate the living quarters from workshops and hangars. Sports fields will be provided nearby. No man will have to go outside the station for "entertainments, amusements or daily requirements."

Married men will live in semi-detached houses with living room, kitchen and dining recess, bathroom and two bedrooms. There will be electric or gas refrigerators, constant hot water and electric or gas stoves. Even linen, china and cutlery will be provided.

The first of these new R.A.F. houses now are being built.

In Canada, Air Minister Gibson has already announced a peacetime program that places emphasis on personal comfort and entertainment.

The R.C.A.F. has eliminated double decker beds and airmen live in small units. The dormitory is disappearing as rapidly as alterations and new construction will permit.

Married quarters are being provided and generally the airman is being given the same comforts he would receive in civilian life.

Marmora

Marmora — Rev. J. M. Brownlie is attending the Clerical Alumni of Trinity College in Toronto this week.

Mr. M. J. Tamplin of Falconbridge renewed acquaintances at Deloro on Monday.

John Shannon left on Tuesday to attend the University of New Brunswick at Fredericton.

Duck hunters were out in full force at Crowe Lake on Monday morning. One local hunter remarked that he had never seen so many hunters at Crowe Lake. Owing to the low water many of the ducks shot down were lost in the bogs.

Alphonse Clemen's pet crows, Amos and Andy, have been fraternizing in the past few days with the less domesticated of their species. Sometimes they have stayed away from their home perch for twenty-four hours, so their owner is hesitating about providing warm winter quarters for them. He says he will let them go if they want to and see if they will come back next spring.

Shortened C. I. O. Lines Somewhat Ease Situation

New York, Sept. 18 —(AP)— Efforts to bring an end to the costliest maritime stoppage in United States history apparently were stalled today although shortened C.I.O. picket lines somewhat eased the shipping situation.

Talks were broken off Sunday night when operators demanded that security watches be returned to struck vessels and the operators have insisted the men return to work before resuming negotiations over their demands for wage parity with A.F.L. seamen.

A.F.L. maritime workers trudged back to work on ships in New York and other Atlantic and gulf ports yesterday after Joseph Curran, president of the striking National Maritime Union, ordered that picketing be restricted to C.I.O.-contracted vessels.

He said in a statement today, however, that the C.I.O. seamen's strike was "100 per cent effective" with "approximately 900 vessels demobilized in various ports throughout the nation."

Fifty-eight vessels were worked yesterday in New York harbor — the country's No. 1 port — according to the Maritime Commission, while Joseph P. Ryan, president of the A.F.L. International Longshoremen's Association, reported that thousands of his men returned to work and that more would do so today.

The A.F.L. seamen ended their strike, begun Sept. 5, when they were granted increases of $22.50 monthly on the West Coast and $27.50 on the East Coast.

N. Y. HOTELS PACKED

New York, Sept. 18 — (AP) — What hotel men call the worst hotel crisis in New York city's history was disclosed today by a survey of hotels, Y. M. and Y. W. C. A.'s and even Turkish baths.

The Travellers' Aid Society said the influx of visitors to the city had gone "out of control." That large hotels are booked solid for a month, small hotels for at least a week, Turkish baths are being used and persons even are seeking refuge in subways and railroad stations.

SAVE SOME FOR Yourself!

IT'S a melancholy thought... but isn't it true that you are always the last to share in your monthly earnings?

There's the butcher, the baker, the coal-man, the landlord. There's that new mattress for Mary, or Junior's dental bill. All it takes is an unexpected "extra" or two and—bang!—where's that money you so carefully had ear-marked for savings?

Yet here's an interesting thing. All through the war you proved, with your Victory Bond purchases, that you could "save some for yourself". In fact, you saved a surprisingly large amount.

You proved, too, that a back-log of savings "does things" to you. It gives a lift to your self-respect... to your sense of getting somewhere. It makes you feel less vulnerable—makes you more willing and able to grasp opportunity when it comes along. It gives you peace of mind.

Who can say how important these things are, both to your progress and your personal happiness? Certainly they are well worth working for. And that means owing yourself a certain set sum every month, and then making sure you collect it. So keep up that wartime saving habit. It's one good thing the war taught all of us.

REAL OPPOSITION BEING PROVIDED FOR CONTENDERS

Dodgers Gain Half Game by Splitting With Pirates; Cards Lose to Braves

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

There was every indication today that whichever teams wins the National League flag — St. Louis Cardinals or Brooklyn Dodgers — will have to overcome strong opposition from the rest of the league the remainder of the way.

All teams are lying in wait for the contenders. The Cardinals, expecting fairly soft opposition from Boston Braves whom they had defeated 14 times in 20 engagements this season, went down to a 2-1 defeat under the lights.

The setback reduced the leaders' margin over the Dodgers to 1½ games. The Brooks were held to a split by Pittsburgh Pirates in a doubleheader.

The Cards still boast a decided advantage over the Dodgers who now have 10 games left to play as compared to nine for the Redbirds before the season ends a week from Sunday. Any combination of nine St. Louis victories or Brooklyn defeats would give the Cards the flag.

Johnny Sain limited the Birds to seven hits for his 19th triumph and the Braves backed up their ace right-hander with fine fielding, twice halting threatening rallies with swift double plays. Dick Culler's double with two on bases.

Branca Wins Another

Lefty Fritz Ostermueller held his former Brooklyn mates to 9 scattered hits in pitching the 7th-place Pirates to a first-game 3-2 victory. Ralph Branca, who turned in a shutout against the Cardinals last week, duplicated his performance with a five-hit 3-0 victory for the Dodgers in the second game.

Hal Newhouser became the first major league pitcher since Lefty Grove in 1930-32 to register 25 victories for three consecutive years when he pitched Detroit Tigers to a 2-1 10-inning victory over Philadelphia Athletics. Newhouser fanned 11 and gave up only three hits to win a hurling duel from Penetanguishene's Phil Marchildon.

Boston Red Sox beat the Browns 6-2 under the lights in St. Louis while Washington humbled Cleveland Indians, 8-1.

The Phils solidified their hold on fifth place in the National League by winning twice from the sixth place Reds 2-1 and 6-5. Oscar Judd of Ingersoll, Ont., outpitched Ewell Blackwell in the opener for his 11th victory.

The Cubs preserved their slim lead over the Braves by whipping New York Giants 4-3.

Chicago White Sox split with New York Yankees. After Spud Chandler gained his 18th victory for the Yanks with a 4-0 shutout, the Sox won the nightcap 9-7.

Mimico Mountaineers Beat St. Catharines

Mimico, Sept. 19 —(CP)— Mimico Mountaineers evened the Ontario Lacrosse Association senior final series last night with an overwhelming 20-9 win over St. Catharines Athletics. The series now stands at three games apiece.

A howling crowd of 3,000 spectators jammed the Mimico bowl. The seventh game will be played at St. Catharines Friday night unless it rains, in which event it will be played at Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto Saturday.

Mounties had to win last night's game to keep going in the Ontario senior final and they did it with ease in a high-scoring battle. Mimico romped into a 6-2 lead in the first quarter, and were ahead by 8-3 at the half and 16-5 at the three-quarters mark.

Archie Dixon and McPhail led the Mimico sharpshooters with 4 goals apiece. Ken Dixon and Eddie Sandford each scored three. The other Mimico goals were netted by the three McDonald brothers and by Lee, Williams and McKay.

For St. Catharines, the eastern champions, Jimmy McMahon, Smith and Morton each netted two goals. Nelson, Burkhart and Fitzgerald got the others.

Woodcock May Meet Joe Louis In London

London, Sept. 19 (CP)—Boxing promoter Jack Solomons said today Joe Louis would defend his world heavyweight title against British champion Bruce Woodcock in London next summer.

"I will guarantee that the Louis versus Woodcock world heavyweight title fight will take place in London next summer," Solomons said.

"Mike Jacobs will not say no to me, but naturally it'll have to be a joint promotion."

Meanwhile Solomons said he proposed to bring Tami Mauriello, who knocked out Woodcock in New York last May to London for a return match. Woodcock, showing improved form, knocked out world's lightweight champion Gus Lesnevich of Cliffside Park, N.J., here Tuesday night.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Leading trainers of the United States turf agreed before a hearing of the Maryland Racing Commission at Baltimore yesterday to a system of voluntary pre-race test of horses at tracks in Maryland. At the outset Chairman George P. Mahoney of the Commission proposed a compulsory check on all entries but this plan met with opposition. The outcome was that horses will be checked "on request".

The meeting was attended by upwards of 100 owners, trainers, Racing Association officials, lawyers and State Government representatives.

In an extra-heat race-off at Delaware, O., yesterday Ensign Hanover, odds-on-favorite, captured the first running of the Little Brown Jug for three-year-old paces, worth $17,679 to the winner. In second place was His Lady, which paid $89.80 for $2.

John C. Clifford of Ottawa, won the International Cup at the 11th Chilean International Ski tournament in the Andean Mountain resort of Portillo, Chile. He defeated 14 South American competitors.

An Empire challenge golf match at Southport, England, yesterday saw a 4-and-3 victory by Bobby Locke of South Africa and Norman Von Linda of Australia over two crack English players, Rai Rees and Charlie Ward, in 72 holes.

On the complaint of the Wisconsin State Athletic Commission, a warrant was issued yesterday at Milwaukee against Harry Klein of that city, the charge being he offered a $1,000 bribe to Charley Parham of Milwaukee to throw his bout with Art Brown, Chicago welterweight, Tuesday night. Parham won the fight.

Expressing confidence that he could swim the English Channel and would try again next year, Gorge Berroeta of Santiago, Chile, left London for home yesterday after two unsuccessful attempts to cross from France to England.

Tami Mauriello

Louis, Brown Bomber of Old, Floors Mauriello in First Round With Flurry of Blows

Champion, Hit Hard by Tami at Opening of Round, Simply Pounded Him Into Ground

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Sept. 19—(CP)—Advice to prospective heavyweight champions: never sip cyanide, never meet an express train headon and never try to outpunch Joe Louis.

Tami Mauriello, a 23-year-old daredevil from the Bronx, learned the latter lesson last night in Yankee Stadium when the 32-year-old champion staggered back from a surprise right to the mouth, smashed his man around the ring twice and left him clinging to the ropes in decisive defeat at 2:09 of the first round.

Louis, though heavier at 211¼ than in any of his previous 22 title defences, looked more like the youthful Bomber who won the crown from Jim Braddock in 1937 than he has since before the war. His blows — and he landed scores of them in the two minutes of fighting — were crisp, accurate and shockingly powerful.

By contrast, Mauriello at 198½ landed just one punch that mattered — a hard right to Louis' lips early in the round.

Jolted off Balance

The champion, jolted and off balance, for a moment lost his jungle-cat composure and 38,494 fans howled their surprise and excitement. But the Bomber slipped in under Mauriello's over-anxious fists, systematically cuffed him about the ring and, with a series of piston-blows to the head and chin dropped the challenger for a nine-count.

Tami, resting on his knees at five, came back with one more effort and landed a left to Louis' face.

Joe came on again, and the end came with Louis shooting a barrage of blows at the head so rapidly that experienced ringsiders lost count. As Tami sank into a neutral corner Joe chopped a final one-two to the chin.

Twisted Sideways

Mauriello did not go all the way to the canvas but twisted sideways to his knees, hanging by his elbows to the middle strand of ropes. His face — bleeding at the left eye—sank into his gloves. He made one instinctive, futile, effort to get up.

The blow that ended the fight could not have travelled more than six inches and there remained doubt as to which hand the champion used. In his dressing-room Louis later told reporters:

"There was an awful lot of them . . . I'll have to see the movies . . ."

Louis, who drew the champion's end of a 335,063 gate, said he did not plan to defend his title again "until February" possibly against Bruce Woodcock, British and British Empire titlist who registered a surprise knockout over Gus Lesnevich, world light-heavy king, in a non-title go in London Tuesday.

Over in Mauriello's quarters, the beaten barkeeper was in tears. "I thought I had him with that first right," he sobbed. "I just got careless."

ROYALS DEFEAT NEWARK BEARS IN SIXTH GAME

Will Meet Syracuse Chiefs for Governor's Cup and Little World's Series

(By The Associated Press)

The International League champion Montreal Royals qualified to meet Syracuse Chiefs in the finals for the Governor's Cup by defeating Newark Bears in the semi-finals last night 5-4 to take the best of seven series 4-2, in games.

The bears literally and figuratively went down fighting as the game ended in riotous scenes. Trailing 4-3 in the ninth inning the Royals scored two runs after two were out, but not before the Bears had lost an argument to umpire Art Gore over a called ball decision.

With the count two and two on Les Burge, Gore called the next pitch by Herb Karpel a third ball, but the Newark players beefed it was a strike. When Burge hit the next pitch over the wall for a game-tying home run, The Bears again rushed Gore still arguing over the previous pitch.

As a result Newark manager George Selkirk, and players Karpel, Jonny Moore and Jack Phillips were ejected from the game.

Alex Mustaikis went in to pitch and was immediately greeted by a single by Tatum and Herman Franks' double. When Gore called Tatum safe on a close play at the plate, catcher Larry Berra charged the umpire. The Montreal players and police had to assist Gore off the field.

SEVENTY PLAYERS ATTENDING N.Y. RANGERS' SCHOOL

Chinese Player From West Coast Looks Good to Frank Boucher

By ALAN VICKERY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Sept. 19 — (CP) — Close to 70 players are attending the New York Rangers' 13th annual hockey school here, and Frankie Boucher and his aides-de-camp are kept busy looking over the talent the Rangers' scouts have dug up.

The 'kids' — amateurs from all parts of Canada — arrived in Winnipeg last Sunday but didn't get on the ice until Tuesday. Since then they've spent most of the morning and afternoon workouts getting their legs.

A great deal of interest was centred around a young Chinese player, Larry Kwong, centre for last season's Trail Smoke Eaters in the Kootenay League. Lester Patrick, who is attending the training camp in an advisory capacity, commented on the lad's ability.

Other players who have impressed in the workout are Cam Millar, defenceman with Winnipeg Monarchs last year, George Drysdale, a shifty right-winger from Toronto and Harold Gordon, who played the nets for Calgary's junior Tuxedo Ramblers in 1945.

In the evenings, Boucher uses a magnetized blackboard to illustrate plays to his pupils. The board is marked to represent a hockey rink, and wooden markers or "players," in two colors, are moved about from one position to another. The base of the board is magnetized so that the markers hold their positions.

The Rangers' regular training camp for the pros opens next Monday.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

It was a certainty that the discussion of natural hitters would stir up the old-timers, who would raise hurt objections to the omission of some of their heroes. Such a one is Patrick Henry Maley of Oradell, N.J. He writes:

"The undersigned has been looking at natural hitters in baseball since the time of 'Home-Run' Brouthers (good, old Dan from Wappingers Falls), who busted 'em when he first-based for the other great Boston teams years and years ago. However, where do you and Bill Duncan of Philadelphia get off in writing about great natural hitters without ever mentioning Brouthers and Home-Run Baker? Baker was a great natural hitter. As for Brouthers, he hit 'em out of the lot (dead ball, too) before Babe Ruth ever knew what State the city of Boston was in.

"And you who saw Wee Willie (Hit 'Em Where They Aint) Keeler—Wee Willie, the best hitter for all time or from Doubleday to MacPhail—dismiss him with a one-line mention.

• • •

"Sure, Cobb was great. So was hoeless Joe Jackson, Nap Lajoie (Ya-ja-way, that is) and all the others you gave so much space to. But I'll take Willie Keeler before Ted Williams, Stan Musial, Dixie Walker, the DiMaggio brothers, etc., etc., etc., any day or night.

"Gosh, Willie Keeler never let a man die on third with two out by trying to hit a homer only to hit a long fly. He'd hit a single—hit it where they ain't and get that one run in. You win more ball games by getting more runs than the other team. Runs win for you, not hits. Give me more runs than you and you can have more hits. How many Boston Red Sox have died on base at the Yankee Stadium this season with Williams at bat? Boy, oh boy! What would Joe Cronin have given to have Keeler then? Willie was little in body but big, oh, so big, when just a single was needed.

• • •

Here's to a grand little team; a bunch of kids who don't know when they're licked and who fully believe in the sports adage that the game is not over until the last man is out. The Kiwanis kids proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that they have plenty of guts and ability. They fought to the last minute and they were rewarded when Huck Reeves drove that towering hit that was good for a home run in any man's park, out of the lot.

• • •

Every boy on that team gave his best. Bunton did a heart-breaking job of hurling and the tall kid was in there pitching on his heart alone for the last few innings. Huck, well enough said about that grand little guy. He told us after the noise and cheering had subsided that he had waited all through the game for that certain kind of ball to be wafted at him. He got it and you know the rest.

• • •

Verny Green got three hits and played a stellar game at second base. Semark reached into the sky a couple of times and pulled down what seemed to be certain three-baggers. It was a grand game and every kid on that Kiwanis team gave all he had to come through with a glorious win.

• • •

But don't forget. This Wrightville team is not licked yet, and they are one of the best junior squads we have seen in many a moon. In fact, in our opinion and we think some 2,000 fans agree with us, we saw two of the best junior teams in Ontario out there yesterday in that fourteen-innings thriller, and next Saturday's game at Kingston will likely see a repeat.

• • •

The Kiwanis play the third game in Megaffin Stadium, Kingston on Saturday, the tussle being called for three bells. And it is quite likely that a large number of fans will root the fighting St. Louis kids to victory. There are rumors of a special train in the offing but nothing definite as yet.

• • •

"Huck" Reeves' hit, while literally a home-run can not be scored officially as anything better than a single. There was some discussion on the hit after the game and after several rule-books had been studied and baseball experts in Toronto contacted the official score stands at 3-2 and Reeves' hit goes as a single. It was a smashing home-run as far as distance was concerned, but the game was in overtime and only one runner crossed the plate. Dicky Fitz went to the showers from third base, while the crowd mobbed Huck as he reached second. To quote Speedy St. Louis, who was like a schoolboy out of school after the win: "We don't give a damn what you score it; a half run was enough."

• • •

It was a grand game to win and it is doubtful if a battle like it has been seen here since the palmy days of the old COBL. Two superb teams were out there battling all the way, not giving or asking quarter and grimly struggling to get that break that hovered in the clouds for 5 extra innings.

• • •

The Hull kids are a grand team. They know all the baseball answers and are every bit as good as their reputation. Any team that eliminates them can well hold high their heads and go on and win the Ontario championship.

• • •

Batawa Shoemen with fire in their eyes at that 8-0 shutout plastered on them by Tommy Pointer and his Port Hopers the other day, were not to be denied in the lakeside town last night and defeated the Hopers 6-4 in the third and deciding game of their Intermediate "A" playdowns.

• • •

Jack Carson and his merry crew from Latta wear broad grins today for they defeated Napanee 12-3 in Gibbardville last night to win the second round of the Intermediate "B" series in two straight games.

• • •

Ho-Hum, we went out of the room for a second and when we came back the fiasco-pardon-fight was over. The Bronx barkeep, tabbed Mauriello made the mistake of making Louis a trifle angry by sending a couple of socks to the sepia puss in the first seconds of the round. Now that isn't being done, even in the best of pugilistic circles. And Joe always polite turned his head, stifled a yawn or two and proceeded to end the proceedings. It took two minutes and nine seconds.

• • •

Now Tami can go back to his bar in the Bronx—if he can stand the gaff. It is quite a place so we're told and once you get near it you can't miss it. Several big neon signs cry out "Tami's Corner."

Inside there's no mistaking the pugilistic flavor. Over the bar is a portrait of Mauriello big as life. There also are pictures of Louis and Conn... but not so large. Below the pictures hang a pair of boxing gloves, gilded for posterity. They're the mittens the Bronx tavern keeper used in plastering Bruce Woodcock. In the restaurant you can get such delicacies as spaghetti, antipasto, prosciutto and, on occasion, Tami Mauriello. That's Italian ham. .the prosciutto, that is, not Tami, or is it?

• • •

Tommy Saffell, Tennessean who plays centre field for Charleston, was lucky enough to escape enemy fire while flying an AAF bomber. But in the South Atlantic loop, suh, the sharpshooters are more accurate! It all started one night when a Columbus, Ga., catcher clipped Saffell in the back of the neck with a peg as Tommy streaked for second. The next night Tommy was again laid low, this time by a pitched ball. The following evening, with shaky legs but a heart of iron, the lad again faced the foe. This time, while racing for second, he was knocked colder than a dead fish with a bullet-like heave by a Macon second-sacker trying for a double. Said thrice-peppered Saffell as he came to in a Charleston hospital: "Oh, for the safety of my bomber!"

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Let me repeat, Pete. There are more than 635 billion different bridge hands to lead from. Consequently, I could go on talking about lead oddities until we inhabit the moon. Maybe longer.

One lead oddity has to do with the lead of a king. It is when you also have the ace of that suit and no other entry to your hand in any other suit. Also when you have a total of five cards in it.

Against a suit contract, you would lead the king from such a five card suit headed by ace and king. But not against a contract in no-trump. Your lead then is the fourth from the best.

It is your opening lead from this hand:

♠7 6 2
♥9 8 4
♦7 6
♣A K 6 5 2

If playing against a contract in some trump suit, you would lead your club king. Because by the time your small clubs establish, the declarer would be able to trump them.

Against a no-trump contract, your lead is the club five. Even if your partner has no more than two clubs, you may later take four tricks in clubs. The same applies if you had K Q instead of A K.

If you are capable of absorbing this and many other lead oddities good for you. If not, you are better off confining yourself to the general basic rule for all leads.

I have wasted much of your time pointing out lead diversions; or, if you prefer, exceptions to the general rule. It is time we took our heads out of the clouds again and got down to basic bidding once more.

In a day or two, we will abandon leads and dive into some of the bidding problems you may encounter. Before we hit the big stuff, it may be well to review the elementary bidding subjects.

So, tell your friends they can start their bridge from here. Some of the review may do you some good, too.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Sept. 19 —(AP)— When California shows off its bathing suits, it doesn't fool around.

For instance, Designer Cole of California had a few suits he wanted to exhibit, so what did he do? He chartered a train and brought 125 fashion writers and experts from the East "westward to the sea."

"Westward to the sea," Eh? Well, as far as they got was Pasadena, which is 30 miles from the Pacific. But there at the Huntingdon Hotel was performed a show which even Hollywood would envy.

Under a clouded sky, the travellers sipped champagne and attended a formal dinner. Then they were ushered to the hotel pool, where the big show started. The performance began in a flurry of blank verse and ballet, accompanied by a full orchestra. Then it got down to business — the bathing suits.

If these models are any indication, bathing suits are going to be even shorter. Designed for next season, they show much more than was generally seen on the beaches this summer. The suits are principally two-piece, and reveal considerably more hip, than in the past. In fact, some of the girls modeling them looked quite uncomfortable exposed to the cool California night.

Al Jolson should be very happy about this time, for Columbia has fashioned as fine a tribute as anyone could hope for in his lifetime. "The Jolson Story" has turned out to be bang-up entertainment, ranking with the great "Yankee Doodle Dandy."

Movie goers may be surprised at first to hear Jolson's voice coming out of Larry Parks' mouth, but the illusion is successful. Larry does a fine job in a richly sentimental film.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

New York, Sept. 19 —(CP)— Three guys who fought in the prelims to the Louis—Mauriello tiff last night were named "Aicher," Bensik" and Schott".... two minutes and nine seconds after the main event started, Mauriello probably thought all three names applied to him.... at that, Tami provided more action in the next-to-shortest fight on Louis' ring record than Billy Conn did in eight rounds....when he climbed into the ring, Mauriello pretended to let go a punch at Rocky Graziano, who was waiting to be introduced. Maybe he should have gone right on from there without waiting for Joe.

Stadium Boots

If it means anything, Jim Braddock, who gave up the title to Louis nine years ago, sat in the working press section. Jack Dempsey, one of the all-time great champs, was in the $30 seats some 20 rows from the ring... a stir in the back of the field seats during the semi-final brought promoter Mike Jacobs to see if the fuss was any improvement on what Freddie Schott and Freddy Randolph were showing in the ring... after that one ended, announcer Balogh intoned: "The winner is Schott." And echoes came back from the crowd: "He should be."

Ouch!

Tami Mauriello devoted his last evening before the Louis fight watching a movie. Its title was "The Killers."

AT THE BELLE — William Powell, Esther Williams and Angela Lansbury form the love triangle in "The Hoodlum Saint," M.G.M.'s unusual film featuring James Gleason, Lewis Stone, "Rags" Ragland and Slim Summerville. Tom Neale and Barbara Hale are the romantic interest in "First Man in Tokyo," the second feature attraction.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was reeding her paper and pop was reeding his, saying, Well, we'd better stick around, it looks as if television is just around the corner.

Who says so? ma said, and pop said, Seabrook Rivers, he's the president of a broadcasting company so he may be slitely prejudiced, but then on the other hand he ought to know.

I hope he's wrong, that's all I can say, ma said, and pop said, But for Peet sake, television is the dreem of the ages and the crowning miracle of modern science.

I dont care, it cant be too far off to suit me, ma said, and pop said, But my dear, television is going to give us all the arts in one—music and dancing and poetry and the drama, all in terrific Tecknicolor. Our eyes will be bathed by bewty while our ears are washed by lovely sound. What more do you want? he said.

No more, ma said. I dont even want that much, she said, and pop said, Do you mean to say you're not thrilled by the thought of your favorite merder mistery coming alive before your very eyes? You'll not only hear the screems, you'll see the screemers. You'll actually watch the gilty expressions flit from face to face as sispicion terns from one innocent caracter to another. You'll be in the seventh heaven of bafflement. Doesn't that fill you with anticipation? he said.

William, if you really want to know, I dread the day, ma said. How am I going to injoy my misteries and get my sewing done at the same time if I have to use my eyes as well as my ears on the radio? she said.

Yee gods, pop said.

And he got in back of the sporting page and stayed there.

MINK COAT

CHAPTER 7

"I know, darling, but I wasn't here." They all called each other "darling," these women. Even when they'd just met each other they started right in with "darling." Even when, as in this case, they had some reason to distrust and dislike each other.

"You were in Florida?"

"But I didn't hear it there. No, I was in Minneapolis, where Mama lives—horrible place, and I didn't know anyone, and what with Mama's terrible nurses and awful servants, and my brother Harry's wife there trying to get Mama to alter her will..."

There was more of this, for the countess was nervous and was instinctively avoiding silences, but presently Isabel could ask:

"And the Count—Count della Farese, where is he?"

"He's in Italy," said his ex-wife briskly, "and I hope a machine gun gets him. Avery was there," she went on, on a tendered note, "when Arturo and I were having the very worst of our troubles—I mean, striking me right before the servants—dozens of old family servants—and Avery coming in divinest figger I ever saw on a man—old friend—eighth birthday party in fact—it was right then and there—I was seven—that we said someday we'd be little man and wife—"

And the countess, overcome by bitter-sweet recollection , burst into tears.

"I knew it was an old friendship," Isabel said, swallowing. "You bore me," she added, in her heart.

"She bores me," she said aloud again, when she was alone. She thought that the countess must have been pretty once. Now she was too thin and sharp-looking.

."Your marriage was too much for the Countess Farese, Avery, she told him.

"Pidgy Parsons? Is she still round here? I thought she was going back to the Florida place."

"She may be. She's here with the Harmons."

"Like her?" Avery was unpacking a suitcase, throwing great sheepskin coats and crumpled sweaters in every direction. "Damn it, that pin is lost," he said.

"Here are pins."

"Part of a gun, honey."

"Avery, was Countess della Farese pretty?"

"Nope. Cute little face. Did you get onto her build? Men used to trail her through Rome on account of her legs and that gold hair."

"Dyed gold."

"Yep, I guess it is now. But lord, you ought to have seen them one night in Rome, when I took her to a box at the opera. Just a few fellers in the box, and this girl sitting right out in front in blue velvet—it seems blue velvet does something to Italian men—here it is. Gosh, I'm glad to find that!"

"Was that before she left her husband?"

"She'd left him, she was on her way home for a divorce."

"Oh. Where was she staying?"

"Some hotel, I guess. The Italian women couldn't stand her. There's no divorce there, you know...Yep. that's the pin." Avery squinted at some small gun part held to the light. "As a matter of fact," he said, "she's not divorced from Della Farese, not according to Italian law. An interesting point that I was rather glad to get hold of a little later."

"Why glad to get hold of it, Avery?"

"Well, she sent me a letter from Minneapolis or St. Paul, or wherever her people live, that kind of indicated that she expected me to come through," said Avery, half absently, still busy with oiled rods and steel hammers.

"Marry her?"

"That was the big idea. I had Wilson draft an answer and copied it. I said that in my eyes she was still Arturo della Farese's wife, and she had my best wishes for a happy future after the war. You could have published it on the front page of the Examiner."

"Avery, she must have hated you! If she really expected—if something you'd said or written her—"

"Listen. I didn't write or say anything. She was a married woman when I met her again, after years when we hadn't seen each other. I was crazy about her for a while and she was crazy about me, and that's all there was to it."

"She's still crazy about you."

"That's her pose."

It evidently didn't worry him at all, so why, Isabel reflected, should it worry her? This sort of thing was an inevitable part of marrying a rich bachelor. After all, this wasn't her first love, either.

"Has she children, Avery?"

"Has who?" He was out of sight now, stacking guns and gear away in a deep closet.

"The countess."

"Yep, I think she has. A boy—he must be fifteen or so. He's in Italy. She dropped the whole outfit."

"I don't see how she could."

"I'll bet my old Purdy gun is in here somewhere," said Avery. Nothing more was said of his affairs of the heart.

Why should the thought of Pidgy della Farese come between her and the happiness of this particular peaceful breakfast hour? Isabel wondered he sighed, put aside her paper for the farewell embraces of her daughters.

"What are they doing now, Yelta?"

"Dare teet', matam, and den dey help me make der bets."

"Oh yes, I know that—but afterward?"

"Den ve go down to do sent box."

"And is little Walter coming over?"

"He got blug on his sweater," said Pussy.

"Oh, dear. Nosebleed?"

"He kide," Catherine contributed.

"I should think he might."

Isabel laughed and went about her usual morning round through the spacious old house. It was an enormous place, old-fashioned, cumbersome, elegant. It had been built sixty years earlier, in the era of bulging bay windows and balustraded porches. The cupola tower rose high above eucalyptus branches; firs and laurels reflected themselves in the heavy plate-windows of the lower story.

Every window was shining like crystal, every crossed and recrossed lace curtain was spotless; sunshine slanted pleasantly in to the housekeeping regions, was tempered to narrow slits and lines through the great parlors and library and halls.

Standing about amid the handsome heavy chairs and tables were Nubian girls holding clusters of grapes aloft and Neapolitan boys in tattered garments releasing marble birds from marble cages. On the mantels were dainty Dresden figures of ballerinas in ruffled porcelain embroidery petticoats; lamps stood on onyx pedestals; draperies swept tent-like from high varnished cornices and ballooned on the rich dark rugs.

Everywhere was order and richness, dark rugs, polished woodwork, plants and bowls of flowers. The stairway was twelve feet wide, it rose to a square landing dividend, and went on tipward in two wide flights. It was lighted by church windows that threw green and red reflections across the red stair carpeting, and delighted the small Hardisty girls like pools of jewels. On the landing palms spread their delicate fountains of green to the warm multicolored glow; there were many palms in the glass-roofed porch into which the dining room opened, and begonias like limp tassels of soft velvet bloomed in rows of pots against the porch window sills.

Other women had modern homes; Isabel had seen some of them, and sometimes she and Avery talked of the time when they would build one, hidden away under the trees all about. But meanwhile he liked this familiar old place, and she was oddly proud of it. Spanish houses all tiled mellowed red roof and shady patio, long plaster walls and iron grilles, were fascinating, and the new-old farmhouse type, with plentiful porches plentiful display of white paint and window boxes, were charming, too. There were correct colonial mansions and more than one French chateau, gray and solid, with mansard roof and walled courtyard.

But none of these had the air of heavy peace and security, of dignity and long-established comfort, that the old Latimer place had, and on a morning like this, when as its chatelaine she made her rounds, glancing at the flowers Edna was arranging in the big pantry, speaking to Yeats about the squeaky upstairs door and to Fong about a visiting child for the children's lunch tomorrow, Isabel was pleasantly conscious of it. "Laurel Lawn" was sure of itself. It did not have to chop and change with every altered fashion.

Housekeeping in this place was merely a joke. Fong, in the kitchen, decided what the family should eat, and Fong Wah, his son, duly went to market and bargained for it. All bills went to the offices of John Wilson, at the Bamberger Canneries, and were paid without question. It was not for Isabel, so recently come into the household, to worry about butter shortages or remind anyone that asparagus was in season. But she did walk through the clean kitchen region now and then, nodding at the white-clad Orientals, and asking amiably if everything was all right.

Similarly smart, trim little Norwegian Edna kept the upper floors in immaculate order; Frank or the Mexican boy who helped him, brought in the flowers and swept porches, and old Mamie puttered about in the background, coming up the back stairs with armfuls of linen, washing vases in obscure laundry-like alcoves, kneeling with rags beside bathtubs, sewing beside a sun-flooded window in the third-floor hallway. There was no smallest crevice where any household task was neglected or left for Isabel's doing. She was free for social engagements.

Almost everyday had its luncheon invitation from one group of new women friends or another; sometimes they all knitted. Sometimes they played bridge, and once or twice Isabel played with them. But she speedily learned that she did not play well, and was secretly shocked when after the first game some briskly scoring matron said simply, "That's eighty-one dollars that you're out, Isabel. Give Lucy the check."

After that she left them to their game, and after a little dawdling beside a fire or on a warm terrace with the other women, would perhaps walk home, enjoying the quiet afternoon, the exquisite gardens through which the roads curved and turned.

But there was much time on her hands—too much time. With her bureaus and closets filled with orderly lines of exquisite garments, shopping had lost some of its flavor. After the war, of course, when she could buy things in London and Paris and on Fifth Avenue, it would be different. Just now her appetite for possessions appeared to be sated.

She was lunching at Yvonne Prichett's at one. The clocks now stood at twenty minutes past nine. Yeats the butler came up to tell Edna something, and Edna returned from the hall with a sheet still in her hands to say that Mr. Tait had telephoned from San Juan to say that he and Mr. Latimer were going on to Los Angeles and would telephone Mrs. Latimer in the morning.

Relayed in this fashion the announcement seemed to have lost all personal value. Isabel asked if Mr. Tait had wanted to speak to her. No, Edna answered, flinging the sheet over the bed in a great swoop, he had said he was in a hurry and please to give Mrs. Latimer that message.

"And Mary Saterlee's dinner tonight," Isabel reflected. No help for it: it happened before and it would happen again. She must make apologies for Avery's absence. Mary would immediately cast about for a man to take Avery's place; any worn-out old derelict would do, but the table must be balanced. A resentful red color came up in her cheeks. It was too bad to have beautiful clothes and be asked to exclusive and magnificent parties, and have the whole thing spoiled by the absence of one's husband! Everyone knew that she and Avery had been married less than a year; that theirs had been a sudden, impulsive affair. Avery's casual neglect would be interpreted as a sign of change on his part. His old friends loved gossip as the breath of life; they spared no one: this would supply them with most welcome ammunition.

If she went she would be pestered with questions. If she didn't go she would dine alone in the formidable big dining room, with Yeat's noiseless feet moving about in the shadows behind her.

"If this," Isabel thought,, looking discontentedly at her reflection in the mirror, "is what being—being—well, being good-looking gets you, what happens to plain women?"

She threw herself down on the chaise longue when Edna had finished with the room, and reached for a paper-covered thriller. Later she would call Mary—even while her eyes were following the printed lines her thoughts were busy talking to Mary.

"This is so maddening, Mary, but Avery's been delayed down south somewhere...I don't know, it was Ronny Tait who telephoned me...Oh no, they're all right, but they can't get back. And meanwhile, I've had this—I've had this wire from my father....certainly I have a father, down in Sutro's Mill, and he's not very well—he wants to see me...."

MUSICIANS' STRIKE SETTLED

Chicago, Sept. 18 — (AP) — James C. Petrillo, president of the A.F.L. American Federation of Musicians said yesterday that a musicians' strike against 41 New York City hotels had been settled and that the musicians would go back to work tonight in New York and other United States cities affected by sympathy walkouts. Terms of the settlement of the 15-day walkout, Mr. Petrillo said, included a 20 per cent salary increase.

WOULDN'T TAKE ANYTHING FOR RESULTS SYNTONA GAVE

"My Friends All Tell Me How Well I Look," Says This Man. Relieved Stomach Disorders and Rheumatic Pains. Sleeps Better; Feels Fine.

MR. GEORGE STEINHOFF

"I wouldn't take anything for the good results I got by taking Syntona and I want you to know how pleased I am with this medicine," said Mr. George Steinhoff, Oil Springs, Ontario, in a recent interview.

"For years I was troubled with stomach disorders and I have taken gallons of medicine, but in spite of everything I suffered with indigestion, gas and sour acid risings after my meals. The gas pressed up in my chest making me short of breath and often became so bad at night I couldn't sleep. In the mornings when I got up spots darted before my eyes and I felt awful tired. My tongue was always coated.

"Finally, about a year ago, rheumatic pains settled in my joints, limbs and muscles. They felt stiff and sore and hurt whenever I moved. Many days I ached all over.

"Several months ago I began taking Syntona and since then I am so improved it is hard to realize. The gas, sourness and indigestion are cleared up so I can enjoy all my meals once more. The rheumatic aches and pains are practically all gone away and I am now able to get more sound, restful sleep at night. As a result I feel better than for years and all my friends tell me how well I look."

Many people who have used Syntona say it has helped them in this same way. It acts on the stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels, aids in the elimination of excess acids and impurities from the system and promotes better assimilation of food for increased strength and energy.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 19 (CP)—A new weak spell hit the Toronto market around mid-day today and prices slipped back. The indices were down only .34 to .66 for the industrials and mining groups but the weakness increased in the early afternoon. Western oils showed little net change. Turnover was comparatively light at 761,000 shares for the first three hours.

The liquor, paper, food, steel and textile stocks were the weakest of the industrial groups.

McIntyre weakened a point and the cheaper golds held losses down to about 5 to 10 cents. In the basemetals Smelters, Hudson Bay and Noranda were off about a point.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Sept. 19 —(AP)— The stock market averages today dropped to the lowest for the last 18 months on heavy volume notwithstanding intermittent recovery sorties which failed to develop any real stamina.

Dealings, fairly active from the start, picked up speed around mid-day when the ticker tape, for the first time in years, was seven minutes late for a lengthy space as offerings deluged the floor. All departments suffered with losses ranging from one to five or more points near the fourth hour.

Canadian issues were fractionally mixed with Canadian Pacific and Dome off 1-8 and 3-8 respectively while Seagrams gained 1-2 and Lake Shore dropped 1-4.

Warrant Issued For Arrest Of Labor Leader

Quebec, Sept. 18. (CP)—Premier Duplessis announced Wednesday that a warrant has been issued for the arrest of Mrs. Valdimir Bjarnasson (known in Labor circles as Miss Madeleine Parent, Canadian organizer for the United Textile Workers of America, A.F.L. affiliate) in connection with the recent strike at the Valleyfield, Que., plant of Montreal Cottons, Ltd.

Premier Duplessis said the warrant charges subornation of witnesses, frustrating the ends of justice and citing young people to tell mistruths under oath.

Two other officials of the U.T.W.A. were arrested at Valleyfield, Aug. 24 on charges growing out of disturbances during the strike at the plant. Both are on bail awaiting trial. They are R. Kent Rowley, Canadian director and Azelus Beaucage, organizer in Valleyfield.

The woman known as Miss Parent took a leading part in direction of the strike that lasted more than three months and involved 3,000 workers who sought higher wages, reduced hours and a union contract.

Fall news! Two-tone raincoat with drawstring-waist

It's the "Soft Look" in Fall Sports Clothes

It's the "soft look" that makes fashion news in the fall sportswear picture! Noted in everything from your favorite casual dresses to your beloved separates, it is slated for the front ranks of fashion. It is achieved via deep dolman sleeves, broad shoulders, soft details—all of which are so important throughout the fall fashion picture. You'll see the "soft look" in lumberjack dresses with beautifully smooth broad shoulders, deeper armholes, cinched-in belted waistlines.

This effect is also noted in two-piece casuals. Your favorite jumper looks like new this fall with deeper armholes, broad shoulders, inset waistbands. Blouses definitely go soft! Smooth wool jerseys are particularly smart and flattering with new wingspread sleeves, high necklines, ¾ or fitted sleeves. Dirndl skirts with slim front fullness or fly-front slim skirts are equally smart with these blouses — perfect partners for early fall days! Of course good looking classics are fashion perennials and will be the backbone of busy wardrobes. Foremost exponent of sports clothes, the college girl picks separates as her big favorite because she knows they add up to wardrobe versatility — plus! The blazer jacket rates first place because it's as good looking, young and wearable atop skirts as it is with dresses. Another favorite is the lumberjack. Made of supple wool jersey with drawstring waistline and collarless neckline, it doubles as a sweater and can also be worn atop a blouse for added warmth. As for skirts, they are definitely college "musts!" Noted are the fly-front skirt, the gob skirt with double breasted button accent for a slim hipline. The young all-around pleated skirt holds its own too! The kiltie skirt in dark clan plaids makes a grand "extra" skirt, very figure-flattering in side-wrapped fringed style. The dirndl skirt is definitely the top favorite with college girls! Young and wonderfully flattering, it features fitted high waistband, peg pockets, slim front fullness.

Shirt and Skirt News

Putting two good fashions together, American designers give your shirt and skirt a brand new look! This by posing a wingspread dolman sleeve collarless blouse atop a draped front skirt—wonderful for dramatic color contrast! For example, a lime blouse atop a slim black skirt adds up to a perfect costume for daytime and impromptu dates! Another smart combination would be a black blouse teamed with a checked slim skirt — perfect for more casual wear. When it comes to sweaters, the newest way to wear yours is tucked-in! More sophisticated and flattering, the tucked-in sweater plus slim skirt is definitely 1946! Added fashion news is noted in the wide belts which are featured to be worn with them. Many of these belts are real conversation pieces! College girls like them wide, with jewelled studs or intricate strappings for more eye appeal! Sweater colors are many with white, gray, yellow, coral, soft blue, soft green and black the leading favorites. Sweaters and skirts that are perfectly matched in color, with contrast achieved via separate jackets and skirts that add up to little suits are again fashion stars with the cardigan jacket the popular choice . . . Good looking, grey flannel, shetlands and wool flannel are favorite fabrics. Smart sturdy corduroy jackets and skirts are also noted in rich autumn shades. For date-time, you'll simply love the little velveteen jackets that can be mated with black wool spirts — wardrobe glamour for little!

TRUMAN REMOVES WALLACE FROM CABINET POST

CONFERENCE UPHOLDS BIG FOUR AGREEMENTS

Italian-Yugoslav Boundary, Borders Of Trieste Fixed

Every Effort to Revise Frontier Balked by Vote

By JOSEPH DYNAN

Paris, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Paris peace conference upheld today the Big Four agreements on the Italian-Yugoslav boundary and the borders of the future free state of Trieste, as the Italian political and territorial commission beat down in vote after vote every effort to revise the proposed frontiers.

Faithful to her Big Four commitments, Russia cast her ballot against the boundary revisions, even though some of them were proposed by the Slav bloc, which she frequently has backed.

Edvard Kardelj, Deputy Premier of Yugoslavia, declared after the voting that he "regretted the commission preferred the method of the vote instead of conciliation" and insisted that his earlier remarks, in which he declared Yugoslavia would not sign a treaty which she considered "unfair," be entered in the commission's records.

Balloted 11 Times

The commission balloted 11 times on proposals to change the borders of the internationalized, free area of the port of Trieste, fixed by the Big Four along the so-called French line and bounded on the north by a line drawn from Duino to the French line, voting down all of them, except one, by a 13 to 5 count.

While Russia, Poland, Czechoslovakia, the Ukraine and Yugoslavia voted for the proposed changes in most cases and Belgium and Ethiopia abstained, on the other proposal, one by South Africa to enlarge the area so as to include Pola and other Italian cities down the Istrian Peninsula, the vote was 12 to 6, with Canada, Australia, Brazil, New Zealand and The Netherlands supporting South Africa. Belgium and China abstained.

Remain Faithful

In that vote it was the other three Big Four members who remained faithful to their commitments, since the South African proposal embodies the original ideas of Britain, France and the United States on the border question.

Czechoslovakia earlier had sought to avoid a showdown on the border issues by proposing establishment of a special subcommission composed of Canada, White Russia, China, Ethiopia and Yugoslavia to work out a "stable solution" satisfactory to all, but that was beaten 10 to 7, with Belgium, France and Ethiopia abstaining, and India and the Slav countries, including Russia, voting for it.

Ethiopia Votes For Change

The other amendments, proposed by Yugoslavia and White Russia, would have moved the Italian-Yugoslav border westward at Italy's expense and trimmed the Free State area to the city limits of Trieste. Yugoslavia joined Belgium in abstaining from the vote on the second idea after first voting in favor. Ethiopia voted for the change.

The decisions were foreshadowed yesterday when the commission turned down a Brazilian attempt to move the Italian-Yugoslav border eastward in Italy's favor north of Trieste.

Rejects Greek Amendment

The military commission also went down the line for another Big Four agreement when it rejected, 10 to 6, a Greek amendment to reduce the Naval strength allowed Bulgaria by the Foreign Ministers Council. There were 5 abstentions — Belgium, Brazil, Ethiopia, Norway and The Netherlands. Voting for the amendment were Canada, Australia, Greece, India, New Zealand and South Africa.

The Greek proposal would have limited the Bulgarian navy to 2,500 men and 3,250 tons of ships, as compared with the Big Four agreement on 3,500 men and 7,250 tons.

A companion Greek effort to strip the Bulgarian air force down to 40 combat aircraft and 1,600 men likewise was rejected 13 to 3 by the military commission. The Big Four draft allows the Bulgarians 70 combat planes and 5,200 men.

Brig.-Gen. J. D. Balmer, told the commission that Bulgaria recently had organized a "frontier militia" under its interior ministry. He warned that an article in the treaty forbids military training outside the armed forces, and said this militia would become illegal when the treaty goes into effect.

The Bulgarian political and territorial commission meantime tackled the touchy question of Bulgarian demands against Greece, which past week precipitated a walk-out by the Slavic bloc.

Discover Amazing New Body Chemical Which Can Grow Giants or Dwarfs

By RENNIE TAYLOR

Berkeley, Calif., Sept. 20—(AP)—The amazing power of a body chemical to regulate the size of an animal, producing a giant or a dwarf to order, was demonstrated here today by a group of University of California scientists.

Laboratory rats, which became dwarfs because their supply of the magic substance was cut off while they were young, grew into giants in a few weeks when given injections of the chemical. They were exhibited as examples of the progress made by Dr. Herbert M. Evans and his associates in purifying the substance, which is extracted from the pituitary glands of slaughtered cattle.

Dr. Evans and a co-worker, Dr. Joseph A. Long, discovered the substance, a hormone, about 25 years ago but purification was achieved only recently.

With sufficient quantities of the substance, scientists probably could regulate the size of human beings, although they do not venture to say so without having laboratory proof. Despite the many years of work by Dr. Evans there is not enough of the growth hormone in existence to experiment on humans.

During the years of research Dr. Evans and his associates determined that pituitary gland, which lies at the base of the brain and is present in man and most animals, secretes segeral hormones which regulate bodily functions.

The growth hormone is one. Still another pituitary substance regulates the adrenal glands and is capable of causing dwarfism.

All these hormones are protein molecules, which are so complicated that there is little chance of their ever being synthesized in the chemical laboratory. Dr. Evans uses beef glands because they are the cheapest available source of these amazing substances.

One pound of gland produces only a microscopic amount of the hormones, and even then they have to be purified by a long and complicated process.

BUILDINGS SWAY AFTER ROCK FALL AT U.S. FALLS

Huge Portion of Brink Tumbles Down 168 Foot Face of The Cataract

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Sept. 20. (AP)— A huge portion of the brink of the American Falls collapsed today, shaking this city with earthquake intensity as it tumbled down the 168-foot face of the cataract.

Witnesses said a section of the rock wall 120 feet in length at the top and about 30 feet across at the bottom of the falls tumbled into the gorge shortly after 11 a.m., E.D.T.,—with a terrific roar.

They reported that it was on the American side of the V-shaped section which broke off in 1942.

Tony Guinta, a member of the Niagara Falls Gazette staff, said: "Our buildings shook like a Maple leaf in a breeze."

Residents in both the Ontario and New York cities on opposite sides of the river reported buildings were "shaken up severely" by the shock. Many thought it was an earthquake.

Rockfalls in recent years have left the crest of the Falls a rough and ragged line. One of the biggest slides of its ledge came in 1934 when an estimated 200,000 tons of rock dropped with a dull roar into Niagara gorge.

Prior to 1931 the American Falls had been comparatively straight but that year thousands of tons of rock thundered down the bank, putting a noticeable crimp in its contour.

The Falls underwent further change in 1941 when a chunk of rock 10 by 18 feet broke off on the American side 100 feet north of Luna Island.

But until today the American Falls had lacked the horseshoe curve which characterized the Horseshoe Falls on the Canadian side of the river. The latest rockfall, according to pictures taken by a newspaper photographer at Niagara Falls N.Y., gave the American Falls a horseshoe contour

Pleasure to Go Thru Red Light Says Archbishop

Washington, Sept. 20—(AP) Most Rev. Geoffrey Fisher, Archbishop of Canterbury, who wears gaiters because his predecessors used to do their work on horseback, has ridden 80 miles an hour through an American city.

Disclosing this in an address last night the Archbishop said he thought he had better not say which city but that the ride was behind a police escort.

"It thrills me to the marrow everytime I have one," he said of police escorts. "It delights me every time we go through a red light."

U.S. Denounces Yugoslav Charges of Mistreatment As 'False, Exaggerated'

Washington, Sept. 20 —(AP)—The United States today made public a note denouncing "false and exaggerated" charges of improper treatment of Yugoslav officers.

(Britain's ambassador to Belgrade delivered an almost identical note, London dispatches said.)

Simultaneously, the United States demand co-operation from Marshal Tito's government in efforts to halt "obstructive and terroristic activities of pro-Slav elements" in the Anglo-American zone of disrupted Venezia Giulia.

In the note, made public three days after it was handed to the Yugoslav ministry of foreign affairs by American Ambassador Patterson, the United States emphasized that it "will not be deflected from its course" in maintaining a "fair and impartial administration" in the zone under control.

"At the same time," the statement said, however, "it must once again deplore in the strongest terms the failure of the Yugoslav government to accord in this task the co-operation to which the United States government believes itself entitled."

The 1,700-word statement constituted the Unitew States' answer to two notes of protest from Tito's government — one dated July 26, the other Aug. 14 — which spelled out accusations of "improper treatment" of Yugoslav officers and men in the Anglo-American zone.

Allegations and the United States replies included:

1. The charge—that the "civil and military police in Trieste made no attempt to prevent an attack upon the premises of the Yugoslav war booty commission, and while taking no action against persons who attacked this building, arrested Yugoslav officers and men."

The reply—an "entirely false interpretation upon the facts of the matter. Investigation has shown that the attack...was one of a number of sporadic outbreaks of violence occurring simultaneously and provoked both by pro-Slav and pro-Italian elements... One Yugoslav officer and two Yugoslav men were arrested. As they admitted that they had fired on the crowd, thereby fatally injuring a civilian, there can be no doubt that their arrest was abundantly justified."

2. The charge—that there were "six other instances of alleged failure of the civil and Allied military police to protect the persons and property of Yugoslav citizens in Trieste."

The reply—that the "fullest investigation possible" of three of the cases "failed to reveal any independent evidence that these allegations are well founded. The remaining three have proved on investigation to be false in part and exaggerated throughout."

3. The charge — that on August 9, a "Maj. Despot, the political commissar of a Yugoslav detachment in zone A, together with another Yugoslav officer and soldier, was assaulted by Allied military police, and was not protected from further assaults by 'Fascist mobs.' "

The reply — "In view of the gross provocation offered by Maj. Despot and his companion, both in deliberately and unnecessarily interfering in an area of disturbance, and more particularly in threatening the police and the crowd with a hand grenade, and in resisting all attempts by the police to conduct them to safety, the United States government cannot admit that any blame whatever attaches to the members of the civil police concerned."

GENERAL COUNCIL OF UNITED CHURCH ENDS SESSION

Vancouver Chosen as Site of the 13th Council in 1948

By GEORGE BURMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Sept. 20 — (CP) — Ministerial and lay commissioners to the 12th General Council of the United Church of Canada today returned to their homes across the Dominion and in Newfoundland, following the completion last night of their nine-day biennial session at Erskine-American Church.

The heavy agenda of the church's highest court — which met on a three-sessions-a-day schedule under the chairmanship of the new Moderator, Rt. Rev. Thomas W. Jones of Montreal — covered a wide range of topics dealing with doctrine, church policy and social questions.

More than 270 commissioners attended, 140 laymen and 13 women.

Vancouver was chosen as the site of the 13th General Council in 1948.

Highlights of Council

Highlights of the 12th General Council included:

Re-union: A plan described as a first step towards re-union with the Church of England in Canada, embodying the achievement of a mutually acceptable ministry, was commended for further study; the council was instructed to implement in 1947 a report containing the basis of agreement for union with the Canada Conference of the Evangelical Church.

Marriage—The report of a special commission heard by Chief Justice J. C. McRuer of the Ontario Supreme Court outlined the history of Christian marriage; "mixed marriages" between Protestants and Roman Catholics were condemned; opposition was expressed to widening the grounds for divorce. Commended for further study were conclusions regarding the remarriage of divorced persons.

Gambling — Endorsation was made of the stand of previous councils against all forms of gambling.

T.L.C. DECLARES ITSELF FREE AND INDEPENDENT

Express Sincere Desire to Remain on Friendly Relations With A.F.L. of U.S.

Windsor, Sept. 20 (CP)—The Trades and Labor Congress at its 61st convention today declared itself independent and autonomous, at the same time expressed its "most sincere desire for continuance of its close fraternal relationship of long standing with the American Federation of Labor."

Adoption of the resolution, which met only minor opposition, was endorsation of action of Percy R. Bengough, T.L.C. President, in refusing a demand by the American Federation of Labor for expulsion of the International Association of Machinists.

The machinists union had been expelled by the A.F.L. for non payment of dues. Mr. Bengough, who is a member of the machinists union, said these conditions did not apply in Canada and the T.L.C. had no intention of taking orders from the A.F.L.

Before the resolution on autonomy came before the convention today Stephen Lyon, Montreal, Canadian Vice-President of the machinists, said reports his union was about to affiliate with the C.I.O. in the United States were incorrect.

"We want to assure you that at no time have we contemplated nor have we any desire to join the C.I.O.," he said. "We are still A.F.L.-minded and we are still hopeful that we will straighten out our differences. We realize that is where we belong and it's in our best interest to be there."

Mr. Bengough said adoption of the resolution "clearly establishes the sovereign rights of this organization."

The preamble to the resolution said the demands made by the A.F.L. for expulsion of the machinists would threaten new disunity in the ranks of Canadian labor at a time when efforts should be made for greater unity. Time and time again the A.F.L. had "sought to impose its will" and obtain the adoption of policies by the T.L.C. treating it as if the Canadian was a junior American body.

STELCO MAKES SURPRISE MOVE FOR SETTLEMENT

Distributes Ballots To 4,831 Employees For Vote on Desire To Return to Work

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 20. — (CP)—The Steel Company of Canada has distributed ballots to its 4,831 employees to determine the number who wish to return to work, it was announced today.

The ballots are to be returned to W. H. Lovering, Registrar of Deeds, who volunteered to count them as a public service.

Accompanying the ballots is a letter from H. G. Hilton, Stelco president, emphasizing that neither the company nor the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) would see the ballots or know how any employee voted.

The company made this surprise announcement today as police launched an investigation of what they said they suspected were arson attempts against east-end homes of two non-striking Stelco employees. Gasoline was used in both cases, police said.

Stelco is one of three companies against which the United Steelworkers called a wages-hours strike July 15.

Mr. Hilton's letter accompanying the ballots outlined the company stand on the Union's demand.

The letter reads in part:

"Notwithstanding the company's sincere and earnest desire to bring an end to the conditions which brought about the strike, there is a limit beyond which it cannot reasonably be expected to go. One of the purposes of this letter is to tell you frankly and plainly that this limit has been reached."

The company agreed not to discriminate against any employee because he remained away from work during the strike, Mr. Hilton said. It offered a wage increase of 10 cents an hour to all hourly, tonnage and piece-work employees, retroactive to April 1.

This offer, combined with additional increases recommended by the Dominion government, would average about 12 cents an hour.

The company agreed to pay time and a half for time worked on six statutory holidays a year. A week's vacation would be given after one year's service, two weeks after five years and three after 25 years.

BOXER FATALLY STABBED

Montreal, Sept. 20. (CP) — Lester John Velez, 23-year-old boxer from North Merrick, L.I., N.Y., was fatally stabbed during an argument with a friend in an actors' rooming house here today and an actor appearing at a Montreal night club is in hospital with what police say is a self-inflicted wound.

In hospital with a police guard at his bed is William (Bill) Acorn, 22, of Providence, R.I.

Police said he stabbed himself in the throat after Velez died in the top-floor hallway of the rooming house on West-Central Crescent Street.

Pending an inquest no charges have been laid.

British Coastal Resorts Battered, Floods Reported in Many Sections

London, Sept. 20 (CP cable)—Storms battered coastal resorts today and floods were reported in many sections of England as the worst summer weather in memory struck fresh blows at harvesting.

Yorkshire experienced serious flood conditions and harassed farmers encountered further delays in gathering vital crops.

"The whole outlook is now disastrous, not only for this year's harvest but also for the stock feeding in winter and for next year's harvest as we should be getting the land ready now," said G. P. Adamson, Chairman of the Bridlington Branch of the National Farmers Union.

A big area around Hebden Bridge in Yorkshire was turned into a lake when the rivers Hebden and Calder overflowed after rainfall. Streets were four feet deep in water, traffic was at a standstill and factories and schools closed.

Poultry, grain and timber floated down the swollen rivers and many householders were evacuated. At Dewsbury, Yorkshire, the market place was flooded and roads blocked while at Huddersfield many families were without fires because of flooded basements.

In many districts up to two inches of rain fell in 12 hours with no immediate sign of a let-up. Sixty-mile gales churned the English Channel and blew down trees and fences along the south coast. At Filey, Yorkshire, the coast guard reported a wind blowing so hard they could barely stand. The Scilly Islands had a 90-mile wind accompanied by heavy rain.

President States There Will Be No Change in Policy

Has 'Complete Confidence' In State Secretary Byrnes

By CLYDE BLACKBUR
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 20—(CP)—President Truman today remove Commerce Secretary Wallace from his Cabinet as he chose a united stand on American foreign policy instead of a solid political fron at home.

Mr. Wallace bowed out with the terse comment: "I shall continue to fight for peace." His aides told reporters, however, he would "make no campaign speeches this fall."

It was evident Mr. Byrnes had taken the stand yesterday — when Mr. Truman conferred with him by Paris-Washington teletype — that Mr. Wallace's agreement of Wednesday to keep quiet on foreign policy until after the Paris conference was not sufficient atonement for the breach of Cabinet solidarity Mr. Wallace disclosed in an address at New York last week.

While solidifying American foreign policy abroad, the Cabinet upheaval was viewed as presaging a possible split in the Democratic party's fight for Congressional seats this November.

Previously, the administration had been relying heavily on Mr. Wallace to corral large sections of the Labor and "Left Wing" vote in this fall's campaign.

Mr. Truman firmly and formally declared to a press conference that there is to be no change in the government's foreign policy and that he has "complete confidence" in State Secretary Byrnes and the delegation representing the United States at the Paris peace conference.

The President said that there was a "fundamental conflict" between Mr. Wallace's "views on foreign policy and those of the administration."

"We could not," he said, "permit this conflict to jeopardize our position in relation to other countries."

Standing before a jammed press conference, Mr. Truman read his statement slowly. It climaxed a week of furore over foreign policy which began when Mr. Wallace proposed some changes. The President said first he had approved what Mr. Wallace said. Then he declared Saturday that he meant only that he approved Mr. Wallace's right to speak.

President's Statement

Here is Mr. Truman's statement:

"The foreign policy of this country is the most important question confronting us today. Our responsibility for obtaining a just and lasting peace extends not only to the people of this country but to the nations of the world.

"The people of the United States may disagree freely and publicly on any question, including that of foreign policy but the government of the United States must stand as a unit in its relations with the rest of the world.

"I have today asked Mr. Wallace to resign from the cabinet. It had become clear that between his views on foreign policy and those of the administration—the latter being shared, I am sure by many right thinking Americans—there was a fundamental conflict.

"We could not permit this conflict to jeopardize our position in relation to other countries.

"I deeply regret the breaking of a long and pleasant official association, but I am sure that Mr. Wallace will be happier in the exercise of his right to present his views as a private citizen.

"I am confirmed in this belief by a very friendly conversation I had with Mr. Wallace on the telephone this morning.

"Our foreign policy as established by the Congress, the president and the secretary of state remains in full force and effect without change.

"No change in our foreign policy is contemplated. No member in the executive branch of the government will make any public statement as to foreign policy which is in conflict with our established foreign policy. Any public statement on foreign policy shall be cleared with the Department of State. In case of disagreement the matter will be referred to me.

"As I have frequently said I have complete confidence in Mr. Byrnes and his delegation now representing this country at the Paris peace conference.

"Mr. Byrnes consults me often and the policies which guide him and his delegation have my full endorsement."

It was understood Mr. Wallace probably will have an announcement later, but there was no immediate comment. Meantime business went on as usual in his office although the President's announcement hit the department like a bomb shell.

Forrestal Sole Holdover.

With Mr. Wallace out, Navy Secretary Forrestal remains the sole holdover in the Cabinet from President Roosevelt's regime.

Mr. Wallace was secretary of agriculture under the late President for eight years, then moved into the vice-presidency, was shelved when Mr. Roosevelt turned to Mr. Truman for a running mate in 1944, and subsequently re-entered the Cabinet in the commerce post.

Removed from office, Mr. Wallace now is free to speak up and to stump the country, if he chooses, in behalf of the foreign policy he advocates — one which envisions more lenient treatment of Russia.

What the political effects of his removal will be remained for future determination.

Mr. Truman's statement had been in the cards since last night. Word had come from Paris of the grave concern in the American delegation over the apparent divergence of views in the Cabinet over foreign policy.

Mail Carrier Held For $120,000 Theft From Mails

Vancouver, Sept. 20 — (CP)—Postal authorities today prepared to place a formal charge of theft from the mails against 32-year-old C. R. V. Bennett, arrested here following the recovery of nearly $20,000, alleged to have been stolen from a mail pouch, Sept. 4.

Bennett, a mail carrier for a city transfer company, was arrested by R.C.M.P., and postal authorities said all but $120 of the money was found in his home, along with other articles, alleged to have been missing from the mails.

The bag contained $120,000 in cash — two bundles of $50,000 each and one of $20,000. The more valuable packages were not touched.

The authorities disclosed with the arrest of Bennett that the bag, bound for a Victoria bank, had been found in the post office here, slashed open with a knife, and hidden inside another bag. It had been concealed near a loading platform door.

Its disappearance was reported Sept. 5 by the postmaster in Victoria, and immediately police and postal investigators there and in Vancouver started a search which led to the arrest of Bennett.

Bennett is an ex-service man, a former army transport driver. He is married and the father of five children.

Conklin's Midway Will Feature Belleville Fair Next Week

Enjoying the reputation of being the best of its kind in the country, Conklin's Midway will be at the Belleville Fair opening Monday in all the blaze of its colorful glory.

This talented amusement city will have all its former attractions augmented by many new ones. There will be a great array of thrilling rides of all descriptions, the inevitable merry-go-round that delights childish hearts.

There will be mystery shows, beautiful dancing girls, freaks, cowboy acts, mysterious people from all countries of the world and many other attractions that go to make the Conklin shows the best in the country.

Then too, there will be a splendid stage extravaganza in front of the grandstand both afternoon and evening. There will be bands and barkers, the colorful ballyhoo, pink lemonade and hot dogs balloons and other souvenirs and all the "trimmings" that contribute toward the Belleville Fair's reputation of being the best of its kind in the district.

There will be clowns and acrobats, performing dogs and ponies, beautiful dancers, glamorous artists and captivating music in a mirthful merry musical melange that should delight the heart of every fair-goer.

Present indications point to one of the largest attendances in the century-old existence of the exhibition. Exhibitors will be here from all parts of the province and other points. The entry list, officials state, is the largest in years while the quality of the exhibits is well above the average of former years.

Directors are confident that this year's exhibition will far surpass any held before. They have worked long and hard to give the public of this city and district the best in fair attractions and no doubt a record crowd will attend a fair that has long enjoyed an enviable reputation.

Fair Board Holds Final Meeting Before Exhibition

Final arrangements for what is said to be one of the best fairs in the history of the Belleville Agricultural Society were completed Thursday evening at the final meeting of the directors held in Shire Hall.

President Elmer Sandercock told his board that all departments of the fair have been well organized and everything is in readiness for the opening of the exhibition on Monday.

Treasurer Ben Bleecker told the board that the gates, the midway and grandstand will be in charge of capable ticket sellers and collectors. Chairman C. J. Symons of the Attractions Committee reported that attractions this year comprise the best ever procured by the board. They are many and variable and are headed by the grand stage show of Billy Garden and the Hell Drivers of "Lucky" Lott.

The Race Committee comprised of James Cowan, James Barber and Dr. Welbanks stated that the horses will be ready to go on each afternoon of racing. George O. Tice has been named official starter.

Mr. J. Niblock, manager of the Weston Bread Co. here, has donated a special prize of $20 for the best single driving horse. Belleville Hotel Proprietors Associations has donated $100 for special prizes in the various horse classes and a large number of donations have been received from city merchants to be used as prizes in the different classes.

Taxis will be on the grounds and ready for use at all times, the directors were told.

Dry Weather Affects Young Pines Planted

Excessive dry weather of the past two months has caused considerably drying out of young pine trees which were planted last spring near Actinolite by the county of Hastings, according to W. E. Edwards, zone forester, of Napanee.

Over 20,000 pines were planted on abandoned farm land near Actinolite as the nucleus of a county forest and up until two months ago had looked promising, it was stated. The hot sun and dry weather of August and September, have caused many of the trees to die out and considerable re-planting will be necessary.

In an effort to further acquaint district farmers with the service offered by the Department of Lands and Forests, Division of Reforestation, the Napanee zone forester is visiting fairs in the Bay of Quinte District handing out pamphlets and other information on reforestation. At the same time Mr. Edwards is taking orders for seedlings.

The department exhibit also included samples of the various trees which may be had for planting.

Only 50 Per Cent Merchants Answer Questionnaire

Despite the fact that the Retail Merchants Division of the Chamber of Commerce urged an all-out response to the questionnaire submitted to 162 city merchants asking their recorded opinion on Saturday six o'clock closing, only fifty per cent of those contacted sent in replies.

The committee at a special meeting held this morning decided that in view of the fact that the percentage of replies submitted was not a correct indication of the cross section of merchants, no action could be taken on the matter at the present time.

A new questionnaire has been drafted and will be in the hands of merchants within the next day or so. If by an oversight or incompleteness of records any merchant does not receive one of the questionnaires, he or she is requested to record their opinion on a postcard and mail it to the Chamber of Commerce.

The committee made it clear this morning that unless 75 per cent of the merchants vote and that unless 75 per cent of this vote is for a change, no action will be taken.

Merchants are urged to complete the questionnaire and return it not later than Sept. 30.

FOUND STABBED TO DEATH

Chance Incident Led "Lucky" Lott Into Dare-Devil Driving Career

It happened in Pekin, Illinois, about eleven years ago.

Days previous the town had been placarded with gaily colored posters depicting the dare-devil driving of automobiles by death-defying drivers.

The lurid cards brought out the thrills and spills of these brave men.

Came the day and a huge crowd turned out to see the performance. But it proved a complete flop. There was not a thrill in a car load and some of the spectators made no bones about letting the "dare-devils" know their feelings.

Accepted Dare

Two boys stood near the sidelines and their "heckling" of the act was particularly biting. Finally in desperation, one of the troupe dared the youths to "come out and do better."

They did. Their home town people cheered them to the echos as the green youths drove the cars about the grounds with reckless abandon.

The boys were Douglas "Lucky" Lott and Louis "Batter" Crooks, now of the "Lucky" Lott Hell Drivers appearing at the Belleville Fair next Monday.

That incident started the youths, (they are now 25) on a career of thrills that has seen them nudge elbows with the Grim Reaper on several occasions, and taken them twice across the continent.

"Lucky" is a personable young man who talks little about his experiences behind the wheel of one of his death-defying automobiles, and less about the times he spent at the controls of his 8th United States Air Force bomber in the battle-flecked skies over Europe.

Start in Business.

After the Pekin incident, he and his buddy were so impressed with the thrills they got driving the cars, that they decided to branch out for themselves. They pooled their money, borrowed some from "Lucky's" brother and bought themselves two cars.

Today "Lucky" owns 4 shows three of which are travelling in the United States and the one which shows at the Belleville Fair on Monday afternoon and evening only.

He came by his nickname, "Lucky," honestly, he smiles.

"One of the boys was doing his stunt when something went wrong and his car was demolished and he was severely injured. He was rushed to hospital. I did the same thing the next day and the same thing happened to me. The car was completely wrecked but I crawled out of the wreckage without a scratch. From that day on I was dubbed 'Lucky,' and rightly so."

But driving a hurtling car through a solid brick wall, careening wildly over steep ramps and rolling end over end with only a football helmet and a belt for protection is not exactly fun. He has had both ankles crushed, his chest staved in and on two occasions suffered brain concussion.

In the "off" seasons when "Lucky" was not hell-driving, he went to school and college. He is a graduate of Arkansas State University where he starred on the football team and track and field squads.

Played All Big Cities.

He has played all the big cities with his ten-man seven vehicle show. In Soldiers Field, Chicago, 96,000 people thrilled to his stunts. He has appeared in the Polo Grounds, New York; at Wrigley Field, Los Angeles, Miami and Havana.

One of the outstanding stunts of "Lucky's" is to drive a car at breakneck speed up a seven foot ramp, catapult it over a large bus placed lengthwise to the car and plunge with it into several "junkers" or cars piled up in a heap at the end of the bus. He finishes by rolling his car end over end to a stop.

There are twelve stunts in the act which takes about an hour and forty minutes. "Lucky" has the only dare-devil clown in existence and this funny man is an expert stunt artist.

A few years ago "Lucky" married the attractive Betty Murray of Stratford, Ontario. Now there is a little "Lucky" whom the proud father has seen but twice. He is three months old.

The Lott show appears at the Belleville Fair on Monday only with performances scheduled for 2:30 and 8 p.m.

T.L.C. CONVENTION

The regular order of business was thrown out of joint yesterday when delegates heard about the arrest of Madeleine Parent of Montreal — an organizer for the United Textile Workers Union—(A.F.L.)—in connection with the textile strike at Valleyfield, Que.

The resolutions committee drafted an emergency resolution which took some vigorous raps at the Quebec government, and the delegates spent an hour and a half discussing it. The resolution obtained general support but was opposed by A. Martel of Montreal who said criticism should be directed at those responsible for enacting the laws, not at those responsible for enforcing them. He was booed by other delegates.

Reference was made in the resolution to action of authorities in arresting two other textile union officials, Kent Rowley and A. Beaucage, and holding them without bail. They were later released on bail on condition that they remain away from Valleyfield.

Miss Parent, also known as Mrs. Valdimir Bjarnasson, was released on bail of $500 cash at Montreal Wednesday night after surrendering to Provincial Police Monday to answer the warrant taken out for her. Yesterday she was arraigned before Judge T.A. Fainte at Montreal on charges of subornation and impeding justice, and was ordered for preliminary hearing Monday, with bail of $500 continued.

The resolution also directed the Congress executive "to take any and all measures required to put an end to such undemocratic strike-breaking government actions."

Speakers supporting the resolution said Miss Parent's arrest was particularly significant with a vote scheduled to be taken yesterday among the Valleyfield workers.

Jerry Regan of Brantford, a textile union organizer, said the industry was controlled by a monopoly in Quebec. "The tie-up between Blair Gordon (President of Dominion Textiles Ltd.) and Premier Duplessis is a pointed illustration of campaign funds going to the Duplessis machine and holding down the workers in Quebec," he said.

Claims Same Thing in Ont.

J. A. (Pat) Sullivan, T.L.C. Secretary-Treasurer, at a later stage of the discussion said: "We have the same thing in Ontario with Premier Drew and his 'Gestapo'."

Robert Tallon of Ottawa, Labor representative on the Unemployment Insurance Commission, addressing the convention yesterday urged greater participation by labor in the administrative affairs of government.

He said there were frequent difficulties in getting labor representatives to act on Advisory Unemployment Insurance Boards established locally.

The Congress' Education Committee in a report presented by C. J. Oates, Toronto, recommended adoption of a basic educational program which would include establishment of a Dominion Department of Education, Federal assistance in education, a $1,500 minimum salary for teachers and compulsory education at least on a part time basis up to the age of 18.

'Black and White' Show Features Stirling Fair; Record Crowd on Hand

Stirling (Special)—Featuring the showing of over one hundred of the county's finest Holstein cattle by eleven different Hastings breeders, Stirling Fair held Thursday attracted a crowd of 3,000 fair-minded country residents.

In addition to the purebred Holstein "Black and White Day" show, there were exhibits of Ayrshires and Jerseys, while the agricultural and general purpose horse classes were well filled to attract the interest of the horse lover. There were two classes of harness racing and one running race while the ever-popular horse drawing contest saw keen competition from the three teams entered.

Masse Owns Best Bull

Emil Masse, Sidney township, exhibited the bull winning the sr. grand championship while the reserve grand championship sr. Bull was shown by Herbert Watt, also of Sidney township. Jack Burnside of Madoc showed the jr. championship bull while Max Burnside exhibited the reserve junior champion.

The junior champion female was shown by J. McComb, while Delbert McComb showed the reserve junior champion. The junior grand reserve championship were also won by the above exhibitors.

The senior female championship and the grand champion was shown by Philo Harris of Madoc, while Max Burnside of Madoc won the reserve senior championship and also the reserve grand championship with a three year old cow.

Many Breeders Show

County Holstein breeders showing at the fair included Jack Burnside of Madoc; Max Burnside of Madoc; Philo Harris of Madoc; David Hollinger of Stirling; Emil Masse of Belleville; Harry E. Neal of Marmora; Herbert Watt of Foxboro; Delbert McComb and Jack McComb of Bonarlaw, and James Bailey and Gerald Bailey of Rawdon township.

Exhibitor in the Ayrshire classes was Elmer Wood of Crookston while Jerseys were shown by George Jarrell and Son of Corbyville.

Among the horse exhibitors were T. A. Wilson and Company of Denbigh; Jack Black of Belleville; Norman McConnell of Mt. Pleasant and B. Wiggins of Crookston and Mr. Lindsay.

18 Entries in Baby Show

There were eighteen entries in the baby show which again was the centre of attraction for proud and loving mothers. Grant Hagerman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Hagerman of Stirling was adjudged the winner in the six to twelve months class with other prizes being won by Baby Donahue, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Donahue and Lynn Mason, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mac Mason of Springbrook.

In the one to six months class Sam Danford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Danford was the winner with Gail Marie Ray taking second place and the child of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wrightman of Wellman's winning third place. Judge for the baby contest was Dr. William Cornett of Stirling who was ably assisted by Mrs. Houdin and Mrs. Shannon.

Fine specimens of garden produce were on exhibit in the agricultural hall with the junior and school department being well worthy of note. Here garden produce, school work and handicrafts were shown. There was also a fairly large display of garden produce in the regular classes, while the ladies' department was well filled with exhibits, both in the fancy works and womestic science classes.

Nineteen Cheese Shown

Nineteen cheese were shown by seven county cheesemakers. The Hastings county cheese producers association special for white cheese winners were Harold Elliott, West Huntingdon and Horace Palmer, Foxboro, tied for 1st; Harold Henderson of Evergreen; H. McAllister and Tom Heath of Shamrock factory.

A second special for white cheese given by Stirling district factories was won by Elliott; Palmer, Henderson and McAllister. Winners in the best finished cheese class were Tom Heath, Harold Henderson and Les. McKeown of Evergreen factory. Harold Elliott and Horace Palmer tied for the highest scoring cheese at the show. George Pollard acted as cheese judge.

Besides the regular classes of exhibits and horse racing there was a host of special attractions which held the interest of fairgoers. In the horse drawing contest the big black team owned by Mr. Leo Fry of Campbellford out-pulled other teams in the competition. The team owned by T. A. Wilson and Company of Denbigh took second place and that of J. Doyle of Marmora, third place.

Wins Fiddlers' Contest

The old-tyme fiddlers' contest was won by Delbert McComb of Bonarlaw with Delbert Sine taking second place and Lorne Hagerman, third. There was also a square dancing contest with the group composed of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Wood, of Glen Ross, Mrs. MacMullen and Eileen Demorest of Stirling, Mrs. McCaughen and Gordon Mitts and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Johnston of Bonarlaw, winning the first prize.

In the tug-of-war contest the stalwarts of Rawdon township had little difficulty in pulling the best which the village of Stirling had to offer and in two straight pulls the villagers were hoisted over the line. And the kiddies were not forgotten with bicycle races be-

Softball Games Played

Other special attractions included a softball game between Glen Ross and Corbyville with the score being tied at the end of regulations time. The two teams battled it out to a finish but play was still in progress at "going home" time.

A slow driving contest in which the contestants were required to circle the track in high gear resulted in a bit of verbal discussion before the ultimate winner was decided. The aroma of over-heated clutches was all too evident as the slow moving autos began to cross the finish line and judges were called upon to decide by smell as well as by sight. Someone said that Cecil Nelson won the slow race with his 1929 Buick.

And there were the midway concessionaires with ball tossing and other games for those who wished to try their skill as well as the ever-popular merry-go-round for the kiddies. Hamburger stands helped to look after the "inner man" while the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Guild served meals on the ground.

Life Underwriters Assoc. Praised By Guest Speaker

Members of the Belleville Life Underwriters' Association had the pleasure of hearing as their guest speaker at the September meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. at noon on Thursday, Mr. Archie W. Wensley, C.L.U. provincial vice-president of the Dominion Association and branch manager of the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Company at Barrie, Ontario. Mr. Wensley, an interesting and inspiring speaker, gave a very practical and forceful address which carried a worthwhile message to each Life Underwriter present.

In the absence of the president, Mr. D. Williams, the meeting was presided over by Mr. P. C. McGuire, C.L.U. The program was in charge of the Manufacturers' Life and present at the head table were Mr. L. Rice, Kingston, branch manager and Mr. A. G. Stackhouse, past president of the Life Underwriters of Belleville district.

Elected Secretary-Treasurer.

During the business period, Mr. J. J. Hibbard was unanimously elected secretary-treasurer. It was decided that Belleville Association members would attend the Congress sponsored by the Provincial Underwriters' Association to be held in Kingston next month at which Brockville and Kingston members would also be present.

Mr. J. J. Hibbard acted as sergeant-of-arms but found his colleagues were becoming more wary and gave him less opportunity of adding to the profits of the Association. Mrs. Hibbard very graciously acted as pianist for the occasion. Mr. McGuire announced the approaching term of study for those who wished to take the C.L.U. course and pointed out the benefits to be obtained from this three-year course.

Native of District.

Introducing the guest speaker, Mr. L. Rice said that Mr. Wensley was a native of this district. Formerly following the profession of teaching, Mr. Wensley entered the Manufacturers' Company in 1940 as a full-time agent and his success has been most pronounced until at the present time he is branch manager at Barrie.

The speaker expressed the pleasure he felt in being invited to address the Belleville Association and brought greetings from the Dominion executive. He congratulated the district on the fine showing in the membership campaign and urged renewed effort so that Belleville would merit the campaign trophy. Mr. Wensley said that every life underwriter benefited from the achievements of the Association and by being an active member shared in the ideas, energy and co-operative spirit of the organization.

Improved Methods.

Mr. Wensley discussed in detail the improvement in selling ethics, professional status and educational opportunities of underwriters since the association was formed, as a result of earnest work on the part of pioneer members and those who succeeded them.

In his address the speaker stressed the value of study on the part of each individual member. Studying creates and maintains within the underwriter, enthusiasm for his business and through study he is able to improve his selling skill and ability to serve the community more effectively, since often a small improvement in fundamentals brings about a tremendous increase in results.

Need of Study.
